7 'UNKNOWNS' LISTED AT HOME OF GRAND JUROR

Lawrence M. Raftery, Who Aided in Registration Inquiry, Charges Attempt to 'Job' Him.

SPECIAL ELECTION DEPUTIES' REPORT

Republican Nominee for Circuit Attorney Made Charge — Record Shows Names Crossed Out.

The charge that the names of seven persons who registered June 18 from the home of Lawrence M. Raftery, labor leader and member of the recent grand jury which investigated frauds in connection with that registration, were reported as "unknown" in the Election Board's recanvass of the registration, was made last night by J. Edward Gragg, Republican nominee for circuit attorney.

A Post-Dispatch reporter, consulting records of the Election Board, verified the fact that the seven names were registered from Raftery's home at 4807 Cote Brilliante avenue, in the Twenty-fifth precinct of the Twenty-second Ward, on June 18 and that the report of the two special deputy election commissioners had lines drawn through each of the seven names with the notation "unknown" opposite them.

The seven persons, "unknown," at 4807 Cote Brilliante avenue, according to the deputies' report, were Charles O'Leary, Gene Hart, Daniel Sullivan, Thomas Quinn, Edward Chase, Frank Sullivan, and George O'Leary. The name of Frank Sullivan appeared on the Board's original printed list of the registration of that precinct as "Frank Suberan," but the registration book showed it as "Sullivan." The name of George O'Leary appeared on the registration books as registered from 4808 Cote Brilliante, evidently a mistake as the even-numbered houses on that street are in another precinct.

Raftery Denies Knowledge of It.

Raftery, when seen last night by a Post-Dispatch reporter at Hotel Chase, where he was attending a dinner for members of the retiring grand jury, denied any knowledge of how the names of the seven persons came to be on the registration books and printed lists, asserting that it seemed to be an attempt to "job" him and embarass him as a grand juror.

He recalled that a few days after the June 18 registration, his wife told him that two men had called at his home asking if the seven men were not registered there. When she replied that they were not, the callers insisted they must be and left without identifying themselves. Several days later, Raftery said, a man and a woman called there and inquired of his wife about the same seven registrations, insisting that the seven must live there. His wife, he said, emphatically told them that only herself, her husband and their nine children lived there and Raftery was the only registered voter from that address.

That same evening, according to Raftery, a man called on him at home and asked if the seven were registered there, explaining that he was working for a Republican candidate in the ward. Raftery said he told him that he was the only registered voter at that address and had never heard of the other seven men.

Raftery, who is secretary of the Painters' District Council, said he did not recall the visits of the original canvassers of the precinct or the deputies who made the recanvass, but had assumed that the statements of his wife and himself to the various callers had been sufficient to "get the matter straightened out."

Gragg's Statement.

Gragg, in a prepared statement, said that the discovery of the seven "unknowns" registered from Raftery's home came about as the result of his own investigation. The deputies who recanvassed this precinct where a total of 44 names were marked "not found" or "unknown" were Victor Kunz, 3438 Dunnica street, a Republican, and George J. Reichardt, 3723 Louisiana avenue, a Democrat.

The June 18 registration lists became void after the primary election Aug. 4 and a new general registration will be held Sept. 21 to 24 inclusive for the presidential election Nov. 3.

The June term grand jury, of which Raftery was a member, began its investigation of registra-

Landon Challenges Roosevelt To Say Whether He Has Changed His Mind About Planned Economy

NRA Dead, Thanks to Supreme Court, but Spirit Lives On in Spirit of President Who Has Confessed No Error, Candidate Says in Maine.

HIGHLIGHTS OF LANDON ADDRESS IN MAINE

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12. Highlights from the address of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas tonight:

"What the NRA really undertook to do in this country was to terminate our system of free competition, and to substitute for it a system of government-created and government-protected monopolies."

"The National Recovery Act is dead, thanks to the courage and integrity of the Supreme Court. . . . The spirit of the NRA lives on. . . . But above all it lives on in the spirit of the President who has confessed no error."

"If the President has changed his mind and recognizes his errors, let him say so. Until we have such an admission of error the choice before us is clear."

"We are being taken down the road that leads to a centralized government of unlimited power."

"Planned economy is incompatible with the democratic form of government."

"It was no accident that Congress delegated its functions to the President. It was a necessity under the system he was creating."

WORKERS BUILD BARRICADES IN LETTUCE FIELD STRIKE

Pickets Jeer Non-union Employes Who Prepare to Pack Product Despite Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

SALINAS, Cal., Sept. 12.—A growing crowd of women pickets tonight jeered non-union workers who were building barricades about lettuce packing sheds preparatory to resuming operations despite a strike of 3000 organized employes.

"We are going to pack lettuce and we are going to do it soon," said Charles S. Brooks, secretary of the grower-shipper association. It was estimated 990 carloads of lettuce would mature in the fields this week. About 50 State highway patrolmen moved into the district.

Members of the fruit and vegetable workers union walked out of the packing sheds eight days ago demanding employment preference for their organization. A. S. Doss union secretary, said he would send representatives to Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Fort Worth Baltimore, St. Louis and Kansas City to tell union workers of the labor council's "unfair" listing.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—In a more aggressive speech than any he has made thus far in the campaign, Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight hit out directly at President Roosevelt and demanded a return to the system of free competition.

The Republican nominee, bringing the Maine campaign to a close before a rally of 15,000 voters in the Municipal Stadium here, directed his attack at two conspicuous New Deal failures and heaped upon the administration in Washington blame not only for continued large-scale unemployment in this country, but also for the desperate plight of Europe and the world at large.

A pea-soup fog hung over the stadium so thick that spectators in the distant bleachers could scarcely be seen. As is his custom, Gov. Landon read his speech, varying hardly a word from his prepared manuscript. While he sought to put greater oratorical emphasis upon certain phrases, his voice was monotonous in character and the audience was not overly responsive.

Landon showed extreme annoyance shortly after he had begun to read from his manuscript at the antics of newspaper photographers who were perched on a raised platform almost on a level with the flag-draped dais on which the speaker stood. After whispered admonitions to the photographers, Landon finally paused and ordered them down, the audience joining with boos and shouts of "Down! Down!" The photographers obeyed.

Governor's First Target.

The Kansas Governor took as his first target the NRA. The purpose of the Recovery Act, said Landon, was to "terminate our system of free competition and to substitute for it a system of Government-created and Government-protected monopolies." If it had not been for the courage and integrity of the Supreme Court, the Kansas Governor declared, the American system, "under which the humblest citizen can still rise to the highest office in the world, the presidency of the United States," would have been destroyed.

The second target at which Landon directed his fire was the world economic conference of June, 1933. Blame for failure of that conference Landon placed directly on President Roosevelt. Sketching in briefly the background of the 1933 conference to reverse "the trend toward economic nationalism and war," Landon launched into an attack on the President.

"That great opportunity was lost," he said. "It was lost because the President of the United States turned his back upon this international co-operative effort.

"That was the time we abandoned the true foundation of world peace. Since then conditions have become steadily worse. Today Europe is an armed camp; each nation feverishly rearming."

Although he attacked the President and denounced the chief New Deal recovery measures, Landon's speech, as on his previous tour through the East, consisted for the most part of broad generalizations.

Some Federal Regulation.

Throughout his talk tonight he developed, as he did a month ago in his speech at West Middlesex, Pa., his philosophy of government. The duty of government, in the Landon view, is that of umpire-arbitrator, to see that the rules of the competitive game are observed by all sides. But here he went further than he did on his earlier Eastern tour. Then he insisted that the right of the states to regulate and referee was paramount over that of the Federal government. Tonight he said that, as conditions in the country became "more complex," certain Federal regulation was necessary.

Although the NRA is dead, the nominee said, its "spirit" lives on. "It lives on in the efforts of this administration to get around the decisions of the Supreme Court. It lives on in this administration's 1936 platform. It lives on in the recent public utterances of the President and his spokesmen. But above all it lives on in the spirit of the President, who has confessed no error—who has let it be clearly known that he considered it would be a catastrophe if the American farmer should 'once more become a lord on his own farm.' If this does not mean that the present administration wants to establish government domination of industry and agriculture, what does it mean? If the President has changed his mind and recognizes his errors, let him sa. so. Let him say so in plain

HITLER DECLARES GERMANY NEEDS PART OF RUSSIA

"If We Had the Urals and the Ukraine, Nazis Would Be Swimming in Surplus Prosperity."

TELLS THRONG THAT NATION MUST LIVE

"Problem Must Be Solved and There Is No Such Thing as Saying It Cannot Be Done."

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 12.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler looked toward the rich agricultural lands of Russia and warned today that Germany would be ready to drive back any invasion by Soviet armies.

While war planes roared overhead, he told his audience of thousands of cheering workers:

"If we had the Urals, if we possessed the Ukraine, National Socialist Germany would be swimming in surplus prosperity."

"Revolution of Discipline."

Previously he had declared, "we must look after the welfare of 68,000,000 people."

"Bolshevists and Jews excuse the chaos in Russia by saying they had war and revolution," he said, "we had war, too—we stood against 26 nations. Destroying everything in revolution might have given us an opportunity to ask you, in noble discipline, to set yourself the task of building it all up again. But I was determined to destroy nothing. Ours was a revolution of discipline for improvement of life.

"We have work for generations to come. With the tremendous effort we reclaim a few thousands of acres from swamp and sea, and yet behold the Bolshevist Jews who, with 18 times more soil than Germany, are still unable to feed Russia.

"Such colossal failures they turned out to be!

"Moscow invites the world to inauguration of its subway. We build subways as a matter of fact, along with any work. While Moscow was building 11 kilometers (nearly seven miles) of subway, we built 7000 kilometers (about 4375 miles) of motor roads.

"But only a nation well armed against attack could successfully continue such constructive work."

Germany's Problem.

Referring to surplus land and materials in Soviet Russia, he said:

"I am not in the fortunate position of the Soviet Jews. Nevertheless, Germany's problem must be solved.

"There is no such thing as saying it cannot be done.

"Germany must live."

"The nation," he said, pleading for patience and determination, "thank God, lives longer than one generation."

Turning his talk directly to the workers he said:

"I could raise your wages to astronomical heights with three paper factories, my dear German workers, I could do it."

This remark, apparently referring to inflation of the currency, he followed with:

"To raise really your buying power I need 10,000 new German enterprises."

Talk to Young Nazis.

Earlier Hitler had continued the anti-Bolshevik and anti-Jew campaigns of his subalterns. Speaking before 50,000 cheering young Nazis, he said of Russia:

"Let him carry his Soviet star, we will conquer with the sign of the swastika."

(Soviet Russia's emblem contains a five-pointed star, while the Nazi insignia is the red swastika.)

"If the hour ever comes when our old adversary makes an attempt upon us," he cried, "you will be standing beside, behind and before me and will help me fight."

The youths packed the Nurnberg stadium.

"When I look upon you I realize I have not fought in vain. You are finer youth than Germany ever had before. You have the good fortune to be witness to a great period," he said.

"When I think of my own youth, it seems empty compared with yours. Now the youth has arisen, filled with a new faith," he said.

Before making his speech, Hitler descended from his rostrum and walked back and forth among the ranks of the representatives of the 6,000,000 uniformed members of his youth movements throughout the country. Here and there he stopped to clap a lad on a shoulder and speak a few words of commendation.

The war planes flew in formations as a prelude to the war maneuvers scheduled for Monday.

INCREASE IN PAY IS REFUSED BY STEEL COMPANY

Carnegie-Illinois President Says It Would Jeopardize Successful Operation of Plant.

U. S. STEEL BACKS ITS SUBSIDIARY

Workers to Meet in Pittsburgh Tomorrow—Many Have Requested 10 Pct. Wage Rise.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 12.—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation notified representatives of its 90,000 employes today the management has concluded that "a wage increase should not be granted at this time." President Benjamin F. Fairless made this statement in a letter replying to "the many requests" for higher pay.

He asserted the company "is unable to see at this time how any increase may be granted without jeopardizing the successful operation of the business."

Fairless declared a 10 per cent wage increase would "take almost all the profit earned by U. S. Steel in the first six months of this year."

Company's Argument.

He went into detail explaining the financial operations of the corporation and asked: "Would you feel then that one of your first obligations was to raise the preferred dividend rate to the figure that we are obligated to pay, or would you forget your stockholders and grant a 10 per cent wage increase and go back practically to a no-profit basis for the operations in first six months? The answer that some of us might make would be 'let us forget the stockholders. People who can invest money in stocks have money!' That isn't the case . . There are, of course, some of us who can afford to invest and lose, but in the days preceding 1929 you and I and the great rank and file of the people who constitute the backbone of this country, were buying stocks. They couldn't afford to lose. Many of them did—of our employes, 53,648 are stockholders.

Preferred stockholders, he said, had received only 50 cents a quarterly for the last three and one-half years, instead of the $1.75 to which they are entitled.

The president wrote that higher selling prices for steel, which might provide cash for a wage increase, might also affect sales, he added: "Management feels that it would be better to permit the uncertainties in the industrial picture to be resolved into facts before steel prices are generally raised to a more representative level."

He invited the employe representatives to show how the increase "might be accomplished." At least one group, representing 10,000 workers at the Homestead, Pa., plant immediately asked for a conference to discuss wages.

Backed by U. S. Steel.

A spokesman for the United States Steel Corporation, of which Carnegie-Illinois is a subsidiary, said the letter reflected the attitude of the corporation toward wage scales in its other subsidiaries employing about 200,000 men.

A general convention of employe representatives of Carnegie-Illinois, many units of which have submitted requests for a 10 per cent wage increase will assemble here Monday.

A delegation demanding a national wage adjustment scale, a 25 per cent wage increase and a 40-hour week failed to obtain an audience at the corporation's office Wednesday. The company asserted the delegates had not been authorized by the men to act.

STOVE EXPLOSION INJURES SIX ON PURDUE TEAM

Fumes of Gasoline Used to Remove Tape from Football Players' Ankles, Possible Cause.

By the Associated Press.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Sept. 12.—Six Purdue University football players suffered painful burns late today when a heating stove in their shower room exploded. Fumes from gasoline used to remove tape from the players' feet and ankles, caused the explosion, a university employe suggested. Other players quickly extinguished the flames, and the injured were sent to a hospital.

Those burned are: Carl Dahlbeck, guard, Lyndonville, Vt.; Tom McGannon, halfback, Evansville, Ind.; Lowell Decker, fullback, Reading, Mich.; Pat Malaska, halfback, Crawfordsville, Ind.; James Maloney, fullback, Oak Park, Ill., and John Drake, fullback, Chicago.

REBELS TAKE SAN SEBASTIAN; ITS DEFENDERS FLEE WHEN KEY FORT IS CAPTURED

WIN NORTH SPAIN SECTOR AFTER 7-WEEK FIGHT

Trucks and Boats Carry Loyalist Forces, Part to France, Part to Bilbao Where Another Stand Is Planned.

SOME THROW AWAY RIFLES IN FLIGHT

Decision to Abandon City Reached Just Before Expiration of Fascist Ultimatum Threatening to Blow It to Pieces.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Sept. 12.—Government defenders abandoned the seaport of San Sebastian to the Fascists tonight.

The Fascist forces, with Irun captured a week ago, thus achieved the objective of their seven weeks of fighting—control of the vital Bay of Biscay sector contiguous to the French border.

The Fascist fighting men under Gen. Emilio Mola poured into the city in the afternoon, disdaining scattered sniping by a handful of Government militiamen who had not joined in the retreat.

The municipal Governor, Antonio Ortega, who had vowed "San Sebastian will never be burned," stuck to his post to the last minute. His plan was to flee with other Government officials aboard a yacht to Bilbao, which is still nominally in Government hands.

Some Go to Bilbao.

Hundreds of militiamen were packed into trucks and sent on the road to Bilbao, about 50 miles west of San Sebastian, where the Government forces promised to make a stand.

The retreating militiamen of the Government left the city in headlong flight after Fascist troops stormed Fort Santa Barbara—the key to San Sebastian's defenses.

Other thousands of Government troops left aboard freighters, fishing smacks and motorboats.

Striving desperately to change the rout of the militiamen into a semblance of order, Basque nationalists, with revolvers drawn, guarded street intersections.

Some Throw Away Rifles.

The fleeing soldiers ran up and down the streets, some still carrying their rifles, others throwing away everything in their haste to get out of the city.

Here and there a militiaman carried a wounded comrade on his back as he hurried toward the gates of the city.

Government officials, however, estimated that several thousand officials would remain in the city.

The sudden decision to abandon the city was reached a few hours before the expiration of a Fascist ultimatum to "blow the city to pieces," if it did not surrender.

The Government gunboat No. 3, fired a dozen three-inch shells into Fort Guadalupe which the Fascists last week captured from the Government defenders of Irun. Then the gunboat turned and headed for Bilbao under forced draft.

Anarchists Fail to Fire City.

At 10 p. m., anarchists among the Government defenders had failed to make good a threat to set fire to San Sebastian.

Most of the 3000 anarchists already had fled the city, after Basque Nationalists threatened to shoot them if they attempted burning or pillaging. Gasoline cans, deposited by anarchists at various points in the city, were emptied into sewers by the Basques.

The Government forces destroyed food stores as they fled, but issued what they called "requisition checks" to storekeepers.

Gov. Ortega said that he attempted to negotiate with the insurgent Basques of Navarre Province, but that the negotiations broke down when Gen. Mola demanded the unconditional surrender of the city.

Ortega protested "in the name of

CLARA KATHRYN VAN HORN

GIRL GETS LEGION OF VALOR MEDAL FOR SAVING TWO LIVES

Presentation Made to Kathryn Van Horn by President Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—For "thinking and acting fast" in saving the lives of two playmates, Kathryn Van Horn, a 12-year-old girl of White Cottage, O., received a medal of valor and a toy Mickey Mouse from President Roosevelt today.

The medal was the first youth award of the Army and Navy Legion of Valor for the "most heroic act during the year." The girl saved Gerald Nixon and Raymond Kelly last Feb. 3, by throwing herself in their path and upsetting their sled as they coasted down an icy hill toward an approaching train.

The President said he felt highly honored in presenting the medal to the girl "because you are the first person to win it in the United States. There are lots of other reasons, one of which is because we in our lives have to think and act very fast at certain times, and it is a mighty good thing when one starts in at an early age to think and act fast when things have to be done." Still another reason he was proud, he said, was that he judged from the name Van Horn that the girl came from "old Dutch stock, the same as I do."

WOMAN DOCTOR ENDS LIFE; KEPT CHART OF MELANCHOLY

Elinor Edgar, New York Specialist In Women's Nervous Ailments, 'Incurable Depressive.'

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Leaving behind a chart tracing the "continued growth of her melancholy," Dr. Elinor Edgar, 36 years old, unmarried, specialist in women's nervous ailments, committed suicide today in her Park avenue apartment.

Dr. Edgar turned on six gas burners in the kitchen after blowing out the pilot light. William Dunn, elevator operator, found the body.

Dr. Edgar had among her patients some of the wealthiest and most socially prominent women in New York. She treated them for melancholy, nervous diseases and other afflictions of high-pressure living.

Police say she kept a medical chart the last 48 hours of her life, noting her symptoms as she sank lower in melancholy. Her reactions to her own despondency and her realization that she was an "incurable depressive," were listed on the chart, police said.

She left a note to her sister, Mrs. Louise See, Orange, N. J., police said, stating she was "suffering from extreme melancholy and recognized her case as desperate." Police also said she hinted she feared she was going insane.

LOURDES, France, Sept. 12.—More than 100,000 persons, including World War veterans from several countries, massed today in a peace pilgrimage to the famous Lourdes Grotto not far from the frontier of embattled Spain.

Masses and prayers were said by 15 bishops.

BLUM GOING TO LILLE TO TRY TO END TEXTILE MILL STRIKE

French Premier to Make Final Attempt to Get 30,000 Workers Back on Job.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Premier Leon Blum decided tonight to go to Lille tomorrow in a final attempt to get 30,000 textile strikers back to work.

Blum also was to confer with spokesmen of employers and workers, who have walked out in various plants throughout the country, demanding wage increases and immediate application of the 40-hour week law passed by parliament.

Roger Salengro, minister of interior, persuaded the Lille strikers to evacuate the factories, pending further arbitration of their difficulties. Late in the day, however they decided to reoccupy the mills.

At Douai and Marseilles, striking metal workers remained in the plants on strike, "while metal workers at Lille postponed a strike decision "because of the difficulties such a sudden move might provoke."

KING EDWARD DISCOVERS FAVORITE SONG IN VIENNA

Tips Singer $188;; Buys Shorts and Changes Into Them in Store.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Sept. 12.—King Edward VIII of England, has a favorite song which deals with the rustic love life of Austrian peasants. He heard it sung in a night club and demanded three encores after which he tipped the performer 1000 schillings (about $188.50).

The song, in dialect, refers to the lower Austrian village of Langenlois near Vienna. Copies displayed in music stall windows and labeled "The King's Favorite" were almost sold out tonight.

The king, meanwhile, bought another pair of leather shorts and changed into them while in a store.

Fifty girls tonight serenaded him in his hotel and wound up with "God Save the King." King Edward waved to them from the balcony of his room.

FIRE IN PARIS OPERA HOUSE

Offices Wrecked But Theater Hall Is Undamaged.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—(Sunday)—Fire damaged the old Paris Opera House early today burning for nearly two hours before it was brought under control. The offices and the back of the building were wrecked but the theater hall was intact. An electrical short circuit is thought to have started the fire.

Workmen had been making repairs and alterations in the opera house, which had been closed during the summer.

Young Roosevelt, a junior at Harvard, will take the instructions in naval science given the reservists. He is not a member of the reserve, and is traveling as a guest.

ITALY TO ENLARGE MILITARY FORCES; NEW FUNDS VOTED

Cabinet Also Approves an Average 8 Pct. Increase for 650,000 Government Employes.

PERMANENT ARMY FOR AFRICAN EMPIRE

Reason for Additional Arms Appropriations Given as 'Necessities of International Situation.'

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 12.—Extraordinary military appropriations to meet "necessities of the international situation" were voted today by the Italian cabinet under direction of Premier Mussolini.

The cabinet, which also approved an average 8 per cent salary increase to 650,000 Government employes, adopted various provisions for strengthening Italy's armed forces, including a program for a permanent colonial army in the new African empire. A force of 150,000 workmen in Ethiopia, all enrolled in the Black Shirt militia, was announced.

The cabinet did not make public the amount of the new appropriations. The prominent manner in which they were referred to in a Government communique, however, coupled with the fact that army, navy and air chieftains sat in on the sessions at which they were drafted, led observers to predict they were for large sums.

Raw Materials Campaign.

Dictator Mussolini told the cabinet Italy's campaign for self-sufficiency in raw materials "will be continued most vigorously."

Galeazzo Ciano, Mussolini's son-in-law and Foreign Minister, reported that Italy was rebuilding its foreign trade structure damaged by sanctions under this policy:

"In all cases where Italy is not a debtor nation, the exchange must be completely equal," he said. "Whenever Italy is the debtor, the exchange must be so effected so as to leave in our favor a margin advantage, allowing us gradually to thaw out frozen commercial debts."

The general commission for war manufactures, Mussolini asserted, now controls more than 1000 auxiliary manufacturing plants, most of them capable of supplying war materials.

Follows Moves of Other Nations.

Italy's increase in armament expenditures follows close on the announcement of Germany's increase in military training periods from one to two years and France's move to purchase $910,000,000 in planes, tanks, guns and armored cars—an effort to increase French armed efficiency.

French statisticians last month estimated Europe's military power at 6,000,000 trained men, including: Germany 1,365,000; Italy 1,250,000, Russia 1,200,000, France 654,000. Mussolini, however, in a recent speech said he could mobilize 8,000,000 Italians "on a simple order" if necessary.

SECRET SERVICE AGENTS SEEK $1,000,000 IN BOGUS BILLS

Spurious Money Thought to Have Been Hidden by "Count" Victor Lustig, Now in Prison.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—After the reappearance of bogus currency produced by two counterfeiters, now in prison, Secret Service agents tonight sought for the hiding place of an estimated $1,000,000 in spurious but almost perfect $20 bills.

Government men said the bills were hidden by Robert V. Miller, alias "Count" Victor Lustig, when he and William Watts, skillful engraver, were sentenced to long terms in prison last year.

Four men were arrested this week charged with passing counterfeit bills that were so nearly perfect that Federal agents agreed they could have been produced only by Lustig and Watts. None of the prisoners was regarded as companions of Lustig, and Secret Service men expected little help from them in tracing the source of the bills. Approximately $2,000,000 of counterfeit currency was produced before Lustig and Watts were apprehended.

Praises Roosevelt on Constitution.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 12. — President Roosevelt was praised as the "inflexible supporter" of the Constitution in Gov. Harry Horner's proclamation, issued today, designating next Thursday as "Constitution Day" and the week opening tomorrow as "Constitution Week." "President Franklin Delano Roosevelt * * * rendered it an immeasurable service when he led the successful fight for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment after others had failed."

Text of Gov. Landon's Speech in Maine

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.

FOLLOWING is the text of Gov. Landon's address here tonight.

We are meeting here on the eve of a great victory. It will be a victory not for Maine alone. It will be a victory for the nation.

"As Maine goes, so goes the nation."

That means something this year. It means something in every State in the Union. It means just as much in Kansas as it does here.

That is why I am with you tonight. That is why I am so happy to be here to close your notable and successful campaign.

I wish to congratulate the Republicans and their Democratic and independent allies who have united in nominating your Republican state ticket, and your Republican candidates for Congress and in renominating Senator White for the Senate of the United States. In both houses of Congress, the people are entitled to be represented by men of integrity and ability and experience. And the people of Maine will be so represented when they elect their Republican candidates for the Senate and House of Representatives. They will be represented by true Americans endowed with the New England conscience.

Americans everywhere are waiting for the majorities that you will pile up for the Republican candidates next Monday. You will start a victory parade that will span the nation—that will lift the hearts of millions everywhere—be they Republicans, independents or Democrats.

You point the way to success in November.

Tonight I am going to consider the relationship of government to business. This is a question that vitally concerns all of us. For the relation between government and business affects the very character of our government. It determines the kind of government we have in Washington. It can mean a continuation of free and representative government, or it can mean greater and greater authority for the Chief Executive.

In this country, government in its relation to business always followed the principles underlying a free enterprise system. Under this system, Americans have been free. They have been free, provided they did not infringe upon the similar rights of others, to do anything that would bring them an honest and profitable livelihood. They have been free to plan for their own future, knowing that their goal was limited only by their own ability. They have been free to plan for their children, confident in the knowledge that in America there is no handicap of birth or class distinction.

Protection of Freedom.

Protecting this freedom has been one of the major problems of our Government. In the early days of our Republic most of the laws regulating business were enacted by the states. As the years went by conditions became more complex and gradually the Federal Government became active in protecting the economic freedom and the welfare of our citizens. As a result, we have our laws on pure foods, public health, banking, transportation, workmen's compensation, safety appliances, monopolies and unfair trade practices, and more recently our laws regulating public utilities and the issuance of securities.

This is an imposing list. It has marked America as a progressive nation. For every one of these laws was designed to protect the public welfare and preserve equality of opportunity. It is true not all these laws are perfect and not all of them have been enforced as they should be. But they were based on the philosophy we have always followed—the philosophy of economic freedom. Not one of them has weakened the fundamental character of our Government.

This was always the relationship of Government to business before the present administration took office. At no time did the Federal Government usurp the right of the states to regulate industry and commerce within their own borders At no time did it attempt to direct and manage business.

"Then Came the NRA!"

Then came NRA! With the enactment of this measure in 1933, our Government, without mandate of the people, adopted a new and completely different philosophy. When I say "new," I mean new only in the sense that it was new to this country. It was a philosophy well known under the autocratic governments of Europe. It was foisted upon us in the misery of the depression by a Federal administration that used the emergency to absorb the powers of the states—an administration that assumed we had suddenly outgrown American institutions.

This philosophy decreed that prices should be regulated, not by demand and supply, but by Government edict; that wages and hours of employes should be fixed, not by free and fair negotiations under rules assuring equality, but by officials in Washington; that the sort of competition which must be fostered, as the life-blood of free enterprise, should in future be prohibited by law.

This was a philosophy which denied that the more we produce, the more we can have; that the more efficiently we produce, the higher will be our standard of living. It declared that the existing facilities of production must not be increased.

Where would we be today if we had adopted this philosophy in 1890? or in 1900; how many automobiles and telephones would there be in the country? How many moving picture theaters? How many radios?

This philosophy was sold to us in 1933, as a temporary measure, when we were too troubled to realize what was happening. Many business men then supported the experiment. Some saw in it escape from the rigors of competition. Others selfishly welcomed relaxation of legal restrictions on monopoly. They failed to see that it marked the establishment of centralized control by government over industry.

In practice the National Industrial Recovery Act was a law which tended to protect the large, prosperous and well established concerns, at the expense of the ambitious young man, trying to start his own business—it was a law which tended to make it impossible for smaller concerns ever to compete effectively with larger ones—or for new enterprises ever to gain a foothold in fields already occupied. Like the recently enacted so-called surplus tax bill, it hung a millstone around the neck of the small business man.

Recall what happened under the NRA with its hundreds of codes. Only the big corporations were able to keep a staff of men in Washington to present their views at the code hearings. The little fellow had neither the time nor the money to make frequent trips to Washington. He could not spend days around Government offices trying to keep up with all the changing rules and regulations. As a result, he never could be sure he was not breaking a ruling laid down by a bureaucrat—a ruling which was frequently made overnight and without public hearing, and which nuder this administration had the force of law.

Government Aided Monopolies.

What the NRA really undertook to do in this country was to terminate our system of free competition, and to substiutte for it a system of Government-created and Government-protected monopolies. It is not difficult to see what inevitably happens when this doctrine is followed.

First the Government creates and fosters a monopoly. Then it finds that it is against the public interest to leave such a monopoly, even though regulated, in private hands. In consequence, the Government decides to take over the monopoly.

It is a well-defined movement. The road it takes is easy to follow. It is the road that leads away from democracy.

The NRA was the beginning in America of the movement which, throughout the world, has been sweeping aside private enterprise in favor of government control—a movement which has been substituting arbitrary personal authority for constitutional self-government.

But—you may say—the NRA is dead.

True enough. The National Industrial Recovery Act is dead, thanks to the courage and integrity of the Supreme Court.

But the spirit of the NRA lives on. It lives on in recently enacted laws. It lives on in the efforts of this administration to get around the decisions of the Supreme Court. It lives on in this administration's 1936 platform. It lives on in the recent public utterances of the President and his spokesmen.

But, above all, it lives on in the spirit of the President who has confessed no error—who has let it be clearly known that he considered it would be a catastrophe if the American farmer should "once more become a lord on his own farm."

If this does not mean that the present administration wants to establish governmental domination of industry and agriculture, what does it mean? If the President has changed his mind and recognizes his errors, let him say so. Let him say so in plain language. Until we have such an admission of error, the choice before us is clear.

Contrasting Systems.

On one side is the system of free competitive enterprise, which while not perfect, at least does not dole out opportunity according to a governmental yardstick—a system under which this country is still a freer, a happier place to live in than any other country in the world—a system under which the humblest citizen can still rise to the highest office in the world, the Presidency of the United States.

On the other side is a system under which the minutest doings of every citizen are scrutinized and regulated; under which the privacy of our homes is invaded—our fields lie idle by governmental edict—and across the length and breadth of America a million signs spring up "By Order of the Government, Keep Off."

There is no half-way house between these two systems. We have only to look at our history of the past four years to know that this is true. For instance, what has happened on our farms? The Government restricted the production of cotton. Farmers turned to growing peanuts. There were too many peanuts. The Government restricted the growing of peanuts. The farmers turned to raising potatoes and the first thing we knew, it was a criminal offense to grow potatoes unless a license was secured from the Government.

That is the record. That is what must happen once we start the snow-balling tendency of a Government planned economy.

We are being taken down a road that gets steeper and steeper. The farther we go, the harder it is to turn back. We are being taken down the road that leads to a centralized government of unlimited power.

The Republican party rejects this policy. It denies that our present system has failed. It refuses to follow the present administration in smashing the rights of the states. It opposes the creation of a system of organized authority wielded by one man.

We pledge ourselves to maintain a free competetive system, with a strict, impartial enforcement of Federal laws. Government must protect the average man against the aggressive exploitation by the strong. We recognize that in the past we have been too lax—that at times we have even appeared to forget that under modern conditions, a free enterprise system will not automatically maintain itself—that unless government is constantly on guard to defend competition against abuse, a free enterprise system tends to become a tangle of vested interest and rigid prices.

But the solution is not to abandon a free enterprise system for a system of government monopolies.

The solution is to free the forces of competition—to stamp out unfair trade practices and monopoly. This will allow the American people to resume their steady march of progress. It will restore the system which for generations has given Americans the highest standard of living of any people in the world.

Conditions Across the Sea.

We have but to look across the waters to see the consequences of Government domination over economic life. Step by step living standards have fallen. Productivity has decreased. Human beings have become more and more dependent upon a government which in turn has become less and less able to take care of them.

That is one reason why the Republican party stands squarely across the road down which we are being driven by the present administration.

Planned economy is incompatible with the democratic form of government. It must lead to ever increasing executive authority. If a central government at Washington is to direct all the infinite variety of factors which go to make up our nation's business, it stands to reason that this can not be done without extreme concentration of quickly moving power in the executive.

It was no accident that Congress delegated its functions to the President. It was a necessity under the system he was creating, a system which goes far beyond anything ever suggested by those liberals who maintain a strong central government is necessary to meet present day social problems and to control monopoly and special privilege. Power of this magnitude is dangerous from the economic as well as from the political point of view. No man's judgment is sufficiently infallible to justify giving him control—either in private business or in government—over the standard of living, the savings, and the destiny of his fellow citizens. When the decision of one man affects an entire country, a wrong decision means national disaster.

Trend Means War.

The Republican party opposes unlimited executive power for another reason. This reason is that the world-wide trend away from democracy means but one thing—that one thing is war. Any weakening of democracy here, means the final rout of democracy everywhere. The trend against democracy must be stopped at once if the world is to escape a major catastrophe. I doubt if civilization can survive another war.

Even if we manage to keep from being directly involved, the consequences for us and our children are fearful to contemplate.

There is no greater, no more important responsibility resting upon Government today, than the preservation of peace.

This nation had one great opportunity to lead the way toward world peace and economic security. In June, 1933, the nations of the world were assembled at the London economic conference for the specific purpose of reversing the trend toward economic nationalism and war. At the time the world was still thinking in terms of disarmament. Our Government had taken a leading role in preparing for this conference. The outlook for success was favorable.

Great Opportunity Lost.

That great opportunity was lost. It was lost because the President of the United States turned his back upon this international cooperative effort.

That was the time we abandoned the true foundation of world peace. Since then conditions have become steadily worse. Today Europe is an armed camp; each nation feverishly rearming.

We must return to sound principles. This will not be easy. In many ways we have already become pampered by special privilege, and dependent upon Government where we should be dependent upon ourselves. Our minds have become confused by alluring slogans and attractive but unfulfillable promises.

But business men, salaried workers, wage earners and farmers now recognize that centralized government management of their affairs has failed. They recognize that special privilege to one group merely creates a demand for special privileges by every other group able to exert political pressure.

The temper of the American public is no longer complacent. It has definitely set its face against monopoly and unfair trade practices. The pledge in our platform is not mere words. It does not mean to me fruitless inquisitions that impede recovery and delay re-employment.

To me it means not only the steady relentless enforcement of existing laws but the strengthening of those laws. And it means the enactment of such additional legislation as is necessary to put an end to monopoly, unfair trade practices and all special privilege. Only if we follow this course can we escape the system of government regulated monopolies sponsored by this administration.

If you do not believe this, you had better not vote for me. For I am pledged by the Republican platform to save our system of free enterprise.

Let me restate the issues:

Do you want the Government prying into every little detail of our business lives?

Do we want the Government forbidding us to plant what we want in our own fields?

Or:

Do we want to be free to plan for our future?

Do we want free government in America?

MADRID TELLS ENVOYS THEY SHOULD RETURN TO SPAIN

Says They Will Not Be Recognized If They Remain on French Border.

By the Associated Press.

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, France, Sept. 12.—Daniel Garcia Mansilia, Argentine ambassador to Spain, said tonight that the Madrid Government had informed diplomats they must return to Spanish soil if they wish to be recognized as accredited to the Spanish Government.

The foreign diplomats established embassies and legations in Saint Jean de Luz shortly after their governments had evacuated their nationals from battle areas.

Among the ambassadors to Spain now at Saint Jean de Luz is the American representative, Claude G Bowers. The German, Italian, and Portuguese diplomatic headquarters recently were moved from Madrid to Alicante.

French authorities closed this port to foreign ships bringing refugees from Spain. They were being taken, instead, to Bordeaux.

Landon Asks Roosevelt's Stand on Planned Economy

language. Until we have such an admission of error, the choice before us is clear."

Sidesteps "Quoddy."

Landon's last minute decision to invade Maine was taken in order to assure a Republican majority at the polls on Monday which, it is hoped, will demonstrate to the country at large the strength of the Republican candidate. Landon passed up the opportunity afforded by his presence in Maine to attack what is generally agreed to be the most conspicuous New Deal blunder—the President's Passamaquoddy power project.

Quoddy has been the object of unceasing Republican attack beginning long before the campaign. But here they still are hopeful that the tidal power scheme will ultimately restore communities left stranded when fisheries and other industries declined. Senator Wallace H. White, Republican, who is seeking re-election, has stayed away from the Quoddy issue insofar as possible and apparently Gov. Landon felt that it was politically wise to follow the same course. White's opponent is Maine's popular Democratic Governor, Louis J. Brann, who is expected to run far ahead of the Roosevelt strength in Monday's balloting.

To have attacked Quoddy might have jeopardized White's chances and Landon took the cautious political course, dealing with "regimentation" rather than waste, the theme he has emphasized elsewhere. Republican critics in recent months have singled out Quoddy as the chief example, along with the Florida ship canal, of New Deal extravagance.

First Real Applause.

The first real applause came at Landon's tribute to the Supreme Court for its "courage and integrity" in bringing an end to the NRA. Again the Governor drew a burst of applause when he declared that the Republican party opposed unlimited executive power. A patter of applause greeted the candidate's declaration that "no man's judgmen is sufficiently infallible to justify giving him control, either in private business or in government over the standard of living, the savings, and the destiny of his fellow-citizens."

Throughout Landon's speech fog wraiths swirled around the candidate, dimming the powerful floodlights.

At the end of his speech Landon demanded, "Do we want the Government prying into every little detail of our business lives?" "No!" shouted the crowd in the most vigorous outburst of the entire address.

"Or do we want free government in America?" Landon demanded and the crowd yelled out a lusty "Yes." Brief applause and cheering followed, Landon waved his arm in a random salute and the Republican nominee for President had brought the Maine campaign to a close. He looked drawn and tired.

Landon will stay in Portland as a guest of Senator Frederick Hale until Monday morning, when he will start back to Kansas with his party, making a series of back platform addresses on his return as on his trip to Portland. A day of rest has been scheduled for Landon for tomorrow.

Brann Greets Landon.

Gov. Brann was ready to greet Landon when the Kansan's special train reached Portland. While the two governors talked in Landon's private car townspeople lined the strets waiting fo ra parade which the Republican nomiene was to lead. A crowd estimated at 10,000 jammed about the railway station waiting for Landon to appear.

The Kansas Governor did not reach the stadium until 8:50, only 10 minutes before he was scheduled to go on a nation-wide radio network. There was a mild demonstration at his arrival which immediately subsided with a patter of handclapping. The Governor wore a dark topcoat and dark felt hat. A few minutes before Landon was to go on the air Senator White assumed the chairmanship of the rally and hailed the nominee as "a great leader coming from a typical prairie State."

Landon took his place to the accompaniment of cheering which lasted for several minutes. It had not died away when he began to read his address.

NEW CHARGE D'AFFAIRES REPLACES SPANISH ENVOY

Consul Temporarily in Charge at Washington Pending Naming of New Ambassador.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The Spanish Embassy announced tonight that Enrique Carlos de la Casa, Consul at San Francisco, had been named charge d'affaires of the Embassy, succeeding Ambassador Luis Calderon, resigned. Embassy attaches said that Ambassador Calderon, who resigned his post when Communists entered the Spanish Cabinet, left the capital immediately.

Attaches said they understood that De la Casa would remain in charge of the Embassy pending the expected appointment of Fernando de Los Rios, still in Spain, as the new Ambassador of the Loyalist Government.

High Food Prices Boost WPA Wages

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Sept. 12.—Paul D. Shriver, state WPA director, said today he had ordered an increase in "security earnings" of approximately 10 per cent for workers on all Federal Works projects in Colorado, effective October 1.

The pay increases, Shriver said, will be granted because of increased cost of food and other essentials.

REPORT TO POPE SAYS MOVIES ARE 40 PCT. 'MORALLY BETTER'

Observer at World Film Exposition Finds Improvement Since Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 12.—The world's moving pictures are 40 per cent "morally better" than they were last year, Pope Pius XI was told today by Giuseppe Cassinis, his representative at the International Moving Picture Exposition in Venice.

It was the first time the Holy See had had an official observer at the exhibition.

Cassinis, in his report to the Pope, now at Castel Gandolfo, said the films of all nations, including the United States, showed 60 per cent "morally good." Last year, the exposition's showings were considered by unofficial church observers to be only 20 per cent in this classification.

Recently the Pope, in an encyclical, ordered organized campaign by the church to clean up the movies.

Flying Boat, Aeolus, Catapulted From Mother-Ship at Bermuda, Reaches Port.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12. — Capt. Hans Werner von Engel and his crew of three men flew the Lufthansa Co. flying-boat, Aeolus, to the United States today from Bermuda in six hours and 14 minutes, completing a two-leg flight from the Azores.

Today's 770-mile flight ending at Port Washington, was made without incident.

"We kept the ship so close to the water that it was almost surface-boat sailing," said Capt. Von Engel. "Most of the time we flew at an altitude between 30 and 40 feet."

With the flight captain was Baron Friedrich von Buddenbrock, chief of the operating staff of the Lufthansa's South Atlantic service. He served as chief mate. The flight engineer was Otto Gruschwitz. The radio operator was H. J. Stein. What the flyers had completed was a second survey over the southern route of the North Atlantic.

On Thursday, a sister ship, the Zephir, alighted on the bay at Port Washington after a non-stop flight from the Azores where both ships were started on their ways by the motorship Schwabenland. The ship's catapult tossed the flying boats out over the water to assist them in taking off with heavy fuel loads.

Pan American Airways furnished both flights with radio directions.

Both planes and their crews will remain in New York until at least Sept. 18, when the Schwabenland will arrive to launch them out again on return flights eastward across the Atlantic.

Von Engel, 30 years old and a veteran pilot, said his radio communications throughout the journey were excellent. "An hour after we took off from the Azores, Thursday," he said, "we picked up the Pan American station at Port Washington on our radio direction finder. We had contact with it all through the night although it was not so good after daylight. From Bermuda, however, we merely followed the radio signals straight to the Hudson River. It was very simple."

INQUIRY IN WOMAN'S DEATH

Autopsy Ordered at Los Angeles; Her Letters Reported Missing.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 12.—The body of Mrs. Anna Powell Crookshank, 78 years old, was held for an autopsy tonight as police investigated circumstances surrounding her death and officers guarded her home. The guard was posted because of alleged disappearance of letters that Mrs. Crookshank had written before her death and addressed to friends.

Police said the post-mortem examination had been ordered to avoid possible controversy among her heirs as to the cause of death. A physician signed a certificate attributing death to pneumonia. Special letters of administration in Mrs. Crookshank's estate were granted today to lawyers of the widower, David Crookshank, 85, retired rancher. Crookshank tried unsuccessfully to divorce his wife three months ago, accusing her of misconduct with a 21-year-old man.

12 BLACK LEGION MEN PUT ON TRIAL FOR POOLE KILLING

Dayton Dean's Version of Crime Recounted in Court by Prosecutor at Detroit.

JURY SHOWN DINGY SCENE OF 'PLOT'

Defendants Shackled in Pairs Also Taken to Basement Room Where Meeting Was Held.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—Dayton Dean's version of the Black Legion killing of Charles A. Poole was recounted in Circuit Court today as the trial of 12 men charged with the crime got under way just four months after the shooting of the young WPA worker.

Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea told the jury the State would show the defendants plotted at a meeting in Findlater Hall to kill Poole, then abducted him and took him to a lonely country road, where Dean, a pistol in either hand, shot him to death.

McCrea's statement of the State's charge followed closely the confession of Dean, who has pleaded guilty. The prosecutor called "Colonel" Harvey Davis, one of the defendants, the leader of the plot.

He said the plot originated when Herschell Gill and Lowell Rushing, among the defendants, appealed to the Black Legion to discipline Poole, a non-member, for beating his wife. On that accusation, since proved false, McCrea charged that Davis ordered Poole's death. This decision, he said, was ratified by the defendants at a subsequent meeting.

Rope Did Not Arrive.

The prosecutor said the initial plan for "straightening out" Poole was to hang him, but that the automobile containing the rope did not arrive and Poole was shot as he gasped, "Gentlemen, there must be some mistake."

The 12 defendants, shackled in pairs, were taken to Findlater Hall before the formal opening of the trial. The jury, Circuit Judge Joseph A. Moynihan, McCrea and others accompanied them.

The dingy basement room in which the State charges the group congregated to plan the conspiracy that led to exposure of the night riding society is small, and McCrea and Chester P. O'Hara, Assistant Attorney-General, indicated they intended to stress that fact.

They said it would have been impossible for anyone there the night of the meeting not to know what was happening. Several defendants contend the meeitng was that of a political club, and that they did not hear any accusation made against Poole or the shouts of "Hang him," "Kill him," which Dean said greeted the charge.

Censorship Over Jurors.

The jury of 14, selected from more than 700 veniremen, was ordered locked up and a strict censorship of the jurors' communications with their families enforced during recesses in the trial.

The prosecution and defense, regarding the Poole killing as the principal case among the 16 crimes attributed to the Black Legion, have summoned about 150 witnesses, and expect the trial to require at least two weeks.

3 MEN HELD; TRUCKLOAD OF MUNITIONS CONFISCATED

200 Rifles and 21,500 Rounds of Ammunition Seized on Road Near Biloxi, Miss.

By the Associated Press.

BILOXI, Miss., Sept. 12.—A Coast Guardsman arrested three men today and seized 200 rifles and 21,500 rounds of ammunition which Federal authorities said were en route to a foreign country.

The men, who were charged with transporting arms, were booked as William Campbell, Atlantic City; Alexander Ritchie, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Thomas Murray, Atlantic City. Officers said Campbell was the former owner of the schooner Storm Along, which they charged once was involved in Honduran revolutions. The officers said Campbell previously had been charged with smuggling liquor and aliens and had been paroled from prison.

The weapons and ammunition were confiscated from a New Orleans-bound truck between Pascagoula and Biloxi. Included in the load seized was a 40-meter radio receiving and sending set, canned goods, furniture and chemicals.

Storm on Gulf of Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., Sept. 12.—The Central Observatory reported at 10 p. m. tonight a storm "of increasing intensity" was over the Gulf of Mexico 160 miles east-northeast of Tampico, Tamaulipas. If the storm follows its apparent course, the Observatory said, it would pass inland between Matamoros, Tamaulipas, and Soto La Marina, 150 miles south. (Matamoros is on the United States border.)

humanity" against the use of Moorish troops by the Fascists.

"World opinion has put all the atrocities on our side," Ortega declared. "It is the Moors who are going to take Sebastian. It is a crime against civilization to bring them into Spain. The Fascists condemn the atrocities of the anarchists. Between the Moors and the anarchists I prefer the anarchists."

Ortega ordered destruction of the San Sebastian radio station and the telephone exchange.

While the evacuation was at its height a few rebel planes circled over the city, but disappeared without dropping bombs.

The steamer Aloma Mendi landed about 1000 refugees at Bordeaux France tonight.

Fighting Renewed for Control of Province of Toledo.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Sept. 12. — Fighting was resumed tonight in the Talavera-Santa Olalla sector, with infantry, cavalry and planes struggling for control of the Province of Toledo. Fascist planes bombed Santa Olalla, Santa Cruz, Del Retamar Fuensalida and Torrijos in the rea rof the Government forces.

Many peasant homes were destroyed by bombs, but Government leaders said the Fascists had not gained any valuable objective.

Col. Aranda of the Fascists, the Government reported, in a "supreme effort" to break through the Government siege of Oviedo, lost possession of the strategic hill Areneros overlooking the Asturian capital.

Government reports from De Las Cruces front said militiamen were fighting their way to capture hill redoubts driving the Fascists from three lines of trenches back into the city. It was declared that the people of Oviedo had become panic-stricken, were complaining of lack of bread and water.

Moorish Saddle for Azana.

In the Province of Leon, the Government reported, its troops had captured the Ponton Mountain pass.

Red Cross workers and soldiers in Montoro and the Province of Cordoba were reported burying the dead, mostly Moors. A saddle reported to have belonged to the Moorish chieftan Mazzian was sent to President Manuel Azana as "a trophy of the glorious victory in this sector where the Government forces advanced about eight miles."

Government planes, the reports said, bombed Fascist concentrations, while Fascist planes were said to have bombed the town of El Carpio without causing damage.

Within Madrid patrols of police continued to arrest known Fascists who had taken refuge in the homes of relatives.

"Humanizing War."

The Government as its contribution to efforts "to humanize the civil war" conducted negotiations in an effort to get several hundred women and children out of the beseiged Alcazar in Toledo.

(About 1700 Fascists and their families have been besieged in the Alcazar since they fled to it at the outbreak of hostilities.)

Diplomats in Madrid were assured by the Government that the lives of the women and children would be guaranteed and that they would be taken to places of safety by Government forces.

This assurance was also given to the Fascists in the beleaguered fortress, but thus far they have refused to permit the women and children to leave.

Diplomatic quarters also were seeking guarantees that the lives of the male defenders of the fortress would be spared if they should surrender, but it was regarded as inevitable that the leaders must be tried for treason and shot if they give themselves up.

Parliament Called for Oct. 1.

As a display of renewed optimism for the populace, the Government announced tonight that the Cortes (Spanish Parliament) would be reconvened Oct. 1 "to legislate a fresh code of laws to give the Spanish workers a new place in the sun."

Well informed sources thought this decision was based on a desire to legalize as soon as possible measures adopted arbitrarily during the revolt. Most of these were aimed at placating the masses demanding increased participation in the national wealth. Chief among them are the agrarian reform measures redistributing the vast estates of former grandees and endowing committees of workers with powers of administration in virtually all forms of industry.

One of the first matters before the Chamber probably will be calling of elections to fill vacancies caused by the executions, imprisonments, and voluntary, exile of several deputies.

The "popular tribunal" tonight condemned nine civilians to death, and sentenced six to life imprisonment and seven to serve one-year terms.

EAST SIDE WPA FOREMAN BEATEN AFTER STRIKE ENDS

Dragged From Auto; Refuses to Tell Police Whether He Recognized Assailants.

Fred Campbell, foreman on the East Side WPA ditch digging job on which the workmen went on strike 10 days ago, was assaulted last night by five men who forced his automobile to the curb in the 4700 block of Bunkum road, East St. Louis, dragged him out and beat him.

Treated at Christian Welfare Hospital for bruises and abrasions of the head and body, Campbell refused to tell police anything about the attack other than to say that it was because of "WPA trouble." He refused to say whether he recognized his assailants.

The strike was ended last Tuesday after Campbell had obtained warrants against four of the leaders of the strike charging them with assaulting him. The men, who denied that they had attacked Campbell, were subsequently dismissed from the job along with 23 others for "insubordination." Leaders of the strike said that 1500 men had gone out, while WPA officials said there were about 700 strikers.

Indictments Returned.

Twenty-three misdemeanor indictments and nine felony indictments were returned by the jury as the result of its investigation into the registration and the primary election Aug. 4. The jury's final report, submitted Friday to Circuit Judge James M. Douglas, recommended further investigation of the 1934 and 1936 primaries and the river front bond issue election of Sept. 10, 1935. The Post-Dispatch disclosed evidence of fraud in the latter election during the past week.

The September term grand jury, which will continue the investigation into registration and election frauds, will be impaneled tomorrow by Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood.

MYSTERY OF SIX HEADLESS BODIES STIRS CLEVELAND

Police Seek Maniac Believed to Be Responsible for Series of Killings in Last Year.

CORONER POINTS OUT SKILL IN DISSECTION

Madman's Victims All Men but One—Latest, Still Unidentified, Found in Creek.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12.—The finding of six nude and headless bodies in Cleveland in the last 12 months—each murder unsolved—has set police on a hunt for a killer whom they suppose to be demented.

All but one of the bodies have been found in a shabby area, criss-crossed by railroad tracks and a straggling little stream called Kingsbury Run, almost at the back-door of the downtown district. Five were men, one a woman.

The first body was found a year ago; the sixth, last Thursday.

Coroner A. J. Pearse said today:

"The killer is apparently a sex maniac of the sadistic type. This is indicated by the condition of the victims.

"He definitely has expert knowledge of human anatomy. The incisions of his knife were made in each case without guesswork.

"The murders, with one exception, were committed some place other than where the bodies were found.

"While the killer obviously is obsessed and insane, he is also shrewd, works alone and is clever enough to avoid detection so far."

The Latest Killing.

The latest victim was found floating near a culvert in Kingsbury Run.

The head had been severed and has not been found. The legs had been cut off at the knees.

Police held four men for questioning tonight. One was a butcher found walking aimlessly in a field near Kingsbury Run. One was a homeless man. Another a transient and the fourth a resident of the district.

Tracing of a stained felt hat, found near the scene, indicated to investigators that the victim was a transient. Melvin Hoffman, of Bellevue, O., recognized the hat as one his mother had given "a tramp who begged clothing two weeks ago."

In comparing notes on the six murders, detectives found many similarities. In each case the bodies had been stripped of clothing. Except in the case of the woman and the last victim, the heads were found near by. The victim's clothing usually was found near the torso.

The bodies of the first two victims were found together last Sept. 23, although they had met death on different days. One of the men was identified later as Edward A. Andrasy, 28, who several years before was sentenced to a 30-day workhouse term on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The other man, about 45, was not identified.

Detective-Sergeant Bernard Wolf said Andrasky had been afraid to leave his home for several days before he disappeared. This fear never was explained by relatives.

Body in Basket.

In January, 1936, a dog barking at midnight in a vacant lot near the downtown area awakened neighbors. Police found two baskets in the lot containing the torso and the left arm of a woman identified through fingerprints as Mrs. Florence Polilla, 41. The head never was found.

All the other parts of the body were found later in a field not far away. The police could find no motive.

Two boys going fishing in June found a bundle under a willow bush beside Kingsbury Run and not far from the spot where the first two bodies were found. Investigating they uncovered a man's head. The torso was found nearby the next day. Identification never was established.

The fifth victim was found in an isolated gully in a different section. The head, wrapped in a coat, was found 40 feet away.

The man had been dead about three months. He was not identified.

Coroner Pearse said the hear was separated from the spine at the junction of two vertebrae and that the skill of a surgeon would have been needed to do the job so neatly without leaving evidence of cutting.

The man found Thursday bore all the baffling marks of the previous five victims. The head had been removed cleanly and the arms had been severed. The man was between 25 and 40 years old.

A blood-stained shirt wrapped in a newspaper was found on the Culvert over Kingsbury Run. Officers are still searching for the head and arms.

TRIAL TOMORROW FOR MAN WHO THREW PISTOL AT KING

"Ultimatum" George Andrew McMahon Sent to Home Secretary Will Be Used Against Him.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 12. — George Andrew McMahon, 32 years old, is to go on trial Monday in Old Bailey on three charges placed against him after he hurled a revolver at King Edward VIII last July 16.

Sid Donald Somervell, Attorney-General and Crown Prosecutor, is expected to present as evidence the "ultimatum" which McMahon mailed to Home Secretary Sir John Simon 14 hours before the incident. The note read, in part:

"Simon—I deeply regret the necessity of this note, but I cannot contain myself any longer. . . . For some years I have been a victim of an organized persecution by your hirelings. . . . As previous appeals to the King have been unsuccessful, I now demand full satisfaction within 14 hours. . . . In the event of your failing to do so, I will exercise my own prerogative and obtain the necessary satisfaction which I, in my tortured mind, consider adequate."

The words "within 14 hours" were underscored.

FALLS DEAD WHEN ARRESTED

Uniontown (Pa.) Hotel Man Questioned About Stabbing of Detective.

By the Associated Press.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 12. — Frank C. Monaghan, 61-year-old hotel proprietor, fell dead today when police questioned him about the stabbing of County Detective John C. Wall. Monaghan had been arrested early in the morning by Wall, who said the hotelman was driving his car while intoxicated.

District Attorney James A. Reilly reported Wall was stabbed after taking the wheel of Monaghan's car to drive it back to Uniontown. Monaghan's death was attributed to heart failure.

4 OF 5 TRAIN WRECK DEAD BURIED IN POTTER'S FIELD

Body of Fifth Transient, Only One Identified, Is Sent to Columbus, O.

The bodies of four of the five men, all transients, who were killed when a Missouri-Kansas-Texas freight train was derailed and partly destroyed by fire Thursday night a quarter mile north of Klondike, St. Charles County, were buried in Potter's Field at St. Charles yesterday when none of them was identified.

The fifth body, that of Walter Bragg, 45 years old, of Columbus, O., was sent to Columbus for burial. Only one person, a St. Louis man, made any attempt to identify any of the other bodies. Three of them were burned so badly that they were unrecognizable.

C. G. DAWES' DAUGHTER WED

Evanston Home Guarded After Kidnaping Scares in Suburb.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—An enlarged detail of suburban police guarded the Evanston home of Former Vice-President Charles G. Dawes as many guests attended the wedding tonight of the youngest child of the family, Miss Virginia Dawes, 22-year-old adopted daughter to Richard Thompson Cragg, 24, son of a neighbor at 9 p. m. There have been kidnaping scares in the suburb recently.

Suburban authorities disclosed that telephoned threats to the home of John Cummings Lindop, wealthy real estate dealer, had caused concern for the safety of his children, John Jr., 12, and Betty Jane, 9. Extortion demands were sent to Harry R. Kendall, chairman of the Washington National Insurance Co. and an Evanston resident. Frank R. Thomas, an employe, was arrested and charged with sending them.

After a wedding breakfast and reception at the home of Loretta Young, the pair left for a short honeymoon. Both will resume their movie work soon.

FINDS CARTON OF DYNAMITE

Carl Hayes Tells Police It Was Leaning Against Wall of Garage.

A carton containing 25 sticks of dynamite was turned over to police yesterday by Carl Hayes, 2506 North Twenty-second street, who said he had found it leaning against the wall of a garage in the rear of 1861 North Market street. Two sticks of dynamite had caps attached and were wrapped in newspapers.

Police said the explosives were old and apparently had been placed there some time ago by someone who wanted to get rid of them.

BARGE STRIKERS REPLY TO MAJ.-GEN. ASHBURN

Assert He Misstated Amount of Their Demand for More Pay.

Statements made in Washington yesterday by Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, head of the Inland Waterways Corporation, that the demands of the 400 striking employes of the Federal Barge Line here were exorbitant, but that he was willing to use every "conciliatory means" to end the strike, were answered by the strikers last night.

In a statement prepared by Nicholas Fillo, secretary of Lodge 78 of the American Federation of Government Employes, of which the majority of the strikers are members, they said that they were asking for a 13 per cent increase in pay—from 44 to 50 cents an hour for an eight-hour day — and not, as Ashburn declared for "a week's wages for half a week's work."

"At a meeting last July," the statement continued, "attended by William F. White, commissioner of conciliation of the Department of Labor, the general superintendent of the Federal Barge Line, Glenn Taylor, said that the only way a laborer could make a living wage at the barge line was by working a double shift of 16 hours a day. In the face of this, it is hard to believe that a labor conciliator could have reported back to Washington that the Inland Waterways Corporation had been fair to its men.

"Gen. Ashburn says that the 44 cents per hour now paid by the barge line is more than private employers are paying for the same work. Every single railroad coming in to St. Louis and East St. Louis pays much more than that for the same kind of work. In 1920 the Federal Barge Line itself paid 54 cents an hour for labor work."

The strike at the barge line began on Tuesday after conferences between the men and officials had failed to produce anything. There are 300 freight handlers and 100 crane men, checkers and clerks on strike.

ILLINOIS WOMAN ACQUITTED OF ABETTING VOTING FRAUD

Mrs. Beatrice Dorsey of Elgin Freed; Jury Out 30 Hours, Took 26 Ballots.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Ill., Sept. 12.—Mrs. Beatrice Dorsey, Elgin, Democratic Committeewoman, on trial on a charge of abetting illegal voting in the April primary, was acquitted tonight. The jury was out more than 30 hours. The jurors took 26 ballots.

The case against Mrs. Dorsey was based on allegations that she took two non-residents of Elgin into her home and had them vote in the contest she was making for her committee post. She won by 32 votes.

DETAILS OF RIVERFRONT BOND ELECTION FRAUD IN SEVERAL PRECINCTS

NEW GRAND JURY TOMORROW WILL CONTINUE INQUIRY

Scope of Its Work Will Be Determined at Conference With Circuit Attorney Miller.

MORE EVIDENCE OF IRREGULARITIES

Affidavits on Discrepancies Between Actual Vote and Official Record in Wards 7, 16, 25 and 26.

The September term grand jury, to be impaneled tomorrow by Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood, will have as its major task for the next 60 days investigation of election frauds exposed by the Post-Dispatch

The June term grand jury, which was discharged Friday, urgently recommended that he new grand jury, and subsequent grand juries, continue the investigation it began, citing as subjects for future inquiry the riverfront bond issue election of a year ago and the 1934 and 1936 primary elections.

Where the new grand jury will begin, and how far it will go in its investigation, are matters which will be determined by the grand jury in conference tomorrow with Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller.

A panel of 50 men has been summoned to appear before Judge Kirkwood tomorrow for possible grand jury service. From their number will be chosen the 12 grand jurors and two alternates who will serve for the next two months.

Widespread Fraud Shown.

Details of fraudulent voting in four more wards which were among the 20 in which the Post-Dispatch exposed fraud in the riverfront bond issue election are presented elsewhere on this page.

In each of the 19 wards which approved the bond issue, and in one other ward, as the Post-Dispatch has told, fraud was exposed by making a test canvass of precincts where lop-sided returns suggested the existence of fraud. Only enough persons were interviewed in each precinct to test the accuracy of the certified number of "no" votes.

On the average, reporters who conducted the canvass interviewed a little more than half of the persons who were registered voters a year ago. Nothing like a check of the entire voting list was made, and the only precincts investigated were those whose returns bore on their face presumptive evidence of fraud. The full extent of the fraud can be determined only by recounting all the ballots and checking all returns as is done by court order in election contests.

Discrepancies in Vote.

The wards in which detailed evidence of fraud is presented today are the Seventh, Sixteenth, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth.

In the Seventh Ward, where the recorded vote in the Eighth Precinct favored the bond issue, 347 to 5, the Post-Dispatch obtained affidavits from seven residents that they had voted "no." The total vote was within 39 of the precinct's total registration, but 41 residents of the ward made statements, 36 of them in affidavit form, that they had not voted.

The Twelfth Precinct of the Sixteenth Ward was shown in the official returns to have voted in favor of the bonds, 263 to 12, but 23 registered voters made affidavits that they had voted "no." In addition, seven others made statements in the presence of a notary public that they had voted "no," but these preferred not to sign affidavits.

In the Twelfth Precinct of the Twenty-fifth Ward, recorded as voting 163 "yes" and 20 "no," 22 voters signed affidavits that they had voted "no" and three others made that statement in the presence of a notary public, but did not sign affidavits. During the canvass the reporter found only 65 persons in this precinct who said they had voted "yes."

"No" Vote 533; 330 Counted.

Two precincts, the Eighth and the Twenty-third, were canvassed in the Twenty-sixth Ward. In the Eighth, where the recorded vote was 144 to 32 in favor of the bonds, 34 persons said they had voted "no." Of the 34, affidavits were obtained from 31. The other three preferred not to sign. In the Twenty-third Precinct, recorded as favoring the bonds, 128 to 30, affidavits that they had voted "no" were obtained from 25 voters, and nine others said they had voted "no" but preferred not to sign an affidavit.

In all 23 precincts canvassed, the recorded "no" vote was 330, but the canvasses, not complete in any precinct, showed that at least 543 had voted "no." Affidavits that they had voted "no" were signed by 481 registered voters. The 62 others, who preferred not to sign affidavits, made statements to the same effect, in the presence of a notary public.

68 Persons in Two Precincts Of 26th Ward Say They Voted "No"; Official Count Gave Only 62

Riverfront Bonds Carried by a Ratio of 4½ to 1 in 8th and 23d Precincts but Only 2½ To 1 in Ward as Whole.

(Copyright, 1936, by Pulitzer Publishing Co., the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All property rights in news reserved under Federal Court decisions. Reproduction prohibited.)

In two precincts of the Twenty-sixth Ward, in the West End, the Post-Dispatch, in its investigation of the vote in the riverfront bond issue election of a year ago, found evidence of fraud.

These precincts, as has been told, are the eighth and the twenty-third. Details of the investigation in these districts are presented today. The Twenty-sixth Ward was the last of the 19 wards, in which the bonds received the required two-thirds majority, to be included in the test canvass, by the Post-Dispatch, which has established fraud in each of these wards.

The bond proposition carried by a ratio of about 4½ to 1 in the two precincts of the Twenty-sixth Ward. It carried by better than 2½ to 1 in the ward as a whole, the vote being 4050 "yes" and 1498 "no," or 351 more than a two-thirds majority.

Summarized, the findings in the two precincts were:

Eighth precinct—Official vote: 144 yes to 32 no, a total of 176, with registration of 393. The Post-Dispatch obtained affidavits of 31 residents who said they voted against the riverfront bonds and statements to the same effect in the presence of a notary public from three other residents, who preferred not to sign affidavits.

Twenty-third precinct — Official vote: 128 yes to 30 no, a total of 158, with registration of 387. The Post-Dispatch obtained affidavits of 25 residents who declared they voted "no" on the riverfront bonds and statements to the same effect from nine other residents, who did not care to sign affidavits.

Bounds of Twenty-sixth Ward.

The Twenty-sixth Ward is bounded generally by Delmar boulevard and Walton, Clara and Easton avenues. It is a thickly settled residence and uptown retail district. Its members of the Democratic City Committee at the time of the bond election were Charles J. Hunt, who was dismissed by Mayor Dickmann as deputy clerk of the Police Courts in June, 1935, and later became a deputy circuit clerk, and Miss Addie O'Connell. Members of the Republican City Committee were M. J. Hart and Miss Aida Donnerberg.

The Eighth Precinct is bounded by Kingshighway, Page boulevard and Vernon and Academy avenues. Its polling place was at 5000 Page. Many of the residents own their own homes. Most of the dwellings are for either one or two families and there is only one apartment house.

At only one residence was the reporter who canvassed this precinct turned away without a hearing.

It was found that 68 persons who were registered as voters at the time of the bond election had moved away, which was a considerably smaller proportion than in the river wards and some other sections where the population shifts about considerably.

About half the voters with whom the reporter talked said they did not vote on the bonds, and many others could not recall whether they had voted or, if they had, whether they voted for or against the riverfront bonds. The reporter encountered 86 persons who said they voted for the bond proposal.

Precinct officials for the bond election, according to Election Board records, were: Louis Greenberg, 4952A Cote Brilliante avenue, and Hugh S. Brady, 5030 Page boulevard, Democratic judges; Earl E. Fay, 5213 Wells avenue, and Harry Novak, 4926 Page, Republican judges; Vincent Kelly, 5088 Minerva avenue, Democratic clerk, and Anna K. Ready, 1245 North Kingshighway, Republican clerk.

Swear They Voted "No."

Five who signed affidavits that they voted "no" on the riverfront bonds requested that their names be withheld from publication. The other 26 who made affidavit that they voted against the bonds were:

George W. Stinebaker, 1237 North Kingshighway.

Robert E. Dunn, 1237 North Kingshighway.

James E. Brush, 1237 North Kingshighway.

Gerald B. Dyer, 1241 North Kingshighway.

August W. Wessels, 5077 Vernon avenue.

Harry T. Floyd, 5066 Vernon avenue (at the time of the election he lived at 5026A Maple avenue).

Another voter, who requested that her name be withheld from publication, told the reporter she had voted against the riverfront bonds, but preferred not to sign an affidavit. Two voters, who told of voting "no" on the bonds but preferred not to sign affidavits, were:

Henry H. Potting, 5011 Maple avenue.

John Nicozesen, 5035 Vernon avenue.

Certificates attesting the statements of these three voters were prepared by the notary.

Residents in Twenty-third Precinct Tell Why They Didn't Vote.

The twenty-third precinct, which had its polling place at 5509 Clemens avenue, is bounded by Delmar boulevard and Belt, Clara and Cates avenues. It is characterized by a mixture of apartment houses and private homes. Unlike a number of other precincts canvassed in the city, here many apartment dwellers told of voting against the bonds, while many property owning residents could not remember whether they had voted. Generally elsewhere the bulk of opposition was among property owners and support among tenants of apartments and flats.

Sentiment in this precinct appeared to be generally against the bond issue, but a number of residents declared they refrained from voting in the belief "the election was fixed anyhow." The reporter encountered, in the course of a careful survey, only 53 residents who were positive they had voted for the riverfront bonds.

Sixteen persons declared they had been opposed to the bond proposal, but could not be certain now whether they had voted. Two of the persons who told of voting "no" but who preferred not to sign affidavits explained they feared such action might have a bad effect on their business connections, and three others voting "no" declined to sign because they did not want "to get mixed up in politics." Two women told the reporter their husbands, who were out of town at the time of the canvass, had voted against the bonds.

Precinct officials for the bond election, according to Election Board records, were: Cora Reardon, 742 Bayard avenue, and Elizabeth Eppley, 1447 Burd avenue, Democratic judges; Edward H. Harvey Jr., 5226 Enright avenue, and Theodore B. Miller, 5530 Clemens avenue, Republican judges; Thomas H. Brady, 738 North Euclid avenue, Democratic clerk, and Daniel J. Henry, 1232 Clara avenue, Republican clerk.

Affidavits Signed.

The following 25 residents of the precinct signed affidavits that they had voted "no" on the riverfront bonds:

Claudea E. Moll, 5564 Enright avenue.

Albert F. Eaton, 5530 Cates avenue.

38 PRECINCTS CAST LESS THAN TEN "NO" VOTES

Total Vote Therein Was 12,328 "Yes" to 201 "No," a Ratio of 60 to 1.

(Copyright, 1936, by Pulitzer Publishing Co., the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All property rights in news reserved under Federal Court decisions. Reproduction prohibited.)

In 38 precincts, which cast less than 10 votes each against the riverfront bonds, the total "yes" vote was 12,328 and the total "no" vote 201, a ratio of 60 to 1.

An average of 324 votes per precinct was cast at these 38 polling places for the bond issue as against 5.2 votes per precinct against it. The number of "no" votes ranged from none in the Fourth precinct of the Twenty-second Ward to nine each in the First precinct of the First Ward and the Fourth precinct of the Twenty-third Ward.

Eight of the 13 precincts in the Fifth Ward, bailiwick of State Senator Mike Kinney, cast less than 10 votes a precinct against the bond issue, the most one-sided majority being in the Second precinct, where, according to the official count, 398 voters favored and only one voter was opposed to the bond issue. The average number of "yes" votes was 324 a precinct and the average number of "no" votes five a precinct.

In four precincts of the Twenty-second Ward, 1219 ballots were recorded for the bond issue, an average of 304 a precinct, and 12 against it, an average of three a precinct.

The analysis included precincts in the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-second, Twenty-third and Twenty-seventh wards.

PENDERGAST'S CONDITION REPORTED TO BE 'VERY GOOD'

Patient Happy to Be Home and Had Very Restful Night, Physician Says.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 12.—T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City Democratic chieftain, passed a "very restful night" and his general condition was reported "very good" today by his personal physician.

A bulletin issued by Dr. A. Sophian at a hospital where Pendergast was taken last night on his arrival from New York in a special railway car said:

"Mr. Pendergast had a very restful night. His condition this mornin gis very good. He is cheerful, buoyant and says he is happy to be home. The local abdominal condition is quite satisfactory. The present program will be one of general treatment and close observation. There is no consideration of surgery today."

25 SAY THEY CAST 'NO' VOTES; RECORD SHOWS ONLY 20

Discrepancies in Riverfront Bond Election Found in 12th Precinct of the 25th Ward.

(Copyright, 1936, by Pulitzer Publishing Co., the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All property rights in news reserved under Federal Court decisions. Reproduction prohibited.)

In its canvass of the riverfront bond vote in the Twenty-fifth Ward, in the West End, the Post-Dispatch selected the twelfth precinct for its test because it had a lower negative vote recorded than any other precinct in the ward.

The recorded vote there was 163 yes to 20 no, with registration of 413 voters.

This precinct extends between Taylor and Euclid avenues, with Pershing avenue as the southern boundary and Westminster place and McPherson avenue on the north. Within it is Lenox place. It contains, in addition to homes of prosperous families, a number of apartments and flats and some rooming houses. A large proportion of residents were out of town when the canvass was made, the proportion ranging from 48 to 78 per cent on three streets.

A Post-Dispatch reporter, accompanied by a notary public, obtained affidavits from 22 voters of the precinct, who declared they voted 'no" on the riverfront bonds. In addition, three voters told of voting "no," but preferred not to sign affidavits, and the notary prepared a certificate attesting their statements.

The reporter found only 65 voters who said they had voted "yes" on the riverfront bonds, while eight at first said they had voted "no" but, when asked to sign affidavits, retracted, asserting they were not sure whether they had voted. There were 92 others who said they did not know whether they had voted, the election having been held a year ago. Thirty said they did not vote.

List of Officials.

The polling place of the precinct was at 4504 Westminster place.

Members of the Democratic City Committee for the Twenty-fifth Ward at the time were Harry J. Cantwell, lawyer, and Mrs. Anna Donegan, a Deputy Sheriff. The Republican committee members were Richard E. Gruner and Mrs. Arthur Buerman.

The ward's entire vote for the bond proposals was: Riverfront, 3882 yes, 1306 no; bridge approaches, 3875 yes, 1212 no. This was a ratio of virtually 3 to 1 in favor of the propositions, or 423 votes more than the required two-thirds majority for the riverfront item.

Precinct officials of the twelfth precinct of the Twenty-fifth Ward for the bond election, according to Election Board records, were: Harry J. Steger, 4380 Gibson avenue, and Henry H. McQueen, 4511 McPherson avenue, Democratic judges; Henry E. Meziere, 4704 McPherson avenue, and James L. Dunn, 377 North Taylor avenue, Republican judges; J. L. Noelker, 1564 South Vandeventer avenue, Democratic clerk, and Christine Baur, 4944 Washington boulevard, Republican clerk.

Affidavits and Statements.

Twenty-two voters who made affidavit that they voted "no" on the riverfront bonds were:

Oscar A. Niedringhaus, 4647 Pershing avenue.

Marie W. Niedringhaus, 4647 Pershing avenue.

Belle Peterson, 369 North Taylor avenue.

Arthur Lieber, 4512 Westminster place.

Clemence S. Lieber, 4512 Westminster place.

Louis H. Kohn, 4548 McPherson avenue.

George H. Kohn, 4548 McPherson avenue.

Ida Kohn, 4548 McPherson avenue.

Mrs. Hattie Herrmann, 4548 McPherson avenue.

Martin Trepp, Jr., 4520 McPherson avenue.

Albert W. Huegerich, 4704 McPherson avenue.

Esther Huegerich, 4704 McPherson avenue.

Joseph H. Schweich, 4553 McPherson avenue.

Agnes Tomczak, 4550 McPherson avenue.

Glen Schwing, 4728 McPherson avenue.

Mrs. Valle Schwing, 4728 McPherson avenue.

Mary Harrison, 4507 McPherson avenue.

William Warren, 4540 McPherson avenue.

James A. Forester, 4536 Westminster place.

Howard Bradley, 4532 Westminster place.

Mary G. Maserang, 4604 Westminster place.

Catherine Nalty, 4544 Westminster place.

Three who said they voted "no" on the riverfront bonds, but preferred not to sign affidavits, were:

Thomas C. Whitmarsh Jr., 4614 Westminster place.

Morris H. Rosenblatt, 401 North Taylor avenue.

Gussie Rosenblatt, 401 North Taylor avenue.

23 Swear They Voted 'No' Despite 263 to 12 Return in 16th Ward

Only 12 votes against the river front bonds were recorded in the Twelfth Precinct of the Sixteenth Ward, but a Post-Dispatch reporter obtained sworn affidavits from 23 voters of the precinct that they voted "No."

In addition, seven other voters tolds the reporter, in the presence of a notary public, that they voted "No," but they preferred not to sign affidavits. The notary prepared a certificate attesting their statements.

One of those making affidavit to a vote against the bonds was a man of considerable political prominence, who preferred that his name be withheld from publication. Another affidavit was signed by Henry A. Freytag, Republican committeeman of the ward.

The precinct's vote, as shown in the official returns, was 263 to 12 in favor of the river front bonds and 260 to 15 in favor of rail approaches to Municipal Bridge. The total vote on each item was the same, 275.

Registration in this precinct was 505, according to the Election Board's printed list, issued shortly before the election, but was 507, according to a subsequent tabulation by the board.

Shift in Population.

There has been considerable shifting of the population of the precinct in the year since the election. The precinct, which had its polling place at 3456 Eads avenue, extends between Par and Lafayette avenues and is bounded on the west by Grand boulevard and on the east by Theresa and Louisiana avenues. Within its boundaries is Harris Teachers 'College and it adjoins Reservoir Park.

Residents of the precinct interviewed included a number of owners of both large and small homes, who indicated their opposition to bond issues in general, also clerks and others of comparable economic status. There were, in addition, apartment dwellers, who said they had little interest in the riverfront memorial plan. However, many persons related that they voted for the bond issues, in the belief they would provide employment and that the memorial would replace unsightly old buildings. Many preferred not to sign affidavits disclosing whether they participated in the election, or how.

Members of the Democratic City Committee for the Sixteenth Ward at the time were Herbert Schmitt of the State Auditor's office and Mrs. Lottie Walsh, a Deputy State Labor Commissioner. Members of the Republican City Committee were Henry A. Freytag and Mrs. Lillian E. Baker, a Negro.

Vote of the ward was: Riverfront bonds, 3349 yes, 887 no; bridge approaches, 3341 yes, 878 no—a ratio of nearly 4 to 1 in favor of both items. This gave 525 votes more than the required two-thirds majority for the memorial bonds.

The Precinct Officials.

Precinct officials for the bond election, according to Election Board records, were: James M. Keon, 3432 Eads avenue, and E. J. Finnegan, 3400 Eads, Democratic judges; John G. Spehnan, 3428 Vista avenue, and Charles Warren, 2916 Eads, Republican judges; A. H. Smith, 3421 Eads, Democratic clerk, and James R. McMichael, 3522 Caroline street, Republican clerk.

Voters who made affidavit that they voted "no" on the riverfront bonds were:

Jack Burns, 3430 Park avenue.

Robert Burns, 3430 Park avenue.

John W. Ellenbrecht, 3508 Henrietta street.

Anna Wein, 1630 South Theresa avenue.

Amelia Johannes, 3541 Henrietta street.

Josephine C. Wickers, 3430 Eads avenue.

John C. Wicker, 3430 Eads avenue.

Ida Jordan, 3506 Henrietta street.

George H. Jordan, 3506 Henrietta street.

Laura Walker, 3531 Henrietta street.

Elizabeth Reynolds, 3517 Henrietta street.

Chester A. Reynolds, 3517 Henrietta street.

Marie Schroeder, 3417 Henrietta street.

Charles Kleinschmidt, 3419 Henrietta street.

Rosa Kleinschmidt, 3419 Henrietta street.

Georgia Taylor, 1524 South Theresa avenue.

Lewis H. Meyer, 3521 Henrietta avenue.

George Weber, 3437A St. Vincent avenue.

Dominica Merenda, 3401 St. Vincent avenue.

Frank Merenda, 3401 St. Vincent avenue.

Charles Sansoucie, 3412A Eads avenue.

Henry A. Freytag, 3545 Lafayette avenue.

Discrepancy Shown in 'No' Vote And Total in Ward 7, Precinct 8

(Copyright, 1936, by Pulitzer Publishing Co., the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All property rights in news reserved under Federal Court decisions. Reproduction prohibited.)

In the eighth precinct of the Seventh Ward only five votes were recorded against each of the two propositions submitted. A Post-Dispatch reporter obtained affidavits of seven voters of the precinct, that they voted against the riverfront bonds.

Furthermore, the officially reported total vote of the precinct was only 39 less than the reported registration of voters, but the reporter obtained affidavits from 36 qualified voters of the precinct, relating that they did not vote in the bond election, and he and a notary prepared certificates of the statements of five additional qualified voters who did not vote then. The latter five persons preferred not to sign affidavits.

In other words, the Post-Dispatch established fraud in the returns by the showing that at least two more persons voted against the bonds than the number reported officially and also that at least two more persons refrained from voting than were shown by the Election Board.

It was a difficult task, because of the shifting character of the population of this factory and warehouse district and the fact that the bond election was held a year ago.

112 Removals.

The canvass showed that 112 of the persons listed as qualified voters of the precinct for the bond election had moved away or were unknown to the present residents of the given addresses, and that seven of the registrants had died. Three days were spent in a painstaking investigation in the entire precinct.

The vote of the precinct, as officially reported, was 347 to 5 in favor of both the river front bonds and the Municipal Bridge rail approach item. The western end of the bridge is in this precinct.

The printed list of registered voters issued by the Election Board for this precinct, after the regular supplementary registration and canvass and shortly before the bond election, gave the number of voters as 382. However, a tabulation furnished the Post-Dispatch at the board office shortly after the election put the number at 391. The board has explained that proper additions to the registry were made for various reasons in many precincts in the short interval between the printing of the lists and the election.

Precinct Boundaries.

Boundaries of the Eighth Precinct of the Seventh Ward, which had its polling place at 1231 Chouteau avenue, are Chouteau, Broadway and Cerre and Fourteenth streets. About half of the residents are Negroes and many of the rest are of Syrian extraction. Old tenements and flats above stores comprise most of the dwellings. Within the precinct are the big plant of the Ralston Purina Co., a can factory and a warehouse, while Chouteau avenue and Broadway are lined with stores, restaurants, saloons and filling stations.

Joe Mestres, whose political services to Mayor Dickmann, the sponsor of the Jefferson Memorial on the river front, were rewarded recently by promotion from the unimportant post of superintendent of street excavations to the big job of Park Commissioner, is the veteran Democratic committeeman of the Seventh Ward. The Democratic committeewoman at the time of the bond election was Mrs. Rose Diepenbrock, a City Hospital employe. Members of the Republican City Committee from the ward were William H. Hubele, former City Marshal and former Commissioner of Weights and Measures, and Mrs. Emil Marienfeld.

Total vote of the ward on the bond proposals was: River front bonds, 5117 yes, 6[illegible] no; bridge approaches, 5121 yes, 568 no—a ration of nearly 9 to 1 in favor of the issues. There were 1305 votes more than the required two-thirds majority for the memorial bonds.

Precinct Officials.

Precinct officials of the eighth precinct of the Seventh Ward for the bond election, according to Election Board records, were: Robert Kessler, 1534 Mississippi avenue, and Raymond Leisure, 1219 Chouteau avenue, Democratic judges; John B. Smith, 1614 Park avenue, and Joseph Ablan, 911 Chouteau avenue, Republican judges; Anton Giljum, 1706 Chouteau avenue, Democratic clerk, and Joseph George, 824 South Tenth street, Republican clerk.

Anton Giljum, the Democratic clerk, was indicted by the grand jury recently on a charge of willful neglect to canvass the precinct, following the supplementary registration for the recent primary election. The offense charged is a misdemeanor.

In the recanvass of this precinct, made by the Election Board at the end of July as part of the general recanvass resulting from the exposure by the Post-Dispatch of wholesale frauds in the last registration, 174 persons were reported "not found" out of the purported enrollment of 580 voters.

Affidavit Signers.

Those who made affidavit that they had voted "no" on the riverfront bonds were:

Stewart Payne, 911 South Ninth street.

Walter Wilson, 832 South Tenth street.

George Seymour, 822 South Fourteenth street.

Louis Smith, 835 South Ninth street.

J. M. Kaigler, 909 South Ninth street.

Ernest Emery, 825 South Ninth street.

Another signer of one of these affidavits, among the "no" voters, preferred that his name be withheld from publication.

Five qualified voters of the precinct who told the reporter, in the presence of a notary public, that they did not vote in the bond election, but declined to sign affidavits to that effect, were:

John Heller, 1201 Chouteau avenue.

Vera Heller, 1201 Chouteau avenue, his wife.

Katherine Heller, 1201 Chouteau avenue, his daughter.

Mary Collins, 905 South Tenth street.

Martha Sheppard, 617 Chouteau avenue.

However, in the case of these five persons, the notary prepared affidavits in which he and the reporter attested to the voters' statements.

Non-Voters.

Qualified voters who signed affidavits that they did not vote in the bond election were:

Edward Fulliam, 1321 Chouteau avenue (now residing at 1316 (rear) Chouteau).

Virginia Ratliff, 1010 (rear) Papin street.

Minnie Finn, 826A South Tenth street.

EX-ROAD COMMISSIONER SUED FOR $3000 BY CENTERVILLE

Alleged to Have Had No Authority to Construct Half-Mile Link With Route No. 3.

A suit to collect $3000 from Frank Reinhardt, former Centerville Township Highway Commissioner, charging him with illegally improving private property at township expense, was filed in Circuit Court at Belleville yesterday by the town of Centerville and Albert Ullrich, treasurer of the Centerville Township road fund.

The petition alleged that Reinhardt was without authority to construct an all-weather road about a half mile long connecting a county highway with State Highway No. 3 at a cost of $3000. Although owners of the property gave approval of the project, no right-of-way deeds were obtained and the work was not authorized by the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors, the petition stated.

STICK BY ROOSEVELT, SAYS HUGH JOHNSON

"Only President Who Ever Threw Force of Government Into Fight for Social Justice."

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 12.—General Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA Administrator, in an address at a Democratic rally here tonight, called upon "poor people" to "stick by the only President in history who ever threw the force of government into the fight for social justice—Franklin Roosevelt."

He said the Republican presidential candidate, Gov. Alf M. Landon, "preaches pure Hooverism" and that "the Old Guard have lapped up Landon as the whale swallowed Jonah."

He accused Gov. Landon of changing his stand on Federal regulation of industry "when the Old Guard got him." Quoting the Governor as saying in his Kansas State campaign in 1933 that "regulation of competition should be permitted under government supervision," and that "State compacts . . . are the deadest horses I know," Johnson said, "He now says that State compacts controlling industry are the answer. . . .

"The Old Guard says that neither the Government nor the people can enter the vast field of economic anarchy to protect the nation. Under the Old Guard doctrine which Landon has swallowed whole, we can not even vote upon the question."

"No Room to Take a Walk."

The result, he said, was that "the only issue of this campaign is equal opportunity against special privilege—Thomas Jefferson against Alexander Hamilton—and that leaves no room for any Democrat to take a walk. We may not agree with the whole New Deal, but its basis is democracy. Its opposition is economic autocracy. . . .

"The New Deal only says that the plain people shall not be at the mercy of every economic wind that blows. . . . For the 85 per cent of us who are not strong enough to ride the economic whirlwind, it saves us from regimentation by private economic control of those who are stronger. . . .

"If enough poor people split away from Roosevelt they can elect, not Lemke (Representative William Lemke, Union party candidate for President) but Landon. When that happens they had better begin looking for sympathy in the dictionary. They won't find it in the Old Guard, whose idea of social justice is, and ever has been, the famous Hoover hardscrapple — 'rugged individualism'—root hog or die and the devil take the hindmost."

"Cooking Up More Hooverism."

Gen. Johnson said, "Frank Knox (Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice-President) has repeatedly said that Hooverism had the depression licked in 1932 and that all Roosevelt had to do was just stand aside and let the Old Guard medicine work.

"What does this mean? It can only mean one thing. If Hooverism was the answer at our worst, then Hooverism is the answer they are cooking up for us now.

"That isn't a guess. That has been the Old Guard belief for 140 years. They say that for the Federal Government to try to do anything to control economic forces is unconstitutional, immoral and obscene. These forces can throw 13,000,000 people out of jobs, reduce agriculture to medieval peonage, leave 50,000,000 destitute . . . but the Hoover Old Guard says 'Let it alone.'"

Vote for Lemke a Vote for Landon.

Johnson considers the presidential contest "a tight race but a cinch for President Roosevelt," he said in an interview on his arrival here.

He said he doubted Father Coughlin would swing many votes to Lemke, "because I don't think we have so many suckers in the country." He called Lemke a "decoy." "Anybody who votes for Lemke votes for Landon," he said.

FRANKLIN-AMERICAN CO. PAYS $1,165,000 TO 1800 PERSONS

Represents Balance Due On Principal of Participations to Holders.

The Franklin-American Co. paid $1,165,000 yesterday to about 1800 holders of defaulted first mortgage participations, representing payment in full of the balance due on the principal of the participations, which totaled $2,002,000 when the company went into liquidation in April, 1933.

The payment was part of a repurchase agreement, proposed by the firm last June, whereby participation holders agreed to waive interest from the default date. Under a previous agreement holders were to have waived payments of principal or interest for five years from the default date, or until 1938. Interest ranged from 4½ to 5½ per cent.

Yesterday's payments represented 55 per cent of the principal of $1,499,289 in "guaranteed" participations issued by the Franklin-American Co. and 67½ per cent of the principal of similar securities issued by the Real Estate Mortgage Trust Co., whose business was taken over by Franklin-American in 1929.

Pianist's Wife Sues Woman.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 12.—Mrs. Margarete Eisenberger, wife of Severin Eisenberger, concert pianist, filed suit for $50,000 today against Miss Edith Bloomfield of Cleveland, charging alienation of her husband's affections. She alleged Miss Bloomfield induced Eisenberger to file divorce proceedings now pending in Reno, Nev.

FEDERAL INSPECTOR ENTERS SEARCH FOR KIDNAPED BABY

Mother of Detroit Boy Appeals to Anonymous Note Writer Through Newspapers.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 12.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation sent Inspector E. J. Connelley here tonight to take part in the search for Harry Browe, 20-month-old baby, who disappeared from his carriage in a park a week ago today. Expiration of the seven-day time limit specified in the Cochran kidnaping act enabled Federal men, limited thus far to observation, actively to enter the case.

Mrs. Robert Browe, mother of the baby, appealed to the anonymous note writer to return the child. The note, written on half of a torn picture postcard, was enclosed in an envelope mailed to the mother. It said:

"Mrs. Browe—Please forgive me for taking your baby. You cannot understand how it is to be without one. You have so many, surely you can spare this one. He is beginning to like us and we want you to know . . ."

In her reply, published in newspapers, Mrs. Browe said: "You have given me hope. If you have the love in your heart for a child as you claim to have, won't you listen to the appeal of my broken heart and bring my Buddy back? I shall never know happiness again without him."

ST. CHARLES HAS RECORD SCHOOL ENROLLMENT

2763 Registered in All; Largest Gain Made by Lindenwood College.

A total of 2763 boys and girls are enrolled this year in the schools and college in St. Charles, the largest number of students the town has ever had.

The enrollment is classified as follows: Public grade schools, 854; public high schools, 425; Lutheran grade schools, 222; Catholic grade schools, 393; Catholic high school, 355; Sacred Heart Academy, 62; Lindenwood College, 515.

The largest gain in registration was made by Lindenwood College, a girl's school, which last year had 432 students.

SOVIET WORKERS SHARE COLLECTIVELY IN PROFITS

Four Pct. of Planned Net Gains and 50 Pct. of That Above Plan Are Distributed.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 12.—Sovie workers now share collectively in a small percentage of the "profits" of their enterprises.

By a recent decree, 4 per cent of the planned net profits of each enterprise and 50 per cent of the profits above the plan, are placed at the disposal of the enterprise.

Directors use this money for the improvement of the material conditions and life standards of their workers. In many places the money is going into vacation and rest camps, while in others it is being used for construction of new houses.

JAPANESE-NANKING PARLEY TOMORROW

Subject Anti-Japanese Campaign Back of Chengtu and Pakhoi Incidents.

NANKING, China, Sept. 12.—In negotiations which begin here Monday, the Japanese Ambassador, Shigeru Kawagoe, will take up with the Nanking Government the incidents at Chengtu and Pakhoi on Aug. 24 and Sept. 3.

At Chengtu, two Japanese were killed and two injured by a Chinese mob which was angered by the proposed reopening of the Japanese Consulate. At Pakhoi, the one Japanese citizen of the town also was killed.

The Japanese Ambassador planned to leave Shanghai tomorrow for Nanking with a large staff of diplomatic, military and naval aids. The Japanese hold that the principal point to be discussed is not the "outrages" themselves, but anti-Japanese agitation and education in China which, the Japanese contend, was back of the Chengtu and Pakhoi incidents. They demand that China stop it.

China denies that such activities are going on. If the National Government maintains this view in the face of the Japanese diplomatic approach Monday, the Japanese have indicated that they are prepared to take independent action to stop anti-Japanese outbreaks.

DIPLOMAS ON 'MASTER OF GAS'

Teachers in Istanbul Instruct Pupils for Next War.

By the Associated Press.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Sept. 12. — "Look, mamma, I got 100 per cent in poison gas!" is a remark school children make here as they display their grade markings in a new course of instruction preparing for the next war.

Anti-gas teaching is compulsory in all secondary schools. Already 1200 school teachers have been awarded "M. G." diplomas—Master of Gas—, and 14,000 more are expected to be graduated soon.

10,000 Paraders Acclaim Juliana.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 12.—Amid scenes of wild enthusiasm, 10,000 members of the Netherlands Provincial Corporations paraded on the Noordeinde today before the Royal Palace, where Queen Wilhelmina, her daughter, the Princess Juliana, and the latter's fiance, Prince Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld, watched from a balcony. Newest reports in court circles said Juliana and Bernhard probably would be married in December.

REPLIES TO WOMAN'S SUIT FOR CITY TAVERN LICENSE

Excise Commissioner Says Miss Mabel Thorpe Does Not Comply With Requirements.

Excise Commissioner Thomas L. Anderson filed an answer yesterday in the suit of Miss Mabel Thorpe to sompel him to renew a license to operate a tavern at 4038-46 Olive street. He says that in his judgment she does not comply with requirements of the city ordinance regulating such places and that she is not "in court with clean hands."

According to the Commissioner, the petitioner's tavern was operated in an improper manner, as she permitted customers who indulged in the use of vile language to frequent it. He further says that her application was not signed by a majority of assessed tax-paying property owners in the block in which the tavern is located; further, that her tavern is not for the best interests of the community because of its provimity to similar places.

Miss Thorpe sets forth in her suit she applied for a license and at a hearing held by Anderson no evidence was produced to show she was not a fit and proper person to have a license. However, the Commissioner arbitrarily rejected her plea, she alleges.

The case is set for trial before Circuit Judge John W. Joynt Thursday.

DO IT WITH HADLEY·DEAN
Glass
. . . and greatly enhance the appeal of your home

Glass enhances any decorative scheme, no matter what the style or period. It is this flexibility, as much as its brilliant beauty, that makes Hadley-Dean glass such an effective medium in the hands of the decorator and architect. Here are a few suggested uses currently in favor. Mirrors of plate glass in silver or color, for walls of dressing rooms, dining rooms, hallways and bedrooms. Plate glass and mirrored furniture tops. Mirrors that frame a fireplace. Colorful Vitrolite glass on bathroom and kitchen walls. Mirrored nitches with glass shelves. Large glass areas for "picture" windows. There are countless others, which your ingenuity will devise and which Hadley-Dean will gladly lend such practical assistance as you may request.

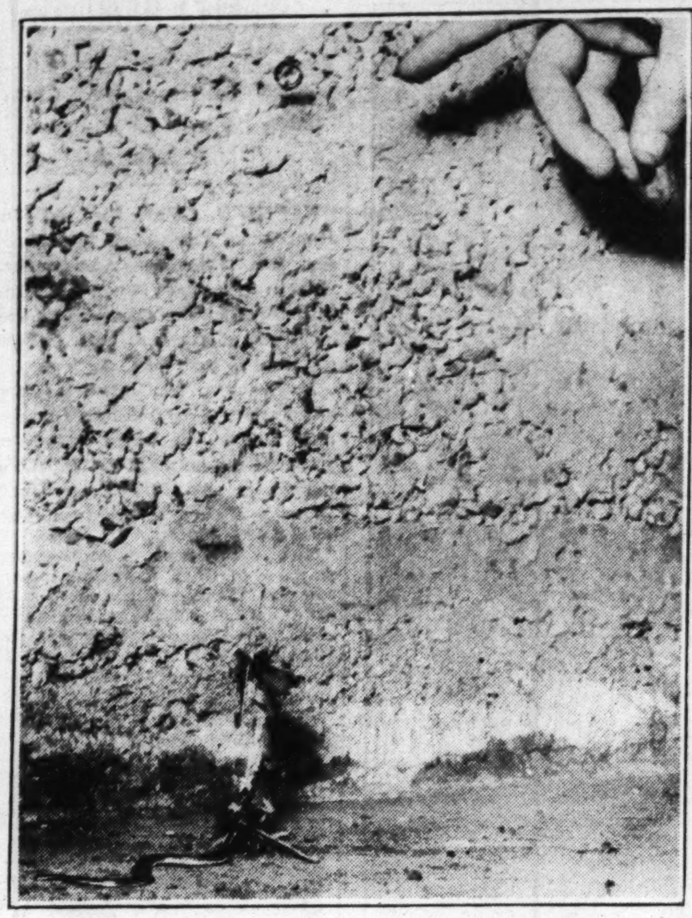
Fight Between Spider and Snake



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

GARDEN snake a few hours before it freed itself last night from a spider web in Washington Park, near East St. Louis, at the home of the Rev. B. J. Murrie, paster of the Washington Park Baptist Church. The spider ensnared the snake Friday.

SNAKE ESCAPES FROM SPIDER AFTER 32 HOURS IN WEB

Six-Inch Reptile Wins Fight for Life in East Side Pastor's Garage.

The small garden snake which had been enmeshed since Friday in a spider web in the garage of the Rev. B. J. Murrie in Washington Park, East St. Louis, won its fight for life last night.

About 7:30 o'clock, Mary Lou, 13-year-old daughter of the minister, discovered that the snake had disappeared and the spider was busy re-spinning its web. The fight had lasted for about 32 hours.

During that time many persons had telephoned the Rev. Mr. Murrie and had demanded either that the snake be released or be killed. The St. Louis Humane Society asked that the snake be freed. One man called the East St. Louis police department demanding that the snake be killed, but was told that Washington Park is outside the jurisdiction of East St. Louis.

The snake, about six inches long, made gains in the struggle yesterday when part of the web gave way, but it was too weak from vigorous wiggling and squirming to extricate itself completely.

Visitors who frequently came to the garage to witness the fight scared the spider and kept it from weaving additional strands about its victim. The Rev. Mr. Murrie, who is pastor of Washington Park Baptist Church, said he first noticed the two when he went to the garage Friday noon for his automobile.

GUFFEY SEEKS INQUIRY ON ALLEGED MISUSE OF FRANK

Charge Pennsylvania Senator Sent Out Political Matter Under It Investigated.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Post-office Department officials disclosed tonight they were investigating a charge that Senator Guffey (Dem.), Pennsylvania, had used his franking privilege to send political material through the mail.

The Senator denied the accusation, saying it was he who asked for the investigation.

Nelson B. Wentzel of the department, said he understood the charge was made by a "George Welsh," but denied further knowledge of the complainant.

Senator Guffey said: "Somebody in Detroit had my name printed on some envelopes and listed a slate of candidates on the back, many of whom I had never heard of. I have asked the Postoffice Department to try to find out for me who did it."

The envelopes were never mailed, the Senator said.

BIOLOGICAL SURVEY CALLS FOR MORE BIRD OBSERVERS

Federal Agency Says It Needs Additional Volunteers in South and West.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — The Biological Survey issued a call today for more volunteer observers of bird migration in the South and West. The survey said it had enough observers east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

The principal qualification is ability to identify birds. The survey said reports from volunteer observers provided many useful facts, particularly in establishing regulations for hunting woterfowl.

WOMAN RETURNS FIRE, ROUTS TWO ROBBERS AT TAVERN

Wife of Owner Pretends to Faint, Comes Up Behind Bar With Revolver in Hand.

Mrs. Mary Gables, 50 years old, reported to East St. Louis police yesterday that she exchanged shots with two Negro robbers at 3:30 a. m. in the tavern operated by herself and her husband, James, at 3500 Missouri avenue, just outside the East St. Louis city limits. She expressed the opinion that both men had been wounded.

She was standing behind the bar when the two Negroes entered. One drew two revolvers and said, "This is a stickup; get 'em up." The other Negro began firing, Mrs. Gables said.

She said she pretended to faint, picking up a .38-caliber revolver behind the bar as she slid to the floor. "Then I came up shooting and fired five times. They ran out the door. One spun around near the door and the other ran out holding his stomach. Then I got my husband's .45-caliber revolver near the end of the counter, ran outside and emptied it at them."

The bartender, Ed Busam, and one customer were in the tavern at the time. A reporter who examined the premises later found the bar splintered, the door glass broken and two holes in the screen door. Mrs. Gables had drawn a circle around the crack in the mirror behind the bar and had written, "Try it again."

OKLAHOMA JUNKS 'MAN CAGE'

Abandons Auto Cell It Used for Fugitives, After Protests.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla, Sept. 12.—Protests from other states today caused Oklahoma to junk its "rolling cell," a cage fitted to an automobile used to transport fugitive convicts.

Alex Watson, transfer agent at the state penitentiary in McAlester, announced abandonment of the "man cage." Recently Washington State authorities declined to release an Oklahoma fugitive to Watson until he agreed not to transport him in the portable jail.

Switch TO IPANA AND MASSAGE
today

JUST A LITTLE tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush. It doesn't look serious. It doesn't seem important. But from this small beginning sometimes develops a real dental tragedy. Dull and dingy teeth and tender gums can exact heavy penalties. That's why your dentist so strongly advises—"Don't let gum troubles start!"

When you see "pink tooth brush"—see your dentist! You may not be in for serious trouble but he should be the judge. Usually, however, he will find it just another case of "too much soft food"—gums robbed of the work they need by our modern menus—gums grown lazy, tender, and sensitive. And his advice should be followed to the letter—better care, more stimulation, Ipana Tooth Paste and massage.

Ipana and massage is approved by modern dentistry, taught in modern schools. Your first few days with Ipana will tell you why. Rub a little Ipana into your gums every time you brush your teeth. Almost at once, your gums improve, new circulation wakens sluggish tissues. Gum walls grow firmer.

Switch to Ipana—today. Feel your gums grow firmer. See your teeth grow whiter. Close the door to the really serious gum disorders. Keep your smile as it should be—lovely, bright, sparkling.

Remember
A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury.

SEEKING TO PREVENT DIRIGIBLE DISASTERS

Tests in Progress at Akron, O., With Tiny Model in Wind Tunnel.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Sept. 12.—Experiments with a model dirigible are in progress here in an attempt to learn ways to prevent such disasters a sthose to the "Akron" in the Atlantic and the "Macon" in the Pacific Ocean. Director Theodore Troller is using a wind tunnel in his experiments.

The model airship is built and inflated like a blimp. Its skin is an electrically-built copper sheath, the thinnest possible covering for the tiny craft. Its perfectly proportioned fins are of balsa wood. It is six times lighter than the models previously used.

Suspended on a rod or "whirling arm," it will perform in the institute's wind tunnel against gales of varying velocities as the scientists create on a small scale conditions comparable to those encountered by real airships in flight.

From these tests, said members of the Institute staff, builders of lighter-than-air craft may learn where to take off weight, where to put in more, and which parts of their craft to strengthen to meet the tearing, twisting strength of powerful air currents.

FARM INCOME IN 1935 HIGHEST IN SIX YEARS

Under 1929 but Government Figures It at 2 Pct. More Because of Lower Living Costs.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — A gross income to farm operators of $8,508,000,000 during 1935 was reported today by the Agriculture Department, which said it was the highest total in six years.

Although this was more than $3,000,000,000 short of the $11,941,000,000 gross income of 1929, the Department said it represented a "real farm income" of 2 per cent more than during that year. The "real" income was figured by "allowing for the difference in the level of prices paid by farmers for commodities purchased for the family's living.

The tabulation was announced after months of work on 78 different crops and 13 livestock products with all the variable factors of prices and supplies.

The gross farm income was rated 17 per cent higher than the $7,276,000,000 of 1934 and 59 per cent above the 1932 low point of $5,337,000,000.

But last year's income was still far below the totals of more than 11 billions from 1923 through 1929. It was slightly more than half the peak reached in 1919 when gross farm income was $16,935,000,000.

Last year's huge total included $6,703,000,000 cash income from sales of crops and livestock, $1,307,000,000 estimated value of products that were raised and consumed on farms, and $498,000,000 cash received from various Federal farm benefit programs. The agricultural statisticians said these benefit payments amounted to 6 per cent of the gross farm income.

Costs to farm operators to produce the 1935 crops were estimated at $3,970,000,000. This included wages for hired labor, rent, taxes, interest, depreciation on buildings and equipment, and commodities used in production.

Deducting these costs from the gros sincome, there remained $4,538,000,000 as a return to the farm operators for their labor, capital and management, and the unpaid labor of their families. The Department said this was the "highest return since 1929 and 31 per cent larger than in 1934."

The statisticians reported that, while gross income had advanced sharply from the low of 1932, production costs had climbed slowly, so that "the return to farm operators in 1935 was over three times as large as in 1932."

Another improvement listed in the complex statistical study was in the total value of all farm properties—land, buildings, machinery, the livestock and siimlar holdings. This was estimated at $41,811,000,000 last year "or 15 per cent above the low point of $36,235,000,000 in 1933."

This total compared with the peak value for all farm property in 1920 of $78,436,000,000.

LOW BIDS ON RAIL CROSSING ELIMINATION

$566,943 Total of Four Contracts for Subways Under East Side Tracks.

Low bids totaling $566,943 on four contracts for construction of subways under tracks of the Louisville & Nashville, Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroads on St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, were announced yesterday by the Illinois Highway Department. Bids were opened Friday at Springfield.

Work incidental to the construction, such as laying temporary railroad tracks, and replacing power and water lines, will cost an additional amount estimated at $208,203. The entire cost will be defrayed by the Works Progress Administration as part of the Government's grade crossing elimination program.

Low bidders were as follows: Keeley Bros. Construction Co., East St. Louis, paving, grading and drainage, $137,913; G. L. Tarlton Construction Co., St. Louis, substructure, $353,131; Bethlehem Steel Co., Chicago, structural steel, $52,228, and H. H. Hall Construction Co., East St. Louis, steel erection, $23,671. Other expenses, as estimated by companies affected, are: East St. Louis Light & Power Co., $1475; East St. Louis & Interurban Water Co., $6000; Illinois Power & Light Co., $4000; Louisville & Nashville Railroad, $36,642; Pennsylvania, $101,086, and Baltimore & Ohio, $59,000.

Construction will extend for 1883 feet between Collinsville avenue and First street on St. Clair, which at this point is State Route No. 3 and the principal thoroughfare between East St. Louis and the National Stockyards and points north. One subway will be under a group of five tracks of the L. & N. and B. & O. and another, 650 feet northwest, under four tracks of the Pennsylvania.

The roadway will be 46 feet wide and, at the deepest point, 15 feet below the present street level. In addition, 20-foot pavements and sidewalks will be laid at street level to provide access to stores and factories along the thoroughfare. It is expected the work will be completed within a year. Construction will commence shortly after contracts are let, probably within two weeks.

The principal purpose of the subways is to expedite motor traffic, at present subject to much delay due to movement of heavy freight trains. There have been few accidents at the intersections.

TESTIMONY TAKING ENDS IN GEOGHAN OUSTER HEARING

Attorneys to Present Summations Monday; Brooklyn Prosecutor Accused of Negligence.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Presentation of evidence in the 18-day-old Geoghan removal hearing before Gov. Herbert H. Lehman ended today. Lloyd Paul Stryker, counsel for District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Kings County, and Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd rested their cases, winding up the hearing except for the summations Monday.

Geoghan, who was superseded as prosecutor in the Samuel Drukman murder case, is fighting charges preferred by members of an extraordinary grand jury that he was negligent, incompetent and associated with questionable characters.

Todd introduced today evidence intended to show that Leo P. Byk, former Brooklyn slot machine distributor, borrowed large sums while the Drukman murder case was still pending and that the eventual disposition of this cash never was satisfactorily explained. From Abraham Allenberg, lawyer for Frank A. Erickson, a bookmaker, Todd obtained an admission that Byk borrowed $15,000 from Erickson on June 26, 1935, under an agreement that $16,500 should be paid Erickson in return. In addition, Todd introduced grand jury testimony to show that Byk also borrowed more than $10,000 on various insurance policies and $7000 from two banks shortly after he obtained the loan from Erickson.

LIQUOR SMUGGLERS DRIVEN FROM COAST, TREASURY SAYS

Report for Fiscal Year Also States Counterfeit Money in Circulation Was Reduced.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — A successful drive against liquor smugglers and a reduction of counterfeit money in circulation during the last fiscal year were reported today by the law enforcement agencies of the Treasury.

For the first time in 16 years, the report said, "not one foreign smuggling craft" was hovering off the Atlantic Coast when the fiscal year ended June 30. Secret Service agents seized $796,306 of counterfeit currency and coin during the year, a substantial reduction under the $1,493,311 in the previous year.

Seizure of narcotics dropped off from 6777 in 1935-36 to 3280 last year.

The intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau recommended assessment of additional taxes and penalties totaling $31,033,499 last year compared with $20,212,161 in the previous fiscal period.

A total of 15,727 illicit stills were reported seized during the year, of which 402 were found by coast guard planes. Persons arrested in alcohol tax cases aggregated 32,075, of whom 20,721 were convicted.

BARRETT SAYS PENSION MONEY WAS DIVERTED

G. O. P. Candidate Asserts Democrats Used Fund for State Expenses.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARTHASVILLE, Mo., Sept. 12.—Jesse W. Barrett, Republican nominee for Governor, charged in a speech here today at a meeting of the Warren County Farmers' Association that the present State administration had diverted money collected for old age pensions and for relief to meet the ordinary expenses of the State government.

Had there not been that diversion, he asserted, there would have been a deficit in the operating revenues of the State.

"A deficit in operating revenues was avoided," he said, "by creating a deficit in the emergency program of relief and old age assistance."

Barrett accused Gov. Park of ignoring the power to balance the budget given him by a constitutional amendment adopted in 1932 and of approving appropriations $1,500,000 in excess of the anticipated revenues of the State.

"Immediately after these new laws were enacted," Barrett said, "Gov. Park had before him an estimate of anticipated revenue of $14,367,000. He placed his signature of approval on appropriations in the amount of $15,895,000. In other words, with all the new power at his command to keep within revenues, he started with a planned deficit of a million and a half.

"About all that was done under the new budget law by this administration was to appoint Charles C. Carter as Budget Director at an annual salary of $4000, and this itself was a direct violation of the law. The act provided that the chairman of the Tax Commission should, ex-officio, serve as Budget Director and without extra pay. Mr. Carter was given an office which the law did not create and paid a salary which the law did not authorize."

Alvin Bohn. 2837 Osage street was fined $70 by default after policemen had testified he drove his automobile at 70 miles per hour on South Broadway last Aug. 30.

Talmadge Defeat Proves There Was Only One Huey

Georgia Election Shows That Louisiana Dictator Had Imitators, Including Bilbo and Gerald Smith, But No Heir.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The defeat of Gov. Eugene Talmadge for the Georgia senatorship demonstrates that there was only one Huey Long and that although he had several flashy imitators he left no heir.

Talmadge's two-to-one rebuff by 38-year-old Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., followed closely on the defeat of the Bilbo machine in Mississippi and the victory of Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina. where two unknowns vainly attempted to capitalize anti-New Deal sentiment.

If Long had not been assassinated a year ago the senatorial and presidential campaigns this year might have been different. He was unequaled as a rabble rouser and his clownish imitators, such as Talmadge, Bilbo and the Rev. Gerald Smith have merely aped his obvious mannerisms and have been unable to build up an organization in their own localities comparable to the Long dictatorship of Louisiana.

How Bilbo Folded Up.

Bilbo, in his own senatorial campaign, promised to "raise more hell than Huey" if sent to the Senate. After his election he found out that Mississippi was one place and the United States Senate another, and although he talked big in private conversation, he did not dare tangle with Huey on the Senate floor.

He said that he was keeping quiet until he learned the ropes. He needed to learn them. When he opposed a presidential appointment made at the instance of his colleague Senator Pat Harrison he was able to muster only three votes in the Senate. The wily Harrison had friends on both sides of the aisle who were eager to do a personal favor for the chairman of the important Finance Committee.

When Bilbo announced, as a result of this defeat, that he would support former Gov. Martin S. Connor in the Mississippi senatorial primary against Harrison, he had the veteran Senator worried for a while. But President Roosevelt came to Harrison's rescue when he called him to Washington to be present at the White House conference staged to announce there would be no tax increases at the next session of Congress. The unexpected announcement was designed, among other things, to show the Mississippi voters that the President did not make important fiscal decisions without first consulting Harrison.

If Long had been alive he and Bilbo might have forgotten their past grudges and gone after Harrison. Long frequently boasted that he would invade Mississippi and Arkansas to defeat Harrison and Majority Leader Joe Robinson. His death prevented him from carrying out his threats. Robinson won his renomination against virtually no opposition and Harrison, with presidential support, toppled the Bilbo machine. From now on, Bilbo will be just another eccentric Senator. He cannot successfuly say again that he will "out-Huey Huey."

Fooled a Few Capitalists.

Talmadge boasted in and out of Georgia that he and Huey had been good friends and had seen things alike. He, however, sought the votes of the underprivileged and at the same time catered to the big taxpayers of Georgia and the nation. He used some of Long's flamboyant campaigning tactics, both in mannerisms and in language, but about the only persons he fooled outside Georgia were the du Ponts and other Eastern capitalists who contributed to his Southern League to Uphold the Constitution. He was beaten by the Roosevelt forces in the contest for delegates to the national convention and he did not attend the sessions at Philadelphia.

Had Long been alive last June, the Louisiana delegation at the convention would have been under his control and Huey could have been relied on to make trouble for Roosevelt—in the Platform Committee, in the Rules Committee and on the convention floor. Long was a resourceful, relentless fighter, and while he would have lost on the balloting, he would have given color to the proceedings and would have shattered the unanimity with which everything was done by the Roosevelt-Farley machine.

Talmadge had little more than red-gallus showmanship, and Tuesday's primary revealed again that he could not control even his own State.

The Rev. Gerald Smith claims to be Long's political heir although he cannot produce the credentials or the ability to prove his title. He has been cast out of what remains of the Long machine in Louisiana and in desperation has joined the Townsend-Coughlin-Lemke outfit. He fancies himself as a rabble rouser, but his speeches, unlike Long's, just don't make sense when read. Long took great pains in revising his remarks for publication and his speeches were as well organized as his fast-moving mind. Smith is now in the Bilbo-Talmadge class.

What Might Have Been.

In the late Floyd B. Olson, the Farmer-Labor Governor of Minnesota, Long had a friendly rival who might have reorganized the forces that Long had led. Before Long was shot, each was looking forward to the 1940 presidential race and wondered what the other would do. They would have been rivals in the present campaign, since Olson favored the re-election of Roosevelt and Long was getting ready to inflame anti-New Deal sentiment wherever he could find it.

Olson, however, died before he could be sent to the Senate, where he would have had the opportunity to become a national figure. A Long-Olson combination would have overshadowed any of the present puny attempts to capitalize economic discontent. That, however, is in the realm of speculation.

Long, with his ability to sway the masses, in the North as well as the South, would have made it dangerous for Robinson, Harrison, Byrnes and Russell to seek re-election on a "Roosevelt and Me" platform. Long had the ability to lead minor leaders and could have dominated in conferences with the Bilbos, the Talmadges and the other lesser fry. And if he had lived to join with Coughlin, Townsend and Lemke there would have been a real third party threat in the present campaign. But politically he died intestate and there has been no successor to the dubious title of "Kingfish." For which, the Roosevelt,Farley machine should be, and probably is, thankful.

SEPTEMBER CIRCUIT COURT TERM OPENS TOMORROW

End of Vacation Season in Both Civil and Criminal Divisions; Many Cases Waiting.

The September term of Circuit Court will open tomorrow, marking the end of the summer vacation season in both the civil and criminal divisions. During July and August only special matters were heard and no jury cases were tried after the week beginning June 15.

The two equity and the 10 jury courts in the Civil Courts Building will resume with full dockets. There are approximately 200 jury cases on the docket in the assignment court for the first week of the new term. These are damage suits and other litigation requiring juries.

It is expected that many cases will be continued by request and settlements will be announced in others. Those ready for trial will be assigned to the various jury divisions by Presiding Judge J. Wesley McAfee in the order of their position on the docket.

MAN KILLS WIFE HE SAYS HAD AFFAIR WITH FORMER ROOMER

Confesses Cutting Throat of Woman as Two Small Children Looked On.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Sept. 12.—Edward E. Martin, 47 years old, pleaded guilty today of cutting his wife's throat because "she refused to break off an affair with a former roomer." Their two small boys, Kenneth Edward, 7, and Richard, 3, saw their mother killed.

Martin, caretaker at various beach clubs for several years and recently unemployed, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Ralph Pole, an old friend of his, who remanded Martin to the County Grand Jury without bail on a charge of murder.

Martin had walked into the police station with his sons by the hand early today and announced, "I have killed my wife." He said he walked down to the beach intending to drown himself, but heard, "the little fellow" crying and returned to the children.

Commander Van Zandt Wants no Recommendation on International Policy for U. S.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Sept. 12.—Politics and international policies were barred by Commander James E. Van Zandt today as issues at the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"Who will or should be elected president of the United States is not the business of our organization as a body," Van Zandt told national officers at a conference preceding the opening of the encampment Monday. "Nor will I permit the encampment to go on record as recommending any controversial international policy for the United States."

The national council of the encampment approved the program.

West Point Teacher Fatally Shot.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Capt. Eugene C. Smallwood, English instructor at the United States Military Academy, died last night from a bullet wound in the head. Coroner Andrew Calyer said the wound was "apparently self-inflicted," but that no motive had been found to indicate it was intentional.

AKRON OFFICIALS GET THREATS AFTER ACID THROWING ATTACK

Letter Sent to Prosecutor and Judge; 74-Year-Old Evangelist's Young Wife Injured.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Sept. 12.—Amid a series of threats, directed at city and county officials, authorities sought tonight a woman accused by a 74-year-old evangelist's young wife of searing her face with acid.

While police hunted the acid thrower, who attacked Mrs. Madelyn Messner, 25, last night at the back door of the Messner home, Municipal Judge Don Isham received a letter—the latest in a series of anonymous threats—saying: "You saw what happened to Mrs. Messner. You're next."

Judge Isham recently dismissed bigamy charges against Mrs. Messner on the grounds Ohio was without jurisdiction, since she married the evangelist, David A. Messmer, in West Virginia. Messner is superintendent of the Divine Healing Gospel Mission here.

Prosecutor Herman A. Werner, one of the recipients of threatening letters, said a woman member of Messner's congregation was sought at the author of the threats and another woman member as the acid thrower. Physicians said the acid burns may cause Mrs. Messner to lose the sight of her right eye. The letters were all signed "The Mission Committee."

E. R. Millis, Texas Editor, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 12.—E. R. Millis, 41 years old, associate editor of the Houston Chronicle and a political leader in the city and State, died suddenly in his office today. Justice Tom Maes returned a verdict of death from natural causes. Millis, a graduate of Rice Institute here, had been with the Chronicle 11 years. He formerly was connected with the Houston Post and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. His wife, a daughter, three brothers and a sister survive.

JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRAT OFF TEXAS U. PAYROLL

J. Evetts Haley "Fired by Inaction," He Says; On Leave, College Head Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 12.—J. Evetts Haley, New Deal critic, was definitely off the University of Texas faculty payroll today, and whether he gets on again, said Dr. H. Y. Benedict, president, is a question of the future.

Haley, chairman of the Jeffersonian Democrats of Texas, said in a statement that in declining to grant him a leave of absence to "fight the Roosevelt regime" it might be the university has "taken the easy course of firing me by inaction. If so, that alone is an indication of the New Deal tactics."

Dr. Benedict said Haley had not been connected officially with the university since Aug. 31, having obtained a leave of absence Aug. 24.

"He had been engaged in historical research work jointly financed by the General Board of Education in New York and the university, and the 10-year period of the project ended Aug. 31," Dr. Benedict said. "He has done a crackerjack job. Whether he will be reappointed after adoption of the budget for the social science department is a matter for the future."

Whiting GIVES YOU AUTOMATIC HEATING WITHOUT USING HIGH-PRICED FUELS

● There's been a revolutionary change in the heating world. A coal burner has been perfected that, in most cases, costs even less to operate than hand-firing. The Whiting Stoker, instead of costing more, actually costs less! It doesn't waste the fuel that hand-firing does and it burns less expensive coal. Many Whiting owners save $2 to $4 a ton.

You'll also get better, safer heating with a Whiting. There are no tanks or extra equipment to buy. No chance for explosions. Storms can't blow down electric wires and leave you without warmth. Think of no fires to make in the morning —or to "bank" at night! No smoke or ashes! Thermostat temperature control. Even, steady, healthful heating. And savings that should meet payments on the Whiting! Why not have all these comforts and luxuries? Phone or call.

WHAT WHITING OWNERS SAY...

[★ Names upon request]

★ "The year prior to installation of your stoker the cost of coal was $296.75 and the year after only $182.38." (two-family flat building)—Mr. J. C. W.

★ "The trouble-free, automatic features are especially appreciated by Mrs. Wilson, who never has to go to the basement at all any more."—Mr. R. C. W.

★ "For six years the average oil used amounted to $633.28 per year (small bank building). This year with a Whiting the cost was only $235.00." (severe winter of 1935-36)—Mr. D. E. M.

university since Aug. 31, having obtained a leave of absence Aug. 24.

"He had been engaged in historical research work jointly financed by the General Board of Education in New York and the university, and the 10-year period of the project ended Aug. 31," Dr. Benedict said. "He has done a crackerjack job. Whether he will be reappointed after adoption of the budget for the social science department is a matter for the future."

LABOR LEADERS CALLED IN GUILD STRIKE HEARING

Hearst Seeks to Show Discharged Seattle Post-Intelligencer Employes Instigated Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—Edward G. Woods, heading Hearst counsel, obtained a National Labor Board examiner's order here today to subpena Seattle labor leaders and records of the Seattle Central Labor Council in an effort to show that two discharged Post-Intelligencer employes instigated the newsroom strike which closed the paper Aug. 13.

The subpenas will be returnable next week, when the Post-Intelligencer and other Hearst enterprises will offer their defense to the American Newspaper Guild's complaint that Photographer Frank M. (Slim) Lynch and Drama Critic Philip Everhardt Armstrong were discharged for Guild activity.

The paper contends the men were discharged for cause—Lynch for inefficiency and Armstrong for insubordination.

Persons Subpenaed.

The subpena list, submitted to Examiner Edwin S. Smith at the half-day session today, included Claude O'Reilly, president of the Labor Council; Charles P. Doyle, council secretary, and the presidents and secretaries of the unions which have contracts with paper.

At a conference after the close of the session, however, the opposing counsel, Woods and Robert Watts, associate general counsel for the board, reached an agreement that the presidents and secretaries of the unions involved under contract would not be called as witnesses, Woods said. Watts agreed to accept as a fact that the men in the unions involved had been unable to get through a picket line the day of the strike.

Over Woods' objections, Watts produced testimony on how the Seattle chapter of the guild was organized.

Forrest Williams, striking courthouse reporter, who said he had been a Post-Intelligencer employe since 1929, testified he became interested in the Guild movement last January and applied for membership.

Employes "Timid."

"Most of us (the employes) were a little timid," Williams testified, and Woods broke in with an objection. It was overruled and Williams said, "But Lynch was very open, and openly signed the application and openly announced to all he had applied for membership."

Watts asked if City Editor Oliver S. Morris (who testified yesterday) interviewed him about Guild activity. Woods' objection was overruled and Williams said that one day in July "I called the city desk on a news story and Oliver asked me, 'Williams, have you joined the Guild yet?' I said, 'I haven't committed myself.'

"Morris replied, 'You know Mr. Hearst doesn't like to have us belong to that outfit. It would fix salaries at a low level and our ability to get ahead on our own initiative would be stopped by such practice.'"

Woods protested against asserted "coaching" of the witness by Edwin S. Smith, trial examiner. Woods drew from Williams the statement that he and Morris were "fellow employes." Watts, on re-direct examination asked: "Mr. Morris was your boss, wasn't he?" Woods objected to any such distinction, on the ground they were "fellow employes." To which Watts, agreeing to rephrase his question, said: "I presume 'the boss' is the name reserved for 'the chief.'"

Williams testified the Guild had been a secret organization and that it "would be unhealthy" to reveal the membership.

Publishers Protest Endorsed by New York State Group.

By the Associated Press

BOLTON LANDING, N. Y., Sept. 12.—A resolution indorsing the protest of the directors of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association against the alleged action of certain American Federation of Labor affiliates in keeping members of other unions from working was adopted by the New York State Newspaper Publishers' Association at its fall meeting here today.

The resolution, introduced by J. Noel Macy, head of a Westchester County chain of newspapers, was aimed at any practice through which one group of labor unions can interfere with the free contractual relationship of another group of unions and their employers.

Guild Principals in Seattle Newspaper Strike

EVERHARDT ARMSTRONG, RICHARD SELLERS and FRANK M. LYNCH

ARMSTRONG, dramatic critic, and Lynch, photographer, were dismissed by the Post-Intelligencer. The Seattle chapter of the American Newspaper Guild, headed by Sellers, charged they were fired for Guild activity. The newspaper denied the charge, saying they were dismissed for cause.

ROOSEVELT'S SON MAKES CAMPAIGN SPEECH IN IOWA

Asks for President's Re-Election and Says Government Helped Kansas Balance Budget.

MASON CITY, Ia., Sept. 12.—James Roosevelt, son of the President, said in an address today that "bad spots" in the economic system "are being removed." He criticised those who "tell us that it is no good trying to make America better."

Addressing a Democratic rally, he referred to the President as the nation's "general manager." "I come frankly," he said, "to ask your consideration of facts which lead me to believe that the healthy conditions which we now find entitle our general manager, appointed by you in 1932, to continue to direct our national establishment."

Roosevelt referred indirectly to Gov. Landon of Kansas, Republican nominee, by saying the national administration has enabled "many of our state governments to boast that they have balanced their state budget. Just as an example, the State of Kansas has received in grants, loans and loans insured from the Federal Government the amount of $421,120,360.60. Yes, indeed, the budget of the State of Kansas is balanced. I do not believe that the people of Kansas feel that these expenditures have been in vain or wastful."

LEADVILLE OPERA HOUSE, BUILT BY TABOR, BURNS

Pictures and Furnishings, Part of 'Culture' He Gave Colorado City in 80s, Destroyed.

By the Associated Press.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Sept. 12.—The old Leadville Opera House built by H. A. W. Tabor in the 80's burned today.

The fire started in the bar, in the lower part of the building, presumably from a carelessly dropped cigarette. Four old paintings for which Ed Kikany, co-owner of the bar recently refused $3000, were destroyed, along with costly furnishings.

Tabor built the Opera House to bring "culture" to Leadville.

That was when his fortune was in its ascendancy and the world talked of the "luck of the Tabors." From storekeeper, fortune lifted him to multimillionaire mine operator almost overnight. Before he died a quarter of a century ago, however, he was poor again. Ill fortune followed his almost penniless widow, the "Baby Doe" of happier times, to her grave in 1935.

Less than a week ago, while plans were being made to convert the old log courthouse at Buckskin Joe Colo., into a museum of Tabor relics, the stone chimney that had stood for 75 years crashed to earth and wrecked the structure.

MORGENTHAU DENIES NEPHEW WAS ON PAYROLL OF AAA

Republican Committee Says It Listed Him in Wrong Agency; Should Have Been FDIC.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—In a statement yesterday which said that Federal payrolls are "packed and jammed by relatives of ranking administration officials," the Republican National Committee listed a nephew of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as an AAA employe. "This statement is untrue," Morgenthau said today.

Republican headquarters issued this today:

"The Republican National Committee was in error only to the extent of the name of the Federal agency which was paying Mr. Morgenthau's nephew from tax fund.

"Mr. Morgenthau's nephew was until recently an employe of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. A short time ago he was separated from the Federal payroll, and immediately left for Europe.

WISCONSIN PRIMARY RACES COMPLICATED

Third Party, the Progressives, on Ballot, Changing Political Picture.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 12.—Brisk contests for a chance to unseat Gov. Phillip La Follette in the November election were waged by Democratic and Republican aspirants to the governorship today as Wisconsin's primary campaigns moved into the home stretch.

La Follette, who led the insurgent faction out of the Republican ranks in 1934, built it into the Progressive party and was subsequently elected under its banner—will be unopposed on the Progressive ballot in next Tuesday's voting.

Alexander Wiley, Chippewa Falls lawyer, is the Republican candidate bearing the indorsement of the party's State convention. His opponent is John B. Chapple, Ashland editor, twice defeated for a United States Senate seat.

The Democratic convention indorsed Arthur W. Lueck, Beaver Dam attorney. State Senator William B. Carroll of Prairie du Chien, who headed the Republican-Democratic coalition which fought La Follette measures in the 1935 Legislature, is running against Lueck. Wiley and Lueck are newcomers to state politics. Chapple and Carroll have directed their attacks at La Follette rather than their primary opponents.

Wiley assailed President Roosevelt's administration and denounced what he terms "the little new deal at Madison." Lueck described himself as "the only candidate for Governor of this State on any ticket who is supporting President Roosevelt for re-election."

When the Progressives were a Republican faction the primary was Wisconsin's big election. The conservatives and liberals fought it out for the nomination, usually tantamount to election. But the Roosevelt landslide, increasing Democratic activity, and the formation of the third party have apparently changed the political picture. This was indicated in La Follette's recent announcement he would start on an extended speaking tour two days after the primary.

WOMAN ADMITS PLOTTING TO WRECK AND ROB TRAIN

Says She Wanted Money to Get Divorce; Two Attempts to Carry Out Plan Frustrated.

By the Associated Press.

COSHOCTON, O., Sept. 12.—The mother of a four-months-old baby, Prosecutor Russel E. Lyons announced today, confessed she plotted with her brother and two other men to wreck and rob a Pennsylvania passenger train "because I needed money to get a divorce."

The mother, 30-year-old Edith Buckmaster West, and her companions, waived arraignment on charges of obstructing a railroad, and were bound to the grand jury.

Pennsylvania Railroad special officers disclosed after the arrest of the woman, her brother, Albert Buckmaster, 21, Wayne Hartley, 24, and his brother, Norman, 30, that two attempts had been made to wreck passenger trains near Coshocton on the night of Aug. 27. The first attempt was frustrated by John Bank, a farmer, who noticed a loose angle bar from which bolts had been removed as he walked along the tracks near Rock Run. He notified railroad officials and a hurriedly summoned force of track walkers found a second loose angle bar on the Tyndal Bridge spanning the Muskingum River a few hours later.

MISSOURI INSPECTOR CLOSES 8 MORE MINES

Says He Will Shut 1600 More Unless They Take Safety Precautions.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 12.—Arnold Griffith, State Mining Inspector, said today he had closed eight more Central Missouri coal mines in a drive to stop mining disasters in the State because of inadequate ventilation and escape holes.

Griffth, saying there were 1600 mines in the State not complying with Missouri's mining laws, declared he would shut them down unless their owners took immediate steps to provide proper protection for the miners.

"It is unfortunate that six men lost their lives in coal mining disasters in Missouri in the last month," the mining inspector said, "but their deaths have aroused the State to the fact that these mining laws must be enforced to the limit."

Two men were killed when trapped in a mine cave-in near Moberly after a surface fire destroyed the superstructure. Four brothers lost their lives as a result of an attempt to pump water from an abandoned shaft near Fulton.

Griffith said numerous small producers, permitted to "operate 14 to 16 years without State interference," had protested against his department's rigid action.

"Most of these small mines," he continued, "are nothing more than death traps. They are poorly ventilated and in many instances have no escape hole."

Griffith said he would seek the passage of a law at the next legislative session to compel inspection of abandoned mines by his department before they were permitted to reopen. He added both of the State's recent mining tragedies might have been prevented if Missouri had such a law.

The mining inspector said operators of the State's 68 larger amusement caves had indicated to him they would introduce a bill to the next Legislature to put the caves under his department for inspection.

Four Killed in Truck Upset.

By the Associated Press.

DENISON, Tex., Sept. 12.—Three girls and a boy died today from injuries received when the truck in which a group of young people was returning from a party struck a concrete culvert and turned over. The dead: Miss Anna Louise Hogg, 17 years old; Miss Clara Simmons 19; Miss Willie May Lollar, 16, and Jim Muncie, 18. Nine others were injured.

Two Killed in Auto Collision.

By the Associated Press.

ST. MARY'S Kan., Sept. 12.—Mr. and Mrs. James Yeager of Graysville, Ind., were killed and three persons hurt in an automobile collision near here today. The injured: Dr. M. H. Clark of Kansas City and Mr. and Mrs. James M. Wible of Sullivan, Ind.

Stock Market Advances, Retraces Its Steps and Then Shows Tendency To Churn About Without Progress

Indecisive Movement Reflects Disposition of Traders and Investors to Await Clarification of Business Outlook.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The stock market strode ahead early this week but later retraced its steps in a mood of indecision.

Some Wall street circles believed the sentiment was but a passing one and that most still clung to bullish hopes for the long-term.

The tendency of shares to churn around without getting anywhere toward the end of the week reflected, they said, a disposition of traders and investors to await clarification of the fall business outlook.

On this score, the point was made that comparisons of business statistics with a year ago are likely soon to make less spectacular reading inasmuch as current production totals must be measured against the abnormal expansion which was under way at this time last year.

Another factor which tended to distort comparative trends was the labor holiday which fell a week later this year than last.

Sales during the week amounted to 6,732,090 shares, compared with 6,580,590 last week and 10,840,990 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 334,232,724 shares, compared with 215,421,018 a year ago and 258,747,798 two years ago.

Bulk of Business Cash.

Brokers reported the bulk of market activity continued on a cash basis. In some circles, however, comment stressed a revival of interest in low-priced issues, a development which is sometimes symptomatic of increased interest on the part of the speculating public.

So far as the major industrial indices were concerned, observers termed them unexciting but expressed satisfaction at the width of gains over last year. Steel operations and electric power output were estimated a little lower, while freight loadings expanded somewhat more than seasonally.

Meanwhile business improvement over last year was highlighted by August sales reports of retailers showing sharp gains.

Rail bonds distinguished themselves by rising to a new high, while the corporate list generally gave a good account of itself.

U. S. Government obligations tended to level off. Dealers attributed this in some measure to switching by holders from some old Treasury loans into new 2¾ per cent bonds. The latter issue was oversubscribed many times.

Money Market Unchanged.

The money market showed no pronounced changes. The recent stepping up of demand for credit by business continued with "other loans" of Federal Reserve member banks up $23,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday.

Although brokers' loans rose $68,000,000 to $1,052,000,000, financial circles said this reflected principally borrowings by dealers in connection with the Treasury's new bond offering.

The upturn of $40,000,000 in excess reserves lifted the supply of idle bank funds to $2,000,000,000 in the week ended Sept. 9. This implied continued underlying support for security prices, Wall street men said.

Slowest Trade in 3 Weeks.

Stepping stones to recovery were present in Saturday's brief stock market session but the list as a whole was unable to get ahead.

A few specialties accounted for most of the advances while many recent leaders were virtually unchanged and several were thrown for sizable losses.

Although changes in the business and industrial picture were for the better, if anything, some traders were inclined to take profits with them on their week-end holiday.

There was a disposition to withhold commitments pending the Maine election which, a few analysts thought, might influence the market one way or the other.

It was the slowest day's proceedings in about three weeks, only 494,700 shares changing hands. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 68.5, duplicating its decline of Friday.

U. S. Steel got off to a brisk start as hopeful forecasts were made of expanding mill operations over the remainder of 1936. It ended ⅜ of a point up at 72¼. Bethlehem lost ⅞ to 70¼.

No Wage Increase Now.

Of interest to the market, but coming after it closed was announcement that President Fairless of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., chief operating subsidiary of U. S. Steel, had notified workers an increase in wages could not be granted at this time.

Favorable earnings statements and boosted dividends drew attention to selected shares.

Although the outlook for railroad, automobile, merchandise and utility companies had lost none of its brightness, the majority of stocks in these divisions merely marked time.

Even building shares failed to respond to figures released by F. W. Dodge Co. showing residential construction started in August reached a new high level since 1931, and was 148 per cent above the same 1935 month.

On the upside fractions to 2 or more points were Atlantic Gulf & West Indies at 28½, Packard 12⅜, N. Y. Central 45, Radio 11⅛, Pressed Steel Car preferred 32¾, Zenith Radio 37¾, Anaconda 40, Blaw-Knox 17⅞, American Can 125½ and Superior Steel 18¼.

Stocks That are Down.

Down as much were du Pont at 161⅝, American Water Works 25⅝, Loew's 61⅝, Douglas Aircraft 13¾, Kennecott 47⅞, Westinghouse Chrysler 114⅛, General Motors 67¼, Paramount 10⅞, Warner Bros. 13⅝, Kennecott 47⅞, Westinghouse 143½, Western Union 90¾, General Baking 14½, Delaware & Hudson 47 and Consolidated Edison 43.

Bonds improved. Corn at Chicago advanced ⅝ to 1⅛ cents a bushel and wheat was unchanged to up ¼. Cotton was unchanged to 35 cents a bale higher. Foreign currencies were slightly mixed in terms of the dollar.

Day's 15 Most Active Stocks.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY SHOWS MIXED TREND

Index of Associated Press Declines to 93.6 From 95.2 Week Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Industrial activity usnered in the fall season with mixed trends obscuring the picture.

The Associated Press index declined to 93.6 from 95.2 a week ago, and compares with 70.2 in the same period last year.

Advances in automobile output, residential building and freight carloadings were more than offset by declines in steel mill operations, cotton manufacturing activity and electric power production.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Composite Index	93.6	95.2	70.2
Automobile Prod.	68.2	67.0	15.6
Steel Mill Activity	91.5	96.0	66.7
Cotton Mfg. Activity	122.2	122.8	86.2
Electric Power Prod.	115.7	117.4	101.4
Residential Bldg. (x)	65.1	63.8	42.6
Total Carloadings	72.2	72.1	64.3

Silver imports were listed at $16,637,249 last month compared with $6,574,291 in July.

Gold exports in August were $31,542 compared wtih $695,362 in July, while silver exports were $142,840 and $138,121 for the respective months.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 12.—Wheat futures closed more than a penny higher in sympathy with Friday's advance in Winnipeg, good milling demand and a broader outside interest.

Cotton offerings were light, except for week-end realizing and prices closed higher on good trade calling and Bombay buying.

London and Paris closed on Saturday.

Scrap Steel Advance Report.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Dow Jones & Co., in a Pittsburgh dispatch, said today steel scrap had touched the highest price since September, 1929, with No. 1 heavy melting quoted at $17.75 per ton. This was 25 cents above the previous sale. The dispatch added indications were sales at $18 were in the offing because of continued scarcity and the increased premium for railroad scrap.

COPPER IS HIGHEST SINCE APRIL, 1931

Export Sales at 9.87 1-2—Metal Features Market of the Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Copper monopolized attention in metal trade the past week.

Export sales at 9.87½ cents a pound, cif. European base ports, went to a premium of ⅛ cent a pound over the domestic base, and established the highest level since April, 1931.

Strength abroad was emphasized in view of announcement by foreign producers, under the restriction scheme, of a step-up in production from 75 to 80 per cent of capacity, effective Oct. 1, following a similar advance of 5 per cent on Aug. 1.

While armament buying explained part of the foreign activity, industrial consumption abroad has expanded with Russia and Italy becoming noteworthy buyers. France was also buying at London against French devaluation.

While opposition to a rise in the domestic base of 9¾c a pound is still apparent, a move upward is considered as more than a likely possibility in some quarters.

A show of strength and a partial reaction in tin ended with prices net 1 cent a pound higher. Advance in sterling rates and growing confidence in prospects for a renewal of restriction agreements at the end of the year were dominating influences.

Zinc was active and firm. Persistent strength at London revived talk of a possible further advance in the domestic base. Statistically the situation is strong.

Lead buying revived in an impressive manner. Sales for the week weer understood to be double the previous week. Buying for October shipment has been large.

Shut-downs for Labor day cut steel ingot output two points to 70 per cent of capacity. A pick-up is expected in view of the impending demand from the automobile industry.

Antimony was quiet and unchanged, with little new business coming to light.

Commodity Prices Rebound to Within Fraction of Year's Peak

Bullish Government Crop Reports Exert Influence—Industrial Staples Continue to Climb.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Bullish Government crop reports and buoyant trade statistics prodded commodity prices to within a fraction of the year's peak this week.

Industrial staples continued to climb into th highest range of the recovery movement. Insistent demand for metals, spurred by heavy orders from leading steel centers, advanced steel scrap and tin quotations sharply.

Many branches of heavy industry were important contributers to this rise. Building in all its phases maintained a sharply contra-seasonal expansion. Railroads took steadily increasing steel tonnage in the form of new equipment, and advance purchases of metal by motor manufacturers for new 1937 models assumed substantial proportions.

The Associated Press weighted index of wholesale commodity prices rose to 81.26 of the 1926 average, from 80.29 a week ago and compares with 76.41 last year.

Farm Products Sweep Up.

Farm products swept abruptly higher on two crop reports, corn and cotton. The grain estimate was little changed from last month, the lowest in 55 years. Analysts expect final harvest figures to show much the same result, as any improvement in weather conditions from now on will have but slight effect. The grains, corn, wheat and rye, were slightly higher.

Slashing estimates of the cotton outturn, 1,360,000 bales, Government commodity men recorded the largest condition change the trade has seen in more than a decade. Prices responded with a quick run-up, some of which was subsequently lost.

Textiles were strong; wool, silk and cotton cloth sharing the rise. The latter showed effects of the crop report as well as a tight spot condition. Factoring circles say retail demand has been so heavy wholesalers have placed sufficient orders with manufacturers to keep them operating at capacity for many weeks.

Foods were mixed, eggs, cocoa and flour putting the index up despite dips in sugar, lard and butter. Livestock quotations supplied the only major setback, a slight bulge in cattle prices being more than offset by declines in hogs and lambs.

Comparative Figures.

The index with its components, based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

RETAIL AUTO FINANCING $1,072,479,266 IN 7 MO

Compares With $692,586,911 in 1935—July Total Below June.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Retail automobile financing during July is reported by the Census Bureau at $176 201,992, a decrease of 9.6 per cent under June, but 47.6 per cent over the same month a year ago.

For the first seven months of this year, this financing totaled $1,072,479,266, compared with $692,586,941 for the similar 1935 period. In addition, the financing per car turned upward for the seven months this year, being listed at $401, compared with $369 in the corresponding period last year.

The Commerce Department reports that the sharp increase in cotton cultivation in Brazil has pushed up the demand there for cotton gins and presses.

Imports of such equipment last year are believed to be the largest on record, the department reports, adding that 98 per cent of these shipments were from the United States.

The Commerce Department reports that daily average sales of variety stores in August were 9.5 per cent under July, but 11 per cent higher than August, 1935. For the first eight months of this year, sales were 7.5 per cent above the similar period last year.

Labor Department figures indicate that recent retail food prices have advanced more rapidly in West-South Central cities than in other sections.

On Aug. 18, the department reports, prices in Dallas, Houston, Little Rock and New Orleans averaged 1.9 per cent higher than on July 14, the greatest advance for selected cities in a single territory. The selected Middle Atlantic cities recorded a drop of three-tenths of 1 per cent during the period.

Advices to the Commerce Department from representatives in foreign countries include:

India—Mica exports to United States increase sharply in second quarter.

Great Britain—Leather imports increase appreciably and exports decline slightly in second quarter.

China—Imports and exports of cigarettes record substantial drop in first seven months of this year.

Poland — Monetary restrictions may cut imports of American typewriters.

DEALERS BORROW TO BUY NEW U. S. ISSUE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The $6 000,000 bulge in loans to broke and security deaeirs this week seen in banking circles, the resu of borrowing occasioned by rece Treasury financing operations rather than any sharp revival in stoc market takings.

Dealers have been borrowing from banks in New York City, analyst say, to assist in accumulating Treasury notes. These, in turn will be exchanged for new 2½ per cent Government bonds now quoted—on a when, as, and if issued basis—at substantial premiums.

Loans to brokers and dealers b member banks in New York City the latest Reserve Bank statement shows, compared as follows:

Week ended Sept. 9	$1,052,000,000
Previous week	984,000,000
Same week last year	903,000,000

Short Interest Smaller.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The total short interest in the New York Stock Exchange was 974,338 shares as of the close Aug. 31, compared with 996,399 shares on July 31, the exchange announced today.

$20,000,000 Gold Movement From France to U. S. in Last Two Days

Flow of Metal Reaches Aggregate of $75,000,000 for Month—Range of Exchange Rates Is Outfeatured.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The movement of gold out of France assumed considerably more importance in foreign exchange quarters this week than fluctuations in leading monetary units.

Off to a slow start, the movement widened appreciably as the days passed until on Friday the largest sum engaged on a single day since the exodus began on Aug. 7 was reported $12,540,000.

This steady drain on the banking resources of France coincided with fresh political and economic tension in the country, especially in her relationship with Spain, and in some quarters was believed to have been stimulated by decision of the Government to adopt a huge rearmament program.

The franc gave every evidence of being officially supported at times, but notwithstanding this, the rate in terms of the dollar held at or a trifle below the gold point of 6.58⅜ cents most of the week. Holland guilders suffered a sharp sinking spell at one time, but subsequently recovered a portion of the loss. Swiss francs were more stable.

The British pound sterling attained its highest level in more than two years during the week at $5.06.

Scandinavian and far-Eastern rates showed no important change on balance.

Leading foreign currencies showed little change in terms of the dollar Saturday.

The French franc remained at its gold export point of 6.58⅜ cents, unchanged from Friday. International banking quarters reported the engagement of $8,059,000 in gold at the Bank of France for shipment to New York. This was the second day a large sum had been drained from the country's central bank and brought to around $75,000,000 the amount secured within the past month.

Holland guilders moved up .03 of a cent and Swiss francs improved a lesser amount. The British pound sterling yielded ⅛ of a cent to $5.05⅞, or just under the two-year peak registered Friday.

In London the dollar was 1-16 of a cent higher at 5.05 15-16, and in Paris the America unit ended at an equivalent of 6.583 cents to the franc.

LOW-PRICED RAILROAD BONDS FEATURE WEEK

Present and Prospective Car Loading Figures Cited as Influence.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The bond market rendered a satisfactory account of itself last week, with rail liens thrusting forward to new highs and a handful of industrials running up sharp gains.

Demand for carrier issues was attributed to the better than usual vitality shown by freight carloadings and current estimates that shipment of freight will reach a peak for the year of 800,000 or more cars a week in October.

As in recent weeks, buying of rails centered in medium and low-priced brackets. Prominent on the upside were Boston & Maine 5s of 1967, Northwestern General 4s, Illinois Central 4s of 1952, Lehigh Valley General 5s, and New Haven and Missouri Pacific liens.

Others in the corporate division which ran up sharply on volume were American Type Founders 5s, American Writing Paper 6s and the certificates, and Postal Telegraph 5s.

Trading in the foreign department was comparatively uneventful except for buoyancy in Polish issues.

New Treasury Issue.

Secretary Morgenthau reported that the new treasury bonds had been largely oversubscribed. Treasury loans levelled off toward the end of the week.

Dealers reported a good deal of switching out of old treasury issues into the new 2¾ per cent bonds. It was said that banks were the most active in such transfers.

New financing fell last week, in spite of the flotation of the $55,000,000 New York State issue. Banking quarters said they expected some expansion of new financing in the period directly ahead.

The money market was uneventful. The principal factors were the continued quickening in the demand for loans for business and a rise of $40,000,000 in excess reserves of member banks of the Federal Reserve System to $2,000,000,000. The upturn in idle bank funds was seen in investment circles as according good support to the loan market.

Rail Average at New High.

All divisions of the domestic corporation list edged higher in the bond market at final session as active trading carried a number of liens to new peaks for the year.

Total sales in the two-hour session were $5,827,000, face value, compared with $5,912,000 a week ago.

The market followed closely its pattern of the past week with low and medium priced loans taking the play from other types.

New high ground for the year was occupied by the Associated Press average of 20 rails, which stood at 95.9, up .2 of a point. It was the seventh successive day in which the feat was achieved. The average for 10 low-yield bonds also moved to a new 1936 peak at 112.4, up .1 of a point. Industrial and utility issues used in the compilation advanced for gains of .2 and .1 of a point, respectively.

Rail loans outstanding on the upside included Boston & Maine 5s of 1967, up 1¼ ot 83¼; Central New England 4s, up 2 at 56; Northwestern 4, stamped, up 2 at 45, and Denver & Rio Grande 4s, up 1 at 33½.

Convertible Bonds Off.

Convertible bonds again sold off, Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3½s losing 2½ to 129½, Allis Chalmers 4s dropping 1 to 156, Chesapeake Corporation 5s declining 1¼ to 151⅛ and Studebaker 6s dipping ½ to 114¾.

U. S. Government loans tapered off lightly as trading interest lagged, the majority of active issues losing 1-32 to 3-32.

Minor fractions also ruled a quiet foreign group, where slightly higher prices predominated. Polish 7s continued to move up and added a point at 83.

PETROLEUM SHARES RALLY ON THE CURB

Gulf Oil Is Leader—Narrow Changes in Other Issues on Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12. — Rallying tendencies in petroleum shares under leadership of Gulf Oil contrasted with narrow changes in other curb market stocks today.

Trading volume picked up for the two-hour session, sales totalling 141,000 shares against 111,000 the previous Saturday.

Gulf Oil got away to a running start and moved steadily up to close at 96, a new 1936 high, for a net gain of 5¼ points. Trading in this issue had been unusually heavy all week, following announcement stockholders would soon vote on a plan to increase the capital stock. Other oil shares trailing along into higher ground included Creole Petroleum at 24 and International Petroleum at 35¼.

Elsewhere price movements lacked uniformity. Shares closing higher included Aluminum Co., American Gas, Bower Roller Bearing, Hudson Bay and United Gas preferred.

Losers included American Cyanamid "B," Commonwealth Edison, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Excello Aircraft, Technicolor, Niagara Hudson and Crocker Wheeler.

Quiet Trade at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12. — Chicago stocks held to a narrow range in a quiet trade today. Scattered specialties scored modest gains and there were offsetting losses but on the whole prices showed little change.

DEALERS BORROW TO BUY NEW U. S. ISSUES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The $68,000,000 bulge in loans to brokers and security deaelrs this week is seen in banking circles, the result of borrowing occasioned by recent Treasury financing operations rather than any sharp revival in stock market takings.

Dealers have been borrowing from banks in New York City, analysts say, to assist in accumulating Treasury notes. These, in turn, will be exchanged for new 2¾ per cent Government bonds now quoted—on a when, as, and if issued basis—at substantial premiums.

Loans to brokers and dealers by member banks in New York City, the latest Reserve Bank statement shows, compared as follows:

Week ended Sept. 9—$1,052,000,000
Previous week— — — 984,000,000
Same week last year— 903,000,000

Short Interest Smaller.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The total short interest in the New York Stock Exchange was 974,338 shares as of the close Aug. 31, compared with 996,399 shares on July 31, the exchange announced today.

LOCAL STOCK PRICES ARE MAINLY HIGHER

Trading Volume for Week About on Par With That of Preceding Period.

The volume of business for the holiday week was about on a par with that of preceding week, with the market mainly higher. Several prominent issues, however, lost fractions as result of the period's trading. Brewery stocks were little changed. Scruggs was a higher feature. Missouri Portland and Burkart closed unchanged.

The bond section was featured by $59,000 turnover in local traction issues, which rose a point each. Scullin Steel 6s were 5½ points better.

Sales in Saturday's session were as follows: Burkart new, 60 at 26½, up ⅛; Burkart preference, 45 at 32½, unchanged; Falstaff, 25 at 9¼, unchanged; Hamilton-Brown, 25 at 2⅝, unchanged; Hydraulic-Press Brick, 60 at 1¼, unchanged; International Shoe, 15 at 48¾, up ¼, and 4 at 48½; McQuay-Norris, 35 at 59, unchanged; National Candy, 20 at 11, unchanged; Scullin Steel preference, 25 at 6, up ½; Southwestern Bell preferred, 10 at 125, down ¼, and 2 at 125¼; Wagner Electric, 15 at 33¾, down ⅛, and 5 at 33½; Scullin Steel 6s, $1000 at 52, up ½; United Railways 4s, C. COTTON TRADE ADJUSTS TO REVISED OUTLOOK Crop Indication of 11,121,000 Bales Is Below General Expectations.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The cotton trade during the week was forced to adjust itself to the drastic change in the prospective statistical position indicated by the Government crop report of last Tuesday. Considerable reduction in yield figures had been generally expected as a result of August weather conditions, but the September crop indication of 11,121,000 bales was far below general expectations. It was followed by heavy general buying which rushed the price of December from 11.49 to 12.27, making an advance of more than $4.50 per bale from the low price touched late last month. The more urgent demand then tapered off with the advance checked by increased hedging. December closed at 12.17 compared wtih 11.65 at the close the previous Saturday.

The market's responses to the reduction of 1,360,000 bales in the crop indication as compared with the Aug. 1 figures was modified by fear of the increasing new crop movement. But while hedging became more active there was also an increase in trade demand. Reports from the South indicated a generally firm basis.

Meanwhile, optimistic views as to probable domestic requirements were encouraged by activity in the primary cloth markets after publication of the crop figures, and estimates placing domestic consumption for August at 571,000 bales against 603,000 in July and 408,000 in August a year ago.

In some quarters uncertainty was expressed, however, as to export outlets arising from talk of larger crops abroad, political uncertainties and doubt as to the ability of some countries to secure sufficient dollar exchange to finance their normal requirements of American cotton.

$11,518,000 GAIN IN TOTAL BANK DEPOSITS

Loans and Discounts Reach a New High for Year at $154,745,000.

Total deposits in St. Louis Clearing House member banks increased $11,518,000, of which $7,620,000 were demand deposits, according to the weekly statement issued as of the close of business Friday. The total deposits were $549,327,000 and demand deposits $290,056,000. Bank deposits increased $4,016,000 to $158,690,000, while time deposits decreased $118,000 to $100,581,000. Loans and discounts reached a new high for the year at $154,745,000, an increase of $2,646,000 over the preceding period. Bonds and stocks account decreased $1,178,000 to $266,803,000. Total resources increased $13,684,000 to $607,089,000; total lawful reserve increased $7,906,000 to $81,913,000.

Total clearings last week (5 days) amounted to $70,100,000, compared with $76,500,000 the preceding week. Debits to individual accounts last week totaled $104,200,000 compared with $114,700,000 the previous week. The daily average debits to individual accounts last week (5 days) was $20,840,000 compared with $19,160,000 the previous week.

Local money rates were as follows: Prime commercial paper, ¾ per cent; customers' loans, 1½@5 per cent; loans secured by warehouse receipts, 1@5 per cent.

CORN ADVANCE FEATURE OF GRAIN TRADE

Covering by Shorts in September Delivery Helps Wheat Market to Average Higher.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Activity of demand with scarcity of sellers hoisted corn 2 cents a bushel in numerous transactions today, and helped the wheat market to average higher.

Pronounced strength shown by corn was especially manifest in September contracts, which rose to $1.14¼ cents a bushel, with lively purchasing credited to traders who were short of supplies and were disturbed over the small amount of corn obtainable for delivery. The open interest in September corn contracts here totals more than 5,000,000 bushels, with only 10 trading days left this month.

Rains throughout much of the Middle West were looked upon as bullish concerning corn because of being unfavorable for movement of corn to market.

Argentine Corn Question.

Corn closed firm, ⅝@1⅛ cents up compared yesterday's finish, Sept. 1.13¼@⅜, Dec. 96@96⅛, May 91¼@½, wheat unchanged to ¼ higher, Sept. 1.12⅝@¾, Dec. 1.12@1.12⅛, May 1.10¾@⅞, oats showing ¼@½ cent bulge, Dec. 42⅞@43, and rye varying from ¼ decline to ⅛ advance.

Results in provisions were unchanged to 10 cents dearer.

Some of the uneasiness back of today's buying of corn was ascribed to doubts concerning the quality of large quantities of Argentine corn now on ocean passage to the United States. A shipment of corn from Argentine reported yesterday as having arrived out of condition at New Orleans proved to be only 20,000 bushels in a cargo of 65,000 bushels, but the incident served to arouse considerable anxiety as to other Argentine corn en route. On the other hand, the weekly weather forecast today was of a character which served to dispel fears of any immediate frost damage to the domestic crop of corn.

Upturn in Wheat.

Upturns of Chicago wheat prices were stimulated by firmness of the Liverpool and Winnipeg markets, but on account of week-end profit-taking the gains here were not held. Liverpool wheat climbing was reported as partly due to adverse weather for crops in Argentina and Australia, although scattered showers over some Argentine areas today were given mention. Light to fair rains in western and southwestern sections of domestic winter wheat territory were construed as bearish in regard to wheat, being favorable for seeding.

Cables advised that Italy will have to import about 36,000,000 bushels of wheat to meet her needs, and that the wheat yield in Great Britain this season is 12 per cent less than last year. Bulls were disappointed, however, by estimates that export sales of Canadian wheat today were only around 500,000 bushels.

Rye, oats and provisions borrowed firmness from corn.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 21,690,000 bushels, corn 8,097,000. Open interest in wheat was 90,883,000 bushels, and in corn 51,024,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 12.—No futures in corn or wheat markets received bids today nor any offered.

At Winnipeg wheat opened ¼@½c higher and early was ⅜@1c higher. The close was ¼c higher.

Liverpool wheat opened 1⅛@2⅛d higher and closed 1⅛@1⅜d up.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was ½@1c higher. Supply was limited and the demand fair. Order buyers furnished the main outlet. Corn was unchanged to ½c higher early and mainly 1c lower late. Start of the market was dull as buyers and sellers were apart, but later holders lowered their figures and a fair business was transacted. A mill and a feeder bought two cars early while industries took supplies late. Premiums were lower about 1c to 2c under the previous day's levels. Oats were ½c higher. Supply was somewhat larger, but buyers and sellers found it difficult to get together and a slow trade resulted. Elevators and feeders were in the transactions reported.

Local wheat receipts which were 12,000 bushels, compared with 21,000 a week ago and 63,000 a year ago, included 8 cars local. Corn receipts, which were 57,000 bushels, compared with 18,000 a week ago and 27,000 a year ago, included 38 cars local. Oats receipts which were 12,000 bu., compared with 38,000 a week ago and 54,000 a year ago, included 6 cars local. Hay receipts were 1 car through.

g Market Starts Week Higher, but Prices React on Some Later.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Sept. 12.—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Receipts Saturday: Hogs 400 through; cattle 750; calves 200; sheep 50.

Despite the fact that hogs got off to a better start the past week, downward revisions in price during late sessions resulted in weights from 170 lbs. up showing a decline of 10@15c, while lighter descriptions from 160 lbs. down were unevenly 25@50c higher than the preceding week's close. Light pigs were up most. Sows were mostly steady. Receipts approximated 38,000 as compared with actuals of 34,999 the previous week and 26,899 the corresponding week last year. A top of $11.70 was recorded at the high time of the week, with final deals varying from $11.35 down. Closing sales of 190@250 lb. averages were largely $11.15@11.25. Better 260@300 lbs $10.65@11.15. Better 160@180 lbs cleared a $10.90@11.15, 140@160 lbs $10@10.65 and 100@130 lbs $8.50@8.75. Packing sows went at $8.75@9.50. One year ago this week hog tops ranged from $11.85@12.15.

CATTLE—Receipts 750; calves 200; compared with close of last week: Native and Western steers, heifers and mixed yearlings 25@50c higher; beef cows 25c higher; cutters and low cutters and bulls steady; vealers 75c higher; stock cattle steady; tops for the week: 1244 and 1037 lb. steers, $10; mixed yearlings, $9.50; heifers, $9.35; Western steers, $7.75; beef cows, $5.75; sausage bulls, $5.25; vealers, $10; stock steers, $6.60; bulks for the week: Native steers, $7.75@9.60; good and choice steers $8.35@9.85; Western grass steers, $5.35@7.50; heifers and mixed yearlings, $6@9; beef cows, $4.25@5; cutters and low cutters, $3@4; stocker and feeder steers, $5@6.

SHEEP—Receipts 50. Compared with Friday of last week: Fat lambs 25@50c lower; other classes steady; top lambs for the week, $10.25; bulk, $9@10; late bulk of all interests, $9@9.50; buck lambs $1 less; throwouts, $5@6; a few yearlings, $7@7.50; fat ewes, $3.50 down.

Horses and Mules.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Sept. 12.—A few more buyers from territory east of this market were here in the horse and mule division the past week, but demand, for horses at least, was none too aggressive and sales were barely steady. Mules, on the other hand, were little changed.

Young mares with good colts and attractive fillies sold to fairly good advantage, but little cheap material and geldings of all sizes were hard to dispose of. The mule trade was satisfactory on colts of all kinds with the exception of smooth mouthed offerings. Those animals possessing age had to have a lot of quality in order to bring fair prices.

Good prices for cotton should aid the Southern trade, but dealers advise shippers to buy their stock conservatively in the country.

*NATIVE HORSE QUOTATIONS.

Good to choice draft, $125@160; medium to good draft, $100@125; good to choice chunks, $100@125; smooth-mouthed chunks, $80@110; large farm mares, $125@150; medium farm mares, $90@110; fillies, yearlings and twos; small, common, $30@50; good size, $60@85; extra size and quality, $120@160 (horse colts sell $15@25 per head less than fillies); good Southern mares, $75@100; small Southern mares, $40@60; small cheap horses, $30@50.

*MULE QUOTATIONS.

Farm mules, 15.2 to 16 hands, $110@140; colt mules, good size and bone, $100@150; colt mules, small, $60@85; draft mules, $125@150; mine mules, 15.3 to 16 hands, $120@140; mine mules, 14 to 15 hands, $75@100; choice cotton mules, 15.1 to 16 hands, $135@160; choice cotton mules, 14.2 to 15 hands, $110@125; small green mules over 3 years old, $40@70.

*Quotations are for average animals and do not cover those of outstanding quality or the very cheapest grade.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY STOCKYARDS.

Mississippi Valley Stockyards at St. Louis officially reports the market as follows:

CATTLE—Steers, mixed yearlings and heifers 25@50c higher, compared with last Friday, with the lighter-weight steers and lower-priced heifers and mixed yearlings showing the most gain. All classes were in active demand. Beef cows sold mostly 25c higher, while cutters and low cutters were generally steady. Bulls were unchanged. Vealers advanced 75c. Stockers and feeders registered a 25c upturn. Price ranges for the week: Fed steers, mixed yearlings and heifers, $6.50@8.50; better kinds up to $9.25, and strictly choice quotable around $10. Grassy descriptions, $4@6; beef cows, $4.25@5; cutters and low cutters, $3@4; top sausage bulls, $5.25; top vealers, $10; bulk of the stocker and feeder cattle, $4@6.

HOGS—Market closed the week 35@40c lower on hogs weighing 170 lbs. and up, while pigs and light lights advanced 15@25c; packing sows about steady. Price ranges for the week: 180 to 250s, $11.15@11.65; 260 to 300s, $10.75@11.55; 140 to 160s, $10@10.75; 100 to 130s, $8.25@9.50; packing sows, $8.75@9.75.

SHEEP—Most lamb sales are 50@75c lower than last Friday. For the week, bulk of the good lambs, $9@10. On the early rounds choice kinds to shippers and small killers were quotable up to $10.25; throwouts, $5@6, with those going to the country bringing $6.50; bucks discounted $1; sheep steady, fat ewes mostly $3@3.50.

PRICE ADVANCES FOLLOW EARLY COTTON DECLINE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Early declines were followed by advances in cotton today on trade buying and covering.

December contracts, after selling off to 12.12, or 5 points net lower, advanced to 12.20 and closed at 12.17. The general market closed steady, net unchanged to 7 points higher.

The opening was around 2 points lower to 2 points higher. Buying on Liverpool cables was supplied by overnight hedging from the South and week-end liquidation, but offerings were absorbed on declines of 4 to 7 points and the market later firmed on a more active demand. Closing quotations were close to the best, with January and later deliveries steady.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearances at the end of the week was estimated at 56,000 bales against 32,000 last year.

Spot steady; middling, 12.55.

New Orleans Cotton Market.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—Cotton futures closed steady, net 2 points down to 6 points up. October, 12.12c; December, 12.13@12.14c; January, 12.11b; March, 12.08c; May, 12.04@12.05c; July, 12.01c.

DIVIDEND MEETING RESULTS

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 12.—Directors of the Electric-Auto Lite Co. authorized distribution of $811,350 in dividends at their meeting. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on preferred stock was declared payable Oct. 1 to holders of record Sept. 23, and a dividend of 60 cents on the 1,221,000 common shares of the company payable Oct. 15 to holders of record Oct. 1.

The company formerly paid a quarterly dividend of 30 cents a share earlier in the year but recently has declared dividends at irregular periods. The last dividend of 50 cents a share was paid to common stockholders on Aug. 15.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Directors of Diamond Shoe Corporation declared today a common dividend of 50 cents and the regular quarterly of $1.62½ on the preferred, both payable Oct. 1 to stock of record Sept. 21. Previously 25 cents quarterly was paid on the common. The company is a manufacturer and wholesaler of shoes with plants in Massachuetts and New Hampshire and headquarters here.

Directors of Chickasha Cotton Oil Co. voted against declaration of a capital stock dividend for the September quarter. The action, a statement by the company said, resulted from the Government's forecast of "an exceedingly small cotton crop for the State of Oklahoma. The directors resolved in order to preserve and maintain the excellent financial condition of the company that we declare no dividend at the present time." the announcement concluded. Previously the company paid special dividends of 50 cents on January 2, April 1 and July 1. Chickasha Cotton Oil Co. producers of cotton oil and other cotton by-products at plants in Texas and Oklahoma. Its offices are at Chickasha, Ok.

HOW MAINE HAS GONE IN PAST ELECTIONS

Politicians Striving for Advantage Monday as Pointer on November Outcome.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—The saying, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," has turned students of politics towards the vote of Maine in past elections. The State election will be held Monday.

Democrats in past years have considered a Maine victory in any major State contest, or a reduced Republican majority, as a harbinger of national success in November. On the other hand, for the same reason, Republicans strive for return of the large majorities that once marked their victories here.

The election in 1932 of Democratic Governor Brann is credited by many persons with having been the first indication of the Roosevelt landslide.

While placing much faith in Maine as an indicator of the national trend, politicians are aware however, that, five times since the "As goes Maine" slogan originated in 1840, its State election results have not forecast accurately the national result in November.

The last time Maine went Democratic in a presidential election was in 1912 when Wilson gained a plurality over Taft and Roosevelt.

Governor and President.

The Maine vote for Governor and President in presidential election years since 1912, follows:

GOVERNOR.		PRESIDENT.
—1912—
		Taft (R)	26,545

Senate in Presidential Years.

The following table shows the vote for Senator in presidential years in which Maine Senators were chosen by direct vote of the people since 1912. It also indicates the number of Democratic and Republican congressmen elected in Maine and the majority party in the Senate and House in those years:

MAINE. SENATOR.		House.	NATION. Senate.	House.
•Hale (R)		4 Rep.	Dem.	Rep.
Fernald (R)	81,369	(short term)
Johnson (D)	69,486

Holmes (D)	63,429
—1932—
(no Senator elected)		2 Dem. 1 Rep.	Dem.	Dem.

Maine will vote for only three representatives Monday as a result of reapportionment in 1932.

REFEREE APPROVES PURCHASE OF WINKLE TERRA COTTA CO.

Bondholders' Committee Given Right to Buy Assets for $75,000.

Purchase of the assets of the Winkle Terra Cotta Co. by a committee representing bondholders at a price of $75,000 was approved yesterday by Referee in Bankruptcy John A. Hope. Application to sell the assets had been filed last month by Harry S. Gleick, liquidating trustee of the firm.

The bondholders, comprising members of the Winkle family, will pay $2500 in cash and issue new bonds for the remainder of the purchase price.

The company at 5739 Manchester avenue, was operated by the Winkle family until 1930, when it was sold to R. F. Grady for $80,000 cash and a bond issue of $160,000. Interest on the bond issue has been in default since Jan. 2, 1933. The company filed a voluntary petition under the amended bankruptcy law in 1934.

CHANGES IN MARRIAGE COURTS

Catholic Church Seeks to Prevent Fraud in Annulments.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 12. — Changes in Catholic Diocesan marriage courts throughout the world, including a provision to prevent fraud in annulments, were ordered today by the Congregation of the Sacraments.

The decree asserted the church had been accused by its enemies and by ill-informed persons of favoring divorce through Diocesan tribunals but that actually the tribunals merely decide the validity of the marriage.

LAST OF AL BRADY GANG ARRESTED IN KENTUCKY

Charles Geisking Taken to Indianapolis for Trial on Charge of Killing Officer.

By the Associated Press.

HENDERSON, Ky., Sept. 12.—Charles Geisking, arrested here on suspicion and later identified as the last member of the Al Brady gang at large, waived extradition late today and was returned to Indianapolis, where he is wanted on a charge of killing Police Sergt. Richard Rivers.

Geisking, also wanted in Lima, O., for a $65,000 jewel robbery with other members of the Brady gang, was identified by Clyde Adkins, city detective. With him were Raymond Jones, 24, Indiana parole violator, and two young women.

Declaring they were "just hitchhikers," Geisking pleaded with authorities not to arrest the girls. Their names were withheld by police, who said they would be sent to their homes in Louisville.

Suffering from a bullet wound in the leg received in the Lima holdup, Geisking offered no resistance, although police said he was armed.

YOUTH ADMINISTRATION STAFF TO HOLD WORKERS' CLASSES

Short Course Designed to Give Them Better Understanding of Recreational Methods.

A training course for 50 National Youth Administration workers will be conducted at Wesley House, Cardinal and Bell avenues, by instructors of the staff. The classes will begin tomorrow and will be held each evening until Sept. 30.

The course is designed to give the workers a better understanding of recreational methods, according to L. C. Gardner, director of Wesley House, the community center of the United Charities. Specific instruction will cover subjects dealing with coordination of large staffs, organization of athletic programs and teams, programs and meetings and musical affairs and games.

PAYS OLD CONSCIENCE DEBT

Man Hands $18 to Restaurant Owner; Says He Owed It 22 Years.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 12.—A neatly dressed, middle-aged man entered Lewis C. Entriken's restaurant and handed $18 to the restaurant man today.

"This money belongs to you," the man explained. "Back in 1914 I was working for a commission house here and used to deliver eggs to you. Several times I did not give you as many eggs as you ordered and over a period of several months I stole about three cases of eggs from you. I did the same thing at other eating places, but I've repaid them since. You are the last man I owe and I want to pay you to ease my conscience." The man appeared embarrassed and hurriedly left the restaurant after turning over the money.

Actress and Director Separate.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 12. — Arline Judge, movie actress, and Wesley Ruggles, director, decided again today to separate. They first split up March 29, and then were reconciled. Now, said Miss Judge "a little temperamental difference" has arisen and Ruggles has moved to a hotel. Miss Judge said no divorce is in prospect. They have a three-year-old son.

Anarchists Seized in Havana.

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Sept. 12.—Eight Spaniards were arrested today by secret police who accused them of being anarchists and conspiring to injure hotel and restaurant owners and violate labor laws. They were identified by officers as cooks at the Havana Yacht Club, Hotel National and other hotels, restaurants and homes.

PHILADELPHIA GIRL WINS TITLE OF 'MISS AMERICA'

Rose Coyle, 22, Chosen First in Beauty Contest Before 9000 Spectators at Atlantic City.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 12.—Rose Coyle, 22 years old, entered as "Miss Philadelphia," was chosen "Miss America" tonight in Atlantic City's national beauty contest before 9000 spectators.

Phyllis Dobson, 19, Hollywood, "Miss California," placed second, and Tillie Grey, 19, Waterbury, "Miss Connecticut," third.

The winner is a brunette, with dark brown eyes, dark hair and skin. She is a professional dancer.

At the outset tonight the judges eliminated 33 of the girls and proceeded to their final task of choosing a winner from the remaining 15. Arlene Cawsey, "Miss Cook County, Ill.," who had won three first places in preliminary competition, lost out in the final eliminations.

MICHIGAN FARMER-LABOR SPLIT ON INDORSEMENT OF LEMKE

Two Groups Walk Out of Convention and Separately Back Union Party.

By the Associated Press.

OWOSSO, Mich., Sept. 12.—Michigan's Farmer-Labor party split today over the question of placing Congressman William Lemke, Union party candidate, on the State ballot as its presidential candidate. As a result, three separate conventions were held before the day was over.

Officers of the regularly constituted Farmer-Labor party walked out of the convention, accompanied by Farmer delegates and those from Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice, asserting Detroit labor groups and Communists had "stacked the convention" against the indorsement of Lemke.

Walter M. Nelson, Detroit attorney, presided at a separate convention of the Farmer and Coughlin followers and nominated Lemke and his running mate, Thomas C. O'Brien.

Some of the delegates who walked out held still another meeting, presided over by B. F. Stephenson, follower of Father Coughlin, and in the name of the "third party," nominated Lemke and O'Brien.

The Union party was not able to qualify for a place on the Michigan ballot.

PLANS FOR TOY SHOP GUILD

Board Urges Special Efforts Because of Loss by Fire.

Plans for the year's program of the Board of Religious Organizations' Toy Shop Guild, which collects, repairs and distributes discarded toys to needy children at Christmas, will be made at a meeting of the board of directors at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning in the Old Courthouse.

Mrs. Clifford Zell, general chairman, said many toys which had been collected were destroyed in a fire at the Old Courthouse last spring and that extra effort would be necessary this year. Members of the guild do the ordinary work of repairing and painting, and more complicated tasks are performed by men from the relief rolls.

Address on Social Welfare.

Mrs. A. B. McGlothlan of St. Joseph, president of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare and vice-chairman of the Governor's commission on social legislation, will speak at a meeting of the Association tomorrow at the Town Club. Her topic: "The Program of the Missouri Association."

ROW OVER FRENCH GIFT OF CHAPEL TO AMERICA

Return for Rockefeller Donations Opposed, but Government Insists on It.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—A ruined chapel, forsaken on a peasant farm for more than a century, has become the center of a lively controversy now that the Government proposes to ship it to America. The Government proposed to transfer the structure to New York for exhibition by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in appreciation of the 53,000,000 francs (about $3,498,000) John D. Rockefeller Jr., has spent since the World War on restoration of the Versailles chateau, Reims cathedral and Fontainebleau chateau.

It promptly ran into a storm of parliamentary debate, petitions and protests against "despoiling one of our old provinces of a jewel which it holds dear to its heart."

The dispute delayed the project, diverting it to the general council of the Upper Saone department for approval before going to Parliament, but the Government held firm in its intention to have the proposal passed.

The chapel, a fifteenth-century structure of flamboyant Gothic architecture, stands in the village of Chauvirey-le-Chatel, between Vesoul and Besancon, in northeastern France.

It was erected by Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, to shelter an ancient horn considered a relic of Saint Hubert, patron saint of hunters. Through the centuries, it fell into disuse and decay until now only the apse remains.

The apse is considered a fine example of Gothic architecture.

The Government of Premier Pierre Laval originated more than a year ago the plan to take down the apse and give to the city of New York. Premier Leon Blum's Government carried on the project.

A Government decision to change the form of its plan from an outright gift to a "permanent loan" was expected to quiet some protests.

GANGSTER BOSTLEMAN GAINS RIGHT TO MAKE HABEAS PLEA

Application Charges His Colorado Sentence Was Not Based on a Valid Verdict.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CANON CITY, Colo., Sept. 12. — District Judge James L. Cooper today granted Henry W. Bostleman, St. Louis gangster, now serving a 35-to-40-year term in the Colorado penitentiary, permission to plead on his application for a writ of habeas corpus, charging his sentence was not based on a valid verdict.

Bostleman signed the petition himself. Several convicts have made similar applications recently. It is understood there is an attorney among the convicts in the Canon City prison who is advising his fellow inmates.

Bostleman was convicted of attempting to loot the Golden Eagle Dry Goods Store, a holdup in Denver.

NEW YORK WAITERS RACE WITH BOTTLES ON TRAYS

Glass Breakage Is Heavy as 100 Men Run Down Eighth Avenue; Cup to Winner.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Nearly a hundred uniformed waiters ran down Eighth avenue today with what looked like trays of whisky and soda. They were taking part in the second annual Greater New York tray race, sponsored by the Greater New York Tray Race Association.

The contestants were required to carry a tray containing an empty whisky bottle and two highball glasses, also empty, nine blocks. The breakage was heavy. At the finish line, Jack Dempsey and other restaurant operators congratulated the winner, Dominick Caccippio, 19 years old, who breasted the tape first with his tray, bottle and glasses intact. He got a loving cup and $125 in cash.

WELLSTON GROCER HELD UP

Edgar Cowein Locked in Icebox After Handing Over $20.

An armed man about 28 years old held up Edgar Cowein in his grocery at 6426 Ridge avenue, Wellston, last night and forced him to turn over $20 which was in the cash register.

The robber locked Cowein in the refrigerator and escaped. Cowein got out by breaking the glass.

Landon Aid's Pocket Picked.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, ME., Sept. 12.—Pickpockets found Gov. Alf Landon's visit to Portland profitable tonight. Their victims included a member of the Republican presidential nominee's official party, whose name police would not give out. A Booothbay Harbor man, whose name also was withheld, reported loss of a wallet containing $312 when listening to Landon's speech.

By the Associated Press.

TYLER, Tex., Sept. 12. — W. G. Funderburk of Lufkin was charged today with attempted extortion in connection with a letter received by his wife Thursday which said he was being held for $1500 ransom. Funderburk, in jail at Lufkin, was formally charged in a complaint signed by H. T. Arterberry, Federal Bureau of Investigation operative. Hearing was set for Tuesday.

GENERAL URGES CCC TRAINING FOR EVERY YOUTH IN U. S.

Maj. Gen. Mosely Would Have Half of Six-Month Period Spent in Military Training.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—A plan by Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, commanding officer of the Fourth Corps Area at Atlanta, to provide Civilian Conservation Corps training for every 18-year-old youth in the country and to include military training in CCC activities, was disclosed today in "Happy Days," authorized publication of the corps.

The CCC newspaper reported that Gen. Moseley had submitted his recommendations to President Roosevelt and the War Department. Advocating a six months' training period for youths, Gen. Moseley said "such a program would enhance respect for our government and eliminate crime and disease, with the result that our man power would be so sound mentally, morally and physically that no nation would dare cross the Atlantic or Pacific to disturb us."

More than 1,000,000 youths reach the age of 17 or 18 each year, Moseley said, and they could be handled in two six months' camps. Gen. Moseley would have them devote half their period to military training, "not militaristic in any sense, but confined to those elements of military training which are well worth while and which insure to the benefit of the nation at large."

Primary Vote Expected to Exceed 1,047,000 Cast Two Years Ago.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—Ballots so long as they are referred to as "bedsheets" will be given to Michigan voters in many sections next Tuesday when they select candidates for offices ranging from U. S. Senator down to county drain commissioner.

Election officials predicted, on the basis of registration, that the vote will exceed the 1,047,117 cast in the 1934 primary.

Among the developments of the primary were Senator James Couzens' announcement that although a candidate for renomination on the Republican ticket, he intended to support President Roosevelt for re-election; a Senate investigation of campaign contributions and expenditures that ran into a dispute with Wilber M. Brucker, Couzens' opponent; the entrance of a former Republican Lieutenant-Governor George W. Welsh, into the campaign as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination opposing Frank Murphy, high commissioner of the Philippines, and participation in the congressional contests of the National Union for Social Justice and the Townsend Old Age Pension organization.

REMINGTON RAND LOSES FIGHT FOR INJUNCTION AGAINST NLRB

Federal Judge Denies Permanent Writ Against Hearing on Workers' Complaint.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The three-month-old Remington Rand strike reached the National Labor Relations Board today when United States District Judge John Knight denied the company a permanent injunction to restrain the board from hearing charges of unfair labor practices.

There was no indication when the board would hold the hearing. Last July 11 the board charged the company with "wholesale discharge of workers for union activity."

Judge Knight also dismissed a temporary injunction obtained by the company when striking employes complained to the Buffalo office of the labor board. A scheduled hearing was postponed when Remington Rand obtained their temporary injunction. The employes charged the company had dismissed employes for union activity.

MOVE TO MAINTAIN STATUS QUO OF THE LITTLE ENTENTE

Discouragement of Enemies and Preservation of Peace Object Minister's Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 12.—A proposal to intensify the united front for peace and maintenance of the status quo among their 43,000,000 people was formulated today by Foreign Ministers of Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, the three nations forming the Little Entente.

One Czechoslovakian delegate said the conferees also sought to agree on a plan to prevent any other nation from conquering any part of the Little Entente or altering the boundaries of its nations.

ST. LOUISAN TO NEW POST

Thomas S. Horn Named Consul at Rotterdam.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Thomas S. Horn of St. Louis, American Consul at Barcelona, has been assigned as Consul at Rotterdam. He is a graduate of Washington University School of Law and formerly lived at 6117 McPherson avenue.

Dale W. Maher of Joplin, Mo., American Consul at Rotterdam, has been named Consul and second secretary of the legation at Budapest.

Unions Turn Down Lewis Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

BENTON, Ill., Sept. 12. — Local unions at New Orient and Old Ben Mine No. 15 rejected today a proposal to indorse President Roosevelt for re-election. Members declared the unions had always kept out of politics and did not favor the dollar-a-man assessment proposed by John L. Lewis, International president of the United Mine Workers.

LEMKE SAYS AGED HAVE EARNED GOVERNMENT PENSION

They Have Created Wealth Which Should Be Given to Them, Candidate Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12. — William Lemke, candidate for President on the Union Party ticket, said at a mass meeting tonight civilization had reached a stage where "we realize that as a nation we can safely restore to the aged part of the wealth which they have created."

In the past, he said, production was slow and laborious and even in nations well supplied with materials and labor "there was usually a scarcity of some of the necessities." The machine age has changed this, he said, so that "we suddenly find we have an abundance for all."

"Our problem no longer is how to produce more, nor fear that the morrow may not bring plenty, but rather how to distribute the things that we have and that are essential to our well being. . . . Any person who has worked at a useful occupation from the age of 20 to the age of 60, has produced enough wealth to take care of himself or herself for the rest of his or her life. If such a person finds himself or herself in financial distress and without the means of a comfortable livelihood, then it is because someone appropriated this wealth, or rather misappropriated it."

COUGHLIN FOR AMENDMENT TO SET MINIMUM WAGE

Says Candidates of Both Major Parties Have Dodged This Issue.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A constitutional amendment was urged tonight by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, if necessary to permit reasonable federal laws establishing minimum wages.

Returning to the radio for a series of 26 broadcasts the Michigan priest said both President Roosevelt and Governor Landon had disregarded the issue of a "living annual wage."

"Let us realize," he said, "that the unity of human society cannot be built on class warfare. Rather capital and labor must join hands in this new crusade to re-establish the Christian concept of life and eradicate the errors which prevent the good things of our material life from being distributed equitably. Both capital and labor must not only advocate but seek with their full powers an amendment to our constitution, if necessary, by which free, unbridled competition must submit to reasonable federal laws to the end that a fair annual wage will be paid to every American capable of working and willing to work . . . There are hundreds of shoe factories while there are thousands of unshod children. There are millions of fertile acres and there are likewise millions of unclad men and women. There are countless mines and farflung forests, mammoth steel mills and millions of cunning hands.

"Why then should there be squalor, slums and inadequate shelter? Why should there be silence on the part of the presidential candidates who pussyfoot on the question of the annual wage? Again —what prevents the distribution of our wealth?"

YOUNG REPUBLICAN CLUBS MEET AT COLUMBIA OCT. 7

108 Organizations Out of 114 Missouri Counties; 13 Speeches to Be Broadcast.

A meeting of all Young Republican Club organizations in the State has been called for Oct. 7 in Columbia by Walter C. Ploeser of St. Louis, chairman of the Young Republican division of the Republican State Committee.

Ploeser said yesterday that clubs had been organized in 108 of the 114 counties in the State, and in 18 of the 28 wards in St. Louis. A feature of the Columbia meeting will be 13 radio speeches, the finals ina State oratorical contest sponsored by the organization. The subject of all the speeches will be "The Republican Party for Young Americans."

NAMED AS FUTURES MARKETS

St. Louis Merchants Exchange Among Those Designated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — The Commodity Exchange Administration of the Department of Agriculture announced today that Secretary Wallace had designated four more contract futures markets under the commodity exchange act of 1936. The designations included the New York Cotton Exchange for cotton, the New York Mercantile Exchange for butter and eggs, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange for butter and eggs and Irish potatoes, and the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange for mill feed. The St. Louis Exchange previously had been a designated market for grain futures.

TWO PALESTINE ARABS KILLED

JERUSALEM, Sept. 12.—(Palcor Agency.)—Two more Arabs were killed in the disorders in Palestine in the last 24 hours.

One of the victims was a woman killed near the Jewish colony of Petach Iikvah. The other was a shepherd killed near Kalkilyeh last night by thieves who stole part of his flock. In the same attack in which the woman fell, an Arab man and child were wounded late this afternoon, it was reported here.

Roosevelt Leads Maryland Poll.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12.—President Roosevelt led Gov. Alf M. Landon by 5318 votes tonight in the presidential poll the Sun papers are taking among registered voters in Maryland. Latest returns showed: Roosevelt, 16,944; Landon 11,626.

UTILITIES DEBATE CONCLUDES WORLD POWER PARLEY

Public vs. Private Ownership Argued by F. L. Carlisle and W. S. Peterson of Los Angeles Plant

SOVIET DELEGATE ENTERS DISCUSSION

Declares Russia Is Third in Production—Dr. W. F. Durand, California, Chosen President.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—A final skirmish between champions of public and private utility ownership, in which a Russian challenged arguments of an American power executive, marked the closing session today of the third World Power Conference.

About 8,000,000 words were uttered in a week's debate of nearly every problem dealing with oil, gas, coal and electricity.

The final debate was participated in by Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the boards of the Consolidated Co. of New York and the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation; B. E. Yusim, vice-president of the Soviet Power Engineering Corporation, and William S. Peterson, transmission engineer for the Los Angeles Power & Light Bureau.

Varying Points of View.

Carlisle asserted that private utilities would "co-operate willingly with any plan, Government or otherwise, founded in sound economics for the public good."

In a written paper he previously had defended the economy of private electricity production, in comparison with that of municipal plants.

Yusim questioned a statement by Carlisle that "modern industrial civilization has been almost exclusively confined" to countries where enterprise is privately owned.

"Russia was last among nations in power production in 1923," Yusim said, "but today it is third, lagging behind only the United States and Germany."

Challenges Carlisle's Figures.

"Carlisle's conclusions regarding the economy of private production were challenged by Peterson, who argued that municipal service was "15 to 25 per cent cheaper" when allowances were made for tax and other contributions paid by both public and private plants.

Peterson asserted Carlisle's "incomplete figures, so carefully selected, are decidedly on the side of misrepresentation."

In reply Carlisle said he saw "no reason to change my figures."

Dr. William F. Durand, Palo Alto (Cal.) scientist, was elected president of the conference to succeed Dr. Julius Dorpmueller, chief of Germany's railway system.

Four hundred delegates from 20 nations will leave Monday in special trains to visit factories, oil fields, and power projects in every corner of the United States. More than 200 others planned to leave at once for home.

SANTA FE'S 3-DAY FIESTA OF DANCING AND PAGEANTRY

To Celebrate Lives of Spanish Heroes and Incidents of Early History.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA FE, N. M., Sept. 12. — Old Santa Fe, wher eSpanish conquistadores raised the abobe walls of their new world homes before the pilgrims reached Plymouth rocks, began three fiesta days—a period of historical pageantry—tonight.

Until Monday night, gay crowds, costumed in the bright-hued dress of Spain and Mexico, will throng winding streets of the "ancient city," while spectators line the rooftops of old adobe houses.

The fiesta reaches its peak tomorrow afternoon with an elaborate historical pageant depicting the re-entry of the conqueror. Catholic religious rituals will be held throughout the day, culminating in a torchlight processional to the "Cross of the Martyrs," high on a hilltop overlooking the city. Monday is the day for "Los Ninons"—children's day o fthe fiesta.

Trinidad Admits 'Green Pastures.'

By the Associated Press.

POR TOF SPAIN, Trinidad, Sept. 12. — A special board of appeal, named by the Governor, today lifte dTrinidad's bar on the American movie, "Green Pastures." Negroes, contending the original decision of Island censors was prompted by racial prejudice, had protested against the bar. The appeal board was composed of a Negro minister, a Catholic Priest and a labor leader.

Barred as Independents on Ballot.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 12. — The County Board of Elections, today unanimously rejected petitions of the Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow and 11 other Insurgent Democratic nominess who sought to appear on November ballots as Independent, Union party candidates as well as Democrats. A spokesman for the losers said he was preparing to take the case to the State Supreme Court.

BRADY FIGHTS BALDWIN REORGANIZATION PLANS

Theatrical Producer and Wall Street Plunger Now in Role of 'Conservative Investor.'

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—William A. Brady, 73 years old, has come back to Wall Street for another fight—this time as a "conservative investor" against financial interests seeking reorganization of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Part of Brady's earnings from his immensely successful "Street Scene" went into Baldwin and he has served notice that he will fight a reorganization plan he considers too severe on common stockholders.

Brady, from youth, has courted fortune with varying luck as actor, sports promoter, playwright, theatrical producer and Wall Street speculator. Now he is in the role of stockholder.

Brady calls himself today a "conservative investor." But he remembers there was a time when he was known as one of the "biggest gamblers" along Broadway, ready to bet thousands on the turn of a card.

He reached his cautious, mellow mood, he recounts, after amassing "experience" taking long chances on stocks in Wall Street and plays on Broadway.

His Last Big Fling.

"In my last big fling in Wall Street," he recalls, "I lost heavily trying to fight the Coolidge bull market. Before the 1929 crash came along I had already decided, after dabbling in speculation for 30 years, that I was through with the stock market except as an investor buying for the long pull.

"But I took another long chance in the show business, which I knew better than Wall Street." His "flyer" in Broadway was "Street Scene," one of the greatest successes he ever backed as a producer. The motion picture rights alone, he says, brought $157,000.

Looking for a safe place to salt away "Street Scene" winnings, Brady says he bought among other securities Baldwin Locomotive shares, paying between $20 and $40 a share for 2300 shares in 1930 and 1931.

Last year the common sold as low as $1.50 a share and the company moved in the Federal court at Philadelphia to reorganize. The stock lately has been selling around $3.

Brady has served notice of intention to fight the reorganization plan on the ground it is too severe for common shareholders in light of revival in the rail equipment industry.

On Flip of a Coin.

Brady laughed and reminisced about Wall Street and Broadway as he sat in his spacious apartment on Park avenue. "In the early days," he said, "I used to stop in the street and flip my last quarter in the air to see whether I would spend it for something to eat or take a chance."

In New York as manager for Jim Corbett and James J. Jeffries, topnotching fighting men of the prize ring in those days, he fell in with the big-time speculators known as the "Waldorf crowd," among them John W. (Bet-a-Million) Gates.

"When I discovered how easy it was to make money gambling in Wall Street, I thought I had found paradise," Brady continued. "I made $10,000 at breakfast one morning when the Northern Pacific rise started back in 1903 or thereabouts.

"For years I sat hours with my eyes glued on the ticker until my doctor finally told me I would get nervous indigestion if I didn't quit. I made money and lost it.

"I knew important people and some gave me tips, but the real guy in Wall Street is the one who tells you when to get out, not when to get in.

"If I knew then what I know now, however, I would have been an investor, not a gambler looking for quick profits. I was in at the birth of the motion picture industry and had a chance to put money in it. But I balked—I said that industry had no future."

PREPARATIONS FOR RECEPTION HERE OF NORMAN THOMAS

Socialist Candidate to Appear in Parade Saturday; Speech at Coliseum Sunday Night.

Arrangements for the reception for Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, are being completed by a committee of the group, headed by Dr. Park J. White, which is sponsoring the appearance of the candidate in St. Louis.

He will speak next Sunday evening at the Coliseum. A parade will be held Saturday noon. At 2:30 p. m. Sunday, Thomas will be interviewed in a radio broadcast from Station KSD; a dinner in his honor will be held at 5:30 p. m. at Hotel Kings-Way, and at 8:15 he will appear at the Coliseum.

At the dinner a picture, "Manpower," painted by Mrs. Jessie B. Rickly, founder of the artist colony at Ste. Genevieve, Mo., will be auctioned, the proceeds going to the campaign fund.

Members of the sponsors committee are Dr. White, Dr. Paul J. Zentay, Miss Josephine Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Langsdorf, Prof. Ralph Fuchs, the Rev. George Gibson, Mrs. Rickly, Prof. S. A. Queen, the Rev. Elmer Arndt, Mrs. Henry F. Lodge, Herman Schwarz, Dale Johnson, Valentine Vogel, Prof. Joseph M. Klamon, Mrs. Ray Kean, Edgar Metzger, William L. Mason and the Rev. H. O. Ritter.

George Duemler, Socialist candidate for Governor of Missouri, will speak briefly before Thomas.

GREECE SEES LIBERTIES GOING UNDER DICTATOR

"It May Be for the Common Good," Citizens Murmur, "But—".

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Greece.—Latest of the growing list of European nations to feel the strict regulations of dictatorship, Greece today is gloomily watching its liberties fade one by one.

"It may be all for the common good," they murmur in the coffeeshops, "but——"

Under Dictator-General John ("Little John") Metaxas, 65 years old, pudgy, bespectacled, arch foe of Communism, they have seen the following measures enacted: No Greek citizen may obtain a passport to travel abroad without paying $200; all safe deposit vaults are under the supervision of police; possession of foreign currency is forbidden; banking money outside the country is a penal offense; newspaper criticism of the Government is forbidden.

Gen. Metaxas' first step, after his quiet coup in seizing the reigns of government—apparently with the full approval of King George—was to abolish Parliament. The dismissed politicians fumed and grumbles came from those who saw it as a drastic infringement on their rights of popular representation in government. Metaxas, however, quickly won over the common people by announcing that the salaries of the ousted solons would be used for soup kitchens.

In laying down the stiff $200 passport fee, Metaxas has dealt one more blow to world travel agencies, making it difficult for Greeks to go abroad.

While Hitler in Germany has forbidden Germans to take more than 10 marks (about $4) out of the country, Metaxas has gone about it in the opposite direction, making it virtually out of the question for the average Greek to consider foreign travel by soaking him so hard he can't afford to leave.

There are several exceptions to the rule—notably, diplomatic and consular officials; invalids who can obtain a sworn statement from a professor of the faculty of medicine at Athens University to the effect that a cure is possible only outside of Greece, and persons who can show that by travel they intend to obtain business which will bring money into Greece.

NEW MISSOURI PWA GRANTS

$64,000 Allotted for Sewer Work in McKnight Village.

Three PWA grants for work to cost $277,044 in McKnight Village, Belle and Monroe City, Mo., have been approved at Washington, according to word received here yesterday.

The grants were $64,125 for sewers at McKnight Village; $33,545 for waterworks at Belle, and $27,000 for a school building at Monroe City. Of the total cost, 55 per cent is borne by the municipalities.

Steam at 900 Degrees Temperature Produced By New Ford Boiler

Before a small group in the Ford engineering laboratory, in Dearborn, Mich., recently, Henry Ford spun a V-8 steering wheel to start steam flowing through a huge new turbine generator in power house No. 1 at the Rouge plant. Its addition made the powerhouse the largest high-pressure steam generating installation in the world.

A few seconds after he spun the wheel, a Ford V-8 emblem carrying an American flag began slowly turning atop the new turbine—the signal that the 110,000-kilowatt generator "was on the line."

With the new equipment, the generating capacity was increased from 200,000 to 326,000 horsepower—an increase necessitated by increased power demands resulting from the company's expansion and modernization program at the plant.

After setting the new machinery in operation Ford made a rapid calculation of the power released by his action. "To produce the same amount of horsepower with the kind of engine we used at the Piquette avenue plant," he said, "we would have to have a line of that kind of engines more than five miles long."

Steam at 900 Degrees.

Setting a record in another respect, the installation includes a new boiler operated at the highest temperature ever achieved in a large industrial plant in this country. The boiler provides steam at 900 degrees Fahrenheit, supplying 900,000 pounds an hour.

The new boiler is 25 feet 8 inches by 32 feet, and towers 115 feet to the top of the powerhouse. Supported by steel beams, the boiler weighs in excess of 9,000,000 pounds. Within it is a network of pipe providing a total of 30,500 square feet of heating surface and 22,000 square feet of superheating surface. Its weight necessitated extensive rebuilding of the powerhouse's inner steel structure, which also supports the eight tall stacks above the building.

To bring the steam to the 900 degrees temperature, the boiler is fired with pulverized coal at the rate of about 40 tons an hour, together with large amounts of blast furnace gas. The water is preheated before reaching the boiler by circulation through thousands of feet of pipe around the combustion chamber, which also prevents excessive heating of the boiler rooms. Designed to produce steam at 1400 pounds of pressure, the boiler will have a normal operating pressure of about 1215 pounds at the turbine throttle.

NEW DEALERSHIP FORMED HERE

L. T. GILLIAM.

ROBERT C. GLENN.

The newly organized Gilliam-Glenn Motor Co., 6353 Easton avenue, of which L. T. Gilliam is president and Robert C. Glenn is secretary and treasurer, has been appointed an authorized Ford dealer by M. N. Johnson, manager for the Ford Motor Co. in St. Louis.

M. L. Gilliam is vice-president of the firm, which has taken over the building at the Easton avenue address formerly occupied by the Jordan Motor Sales, whose head, M. H. Jordan, has retired and plans to live in California.

L. T. Gilliam has been in the auto business here since 1922, having been an active member of two large dealerships. Glenn and M. L. Gilliam also are experienced automobile business men.

The firm's place of business is equipped with all the modern facilities for service and has a finely appointed showroom.

Roy Koch is new car salesmanager, and Joseph Sullivan used car salesmanager. Salesmen include Lester A. Schubart, Robert Townsend, Harry Every, Roy Mathewn, Grover Smith, Carlisle Cooper, Jack Lazear, J. H. Young, Benjamin E. Amos and Ben McMenamy, while the used car sales force consists of William Lawler, Thomas Lawler and L. E. Patton.

Care of Spark Plugs Means Saving Up to 4 Miles to Gallon

Saving of as much as four miles per gallon of gasoline is often accomplished simply by cleaning spark plugs, or replacing plugs that are old and worn, Hector Rabezzana, research engineer and writer of scientific articles pertaining to the automobile, declares.

Whenever a spark plug misses, Rabezzana says, the unburned fuel is forced out of the cylinder without having done any work and, consequently, the gasoline mileage is reduced. This missing is due to a coating composed of combustion residuals that forms on the lower end of the plug insulator. It short circuits wholly or partly the spark current, keeping it from jumping the spark gap.

The best thing the motorist can do, the engineer says, is to have his spark plugs cleaned at least twice a year. This operation can now be performed in a few minutes on an improved spark plug cleaner, which was developed by engineers of General Motors. The cleaner is used in most garages and service stations.

When the plugs are cleaned, the firing points or electrodes should be set to the proper adjustment. The entire operation of cleaning plugs and adjusting firing points requires only a few minutes, but it will result in much better engine operation and a big saving in gasoline.

Safest Car Drivers Are Tire Conscious Van Epps Declares

The nation's safest drivers are tire conscious. This was brought out when the safest drivers of each state were brought together recently to formulate safe driving rules," C. M. Van Epps, manager for Goodyear Service, says.

"These drivers, each with a record of hundreds of thousands of miles of accident-free driving, were selected by elimination contests in the various states in which their records were compared with those of thousands of other entrants seeking the title of 'champion safe driver.' These picked drivers of each state met to compare experiences and to evolve driving rules to guide other motorists.

"In every case, the record of the individual selected showed that he carefully observed every rule of safe driving when actually on the road, and in addition, before he moved his car from the garage he was certain that its safety equipment was up to par and could be depended upon in an emergency.

"To a safety-minded motorist, that means two things—brakes and tires. Good brakes stop the wheels when need arises—good tires, with plenty of center traction to stop the wheels when the brakes are applied.

"Safety experts rate the condition of tires as of equal importance with the condition of the brakes.

"There are only four points of contact between road and car—the points where the tire rests on the road. Perfect brakes may stop the wheels dead, but unless the rubber of the tires provides sufficient traction, the tires slide along the road."

two tone poems by Sibelius played by Adrian Boult and the British Broadcasting Co. Symphony Orchestra

Now you can hear, as often as you like, two tone poems by Sibelius, only too rarely heard on symphony programs, due to the size of the orchestra they require. Their beauty, the interest of their impressionistic style, and their appeal to the romantic fancy have placed these two among the greatest of the tone poems ever written by any composer.

Few composers, during their lifetimes, ever enjoyed the popularity of Sibelius. This is your opportunity to own two of the most unusual works of the man many consider the most important living composer.

Night-Ride and Sunrise and The Oceanides. These Two Tone Poems by Sibelius can be heard at your dealer's. 3 records, 6 sides, $5.00.

BRANN REPLIES TO GOV. LANDON'S MAINE SPEECH

Governor Says No Man Was More Energetic in Getting Aid From Roosevelt Than Kansan.

ASKS ABOUT MORGAN CAMPAIGN GIFT

'Our Schools Have Been Kept Open, Those of Kansas Have Not,' Says Democratic Executive.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—Gov. Gov. Louis J. Brann (Dem.), said tonight that, if Gov. Alf M. Landon approached the political situation in Maine "fairly," he would urge Brann's election to the United States Senate "because of the similarity of our approach to the great problems that confronted us as Governors."

The speech by Brann, a candidate against United States Senator Wallace H. White Jr. (Rep.), was made in reply to the Republican presidential candidate's appeal before a Portland Republican rally for election of his party's ticket in Maine's election Monday.

Brann went on the radio immediately after Landon had concluded his speech.

Maine's Governor said both he and Landon had attempted to get all Federal funds possible to assist in the rehabilitation of their respective states.

"No man has been more energetic in securing Federal aid from the Roosevelt administration," said Brann of Landon.

"Does Gov. Landon understand that the two Senators from Maine voted against every measure which gave to Kansas and to Maine money for relief and public works, and that, if their will had prevailed, neither Kansas nor Maine would have received Federal funds?"

Kansas' allotment of Federal funds, Brann said, was $425,000,000.

Quotes Landon on New Deal.

After quoting statements which he asserted Landon had made in support of the New Deal and advocating unusual powers for the President ,because of national emergency, Brann said:

" nIview of Gov. Landon's record and declarations, in support of the New Deal, it seems to me the height of absurdity for Senator White to urge the election of Gov. Landon."

Comparing his administration with that of Landon,5s, Brann said: "Our schools in Maine have been kept open. The schools of Kansas have not been kept open."

Turning to recent contributions by wealthy American families to the Republican campaign fund, Brann asked Landon if he sanctioned contributions made by J. P. Morgan.

"Gov. Landon made the following statement on July 26, 1933," said Brann, "'Racketeers like Insull, Morgan and Van Sweringen will be driven out of finance and industry by the scorn of honest people and the strong determination o fthe Government'."

Brann asked that Landon reaffirm the quoted statement and "repudiate the contribution."

Tells Where He Stands.

Answering his opponent's demand that he tell whether he was for or against the New Deal, Brann said: "The deal I stand for is the best for the people of Maine, and a new deal for Maine in the Senate of the United States."

In a review of the principles for which, he said, he stood, Brann declared:

"I stand for the Constitution. I stand for the protection of Maine industries and the high standard of living for those working in the factories of Maine. I stand for a more liberal old age pension law, unemployment insurance to protect the worker, and a shorter work day; I stand for helping communities in Maine in times of stress through Federal aid."

FIRE ON CRUISER THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN SPITE WORK

Investigation of Slight Damage to the Indianapolis Is Proceeding, However.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Naval officials said today that "personal jealousy" is considered a likely motive for the burning of electric cables in the fire room of the cruiser Indianapolis in Brooklyn Navy Yard three weeks ago.

An official statement that "the action was undoubtedly deliberate" had at first been interpreted as indicating sabotage, but the minor character of the damage led to the belief that it was a case of spite or an attempt to "get somebody in bad."

The Indianapolis, meanwhile, was back from a trial cruise which officers said demonstrated no serious harm had been done. The fire was caused by two nails driven into an electric cable.

A fact-finding investigation is being conducted by Capt. Charles A. Dunn, industrial manager of the yard. Questioning of men who were in the fireroom is proceeding.

Graham-Paige Co. Increasing Capacity For 1937 Production

Will Provide 50 Per Cent Greater Manufacturing Facilities, It Is Announced.

Following the most successful current model clean-up in the history of the Graham-Paige Motors Corp., Joseph B. Graham, its president, has started an extensive program of factory improvement and expansion to provide a 50 per cent increase in production capacity for the 1937 cars and effect a saving of $400,000 in annual manufacturing costs. Peak employment under the new production schedule will approach 5000.

Graham says that sustained buying demand through the summer has brought field stocks down to extremely low levels. Only about 1000 cars of the 1936 Graham line, he says, remain in the hands of dealers and distributers throughout the United States.

The increase in plant capacity is in line with Graham's policy of concentrating all operations under one roof. The result, he says, will virtually be to permit the manufacturing of custom cars on a production basis.

All assembly lines and major factory operations are being expanded, rearranged and re-equipped with precision machinery of latest design. Among the changes is the transfer of all body building operations from Wayne, Mich., to the main factory on West Warren avenue, Detroit.

A feature of the new Graham body department will be the installation of 1586 lineal feet of new body paint drying ovens equipped to employ natural gas. More accurate control of oven heat is made possible, Graham says, by the use of gas instead of fuel oil. The body spraying and drying department, he asserts, will be the most modern in the entire automotive industry.

Assembly and conveyor lines throughout the plant are being rerouted and extended to a total length of nearly two miles. Additions are being made also to railroad receiving and shipping facilities at the factory.

F. H. Fidler Named Office Manager Here for Advertising Agency

Fred H. Fidler has been appointed office manager here for the J. Walter Thompson Co., the advertising agency handling the Shell account in St. Louis. He succeeds Arthur C. Farlow, manager for the past year, who is to return to San Francisco.

Fidler has been the Shell Oil Co. account executive for the Thompson Co. in San Francisco for the past three years. He also has had years of experience in publicity work in the East and as head of the West Coast Press Bureau for the Thompson Co.

Official figures showed a Government decree requiring consumption engines in Brazil to burn with nine parts of ordinary fuel one part of alcohol has stepped up alcohol production from 33,291,642 liters in 1931 to 47,230,346 in 1935. Most of it comes from sugar cane.

Investment Bankers Guests of President of New Willys-Overla

Steady employment and produc- tion of automobiles at unusually low costs by Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., successor to the reorganized Willys-Overland Co., was promised by David R. Wilson, president of the company, in a conference with 125 investment bankers of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland and other financial centers at the Willys-Overland plant recently.

The bankers went to Toledo to inspect the rearranged plant and to get a more intimate picture of the activities of the new company which expects to begin manufacturing operations next month.

Schedules of the new company call for continuous production, with the first units coming off the assembly line in ample time for exhibition in 14 najor automobile shows in November. The company already has received commitments for nearly 50,000 cars.

"I am satisfied that we can build an automobile on less floor space and at lower costs than ever before," Wilson said.

Many of the bankers remained in Toledo following the conference to attend the city-wide civic testimonial dinner sponsored by the Toledo Chamber of Commerce in honor of Wilson and his associates in the reorganization of Willys-Overland.

Buying Gasoline In Morning Advised As Means of Saving

L. K. MARSHALL, general service manager of the Pontiac Motor Co., gives ways to save gasoline.

"Heat expands gasoline," he says. "Most motorists probably have noticed that a brimful tank will run over after a short time. This happens because the heat has expanded the gasoline. Room should be left for this expansion. The tank never should be filled to the very top.

"The best time to buy gasoline is in the morning—before the heat of the day has had a chance to expand the gasoline in the pump. Gasoline evaporates from the tank. Tests show that as much as 20 per cent of the gasoline in a partially filled tank may evaporate during two days of driving.

"The best way to fight this particular 'gas bandit' is to keep the tank filled within a few gallons of capacity. This leaves less room for the gas to slosh around in and reduces excess evaporation."

Old Electric Car Becomes Basis of Welding Machine

An old Detroit electric car was recently turned in to the Montgomery County Motor Co., Inc., a Pontiac dealer by Mrs. Estelle Beach Davis on a new Pontiac sedan.

The Electric was purchased new July 16, 1916, at a cost of about $2300. It was sold by the dealer for $50 to William Barton of Litchfield, who has converted it into an electric welding outfit,

Louis Unser Victor In Annual Labor Day Climb Up Pike's Peak

When Louis Unser, driving J. D. Perry's "heated power special," using motor oil, won the annual Pike's Peak climb on Labor day and repeated his 1934 victory, he made the 12-mile course with 50 hairpin turns in its rise of 5000 odd feet in time slightly under that of his old record of 16 minutes 1.8 seconds.

The climb, which is reckoned the stiffest test in the world of car construction and power and of lubricants, was supervised by the American Automobile Association, and was conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Colorado Springs, Colo. It was the third consecutive victory for cars using Veedol.

The first car that ascended Pike's Peak 26 years ago made the climb in eight hours.

Cadillac-La Salle Sales Gain Reported

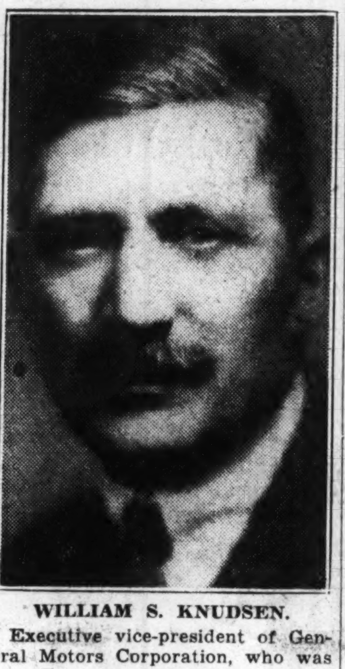
Aided by an exceptional spurt in the final 10 days, Cadillac and La Salle sales continued last month to break records that had stood for seven years, Don E. Ahrens, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., reports.

Ahrens said that the month ran more than 40 per cent ahead of 1935 and overshadowed all August volume since 1929.

"Particularly notable was business in the higher priced group of cars," he added. "Sales of the Cadillac-Fleetwood line topped July, based on virtually complete returns, and this was without precedent."

"Increases in the Fleetwood division contributed toward giving us the highest percentage of sales in history in the high priced group. Our calculations show we sold 48.5 per cent of all cars with listings above $2000."

TELLS OF GAIN BY GENERAL MOTORS IN CAR PRODUCTION



WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN.

Executive vice-president of General Motors Corporation, who was here Thursday on a tour of inspection of assembly plants. Knudsen said that by the end of the year General Motors plants would have produced at least 300,000 more cars than in 1935.

With Knudsen were R. H. Grant, vice-president of General Motors; L. P. Fisher, vice-president, and Paul Garrett, director of public relations.

Domestic production will be the largest the company has ever known, he said, but restrictions imposed by various countries have had their effect on export business. However, the corporation's plant in Germany is producing 100,000 cars yearly, and a factory in England makes 40,000 more every 12 months.

Saying that the company's payroll is fully 20 per cent larger than in 1935, he stated that General Motors had 100,000 men at work and would have 100,000 more working by the middle of next month.

Remarking that accuracy in large scale production was very much to the fore in automobile factories, Knudsen said he expected no spectacular developments.

Chevrolet Assisting Dealers to Better Service Facilities

Figures compiled by C. W. Wood, national service and mechanical manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., emphasize the effect which the automotive industry's prosperity has had on other lines of business, notably the building trades.

Since the first of the year, Wood says, nearly 1000 Chevrolet dealers all over the country have modernized their service facilities along lines suggested by the factory at a cost substantially over $4,000,000. Many of them have erected new buildings with emphasis on service. Outlay for building materials and labor has varied from a few hundred dollars to $100,000 or more.

The entire program has been carried out with the service department's co-operation. Its buildings division has an extensive file of data on location, design and construction of dealer establishments, and this is available to dealers without cost. Moreover, the department's field men, throughout the nine Chevrolet regions and 47 zones, keep dealers informed of the facilities at their disposal, and suggest expansion or remodeling where such a course is indicated by the local business possibilities.

"The whole program," says Wood, "is based on recognition of the fact that the time to build for tomorrow is today. We have found our dealers decidedly open to the idea of plowing back profits to assure their own permanency. Most important of all, the results have justified the step.

"Customer labor sales by Chevrolet dealers are at their highest point of all time. In the first seven months of 1936, they totaled $30,124,125, as compared with $24,560,037 in 1935, the best previous corresponding period. While it would be too much to attribute this entire increase to service modernization, it is reasonable to assume that at least a part of it was due to that cause.

"Dealers who have improved their service departments in line with Chevrolet's suggestions report several important results. In the first place, they find that their new facilities attract a larger volume of service business, which is desirable not only on its own account but also because it furnishes customers for accessories and for new and used cars and trucks. In the second place, this added volume is being handled with maximum efficiency, due to the scientific layout of the facilities now being installed. This makes for lower prices and tends to hold an owner's trade. Finally, there is a good margin of profit left for the dealer."

Perry Adair Promoted By General Motors Holding Corporation

Perry Adair, formerly assistant to J. A. Ayers, regional manager for the General Motors Holding Corporation for St. Louis territory, has been promoted to be manager of the Indianapolis office of the General Motors Holding Corporation.

Tuesday he was the guest at the Statler Hotel at a dinner given by six General Motors dealers and managers of the various General Motors divisions.

Star Salesmen of Chrysler Club Guests of Factory

Members of the Chrysler 100 Club, comprising the 100 salesmen who made the best records from Jan. 1 to June 30, will be entertained by the Chrysler Sales Division of the Chrysler Corporation Sept. 16, 17 and 18.

Salesmen from all parts of the country will assemble in Detroit next Wednesday, and will spend the day in sightseeing and attending the ball game at Navin Field. The following day will be devoted to inspection of the Chrysler and Plymouth plants, the Chrysler engineering building and other Chrysler activities in Detroit. In the evening there will be a banquet at the Statler Hotel.

Late Thursday evening, the salesmen together with the Chrysler regional managers and field men, will board a chartered steamer for a trip to Cleveland, where a special Chrysler day has been arranged at the Great Lakes Exposition.

In addition to the visit to Detroit, the 100 Club members receive special lapel pins and citations from J. E. Fields, president of the Chrysler Sales Division. Each of forty-five of the 100 who have made the club for the second time will receive a pin set with one diamond.

FRED PERRY OF ENGLAND DEFEATS DON BUDGE FOR U. S. TENNIS TITLE

MISS JACOBS LOSES CROWN IN UPSET TO MISS MARBLE

By John R. Tunis
(Copyright, 1936.)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Helen Hull Jacobs, for four straight years queen of America's tennis courts, lost her crown today to Alice Marble, a blonde Palm Springs, Calif., star, who defeated her in a spectacular match, for the women's national singles championship. The score was 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Miss Marble's victory over the stocky Miss Jacobs was the tennis upset of the day, but it remained for England's Fred Perry and red-haired Don Budge, the Oakland, Calif., comet, to produce one of the greatest finals in the men's competition—a final which Perry won after five bitter sets, 2-6, 6-2, 8-6, 1-6, 10-8.

We had to wait ten days for a real good match in the singles tournament and we finally got it with the Perry-Budge contest. No one imagined that the gangling red-head could hold off the Britisher as he did until the eighteenth game of the final set, but the fact is that up to the end Budge was certainly not the weaker man on the court.

Perry won but the gap is closing. Next year will tell a far different story.

A Popular Victory.

The triumph for the 28-year Miss Marble was as welcome to the gallery of 10,000 as it was unexpected. Miss Marble, in winning, gave a splendid exhibition of steady and strategic tennis, one of the finest ever seen in a women's final. The Palm Springs ace is no newcomer to national tennis, although she was forced out of action for a long period because of illness. Today, she played championship tennis and her defeat of the four-crown winner was well-deserved.

The tactics of Perry and Budge were utterly dissimilar today. Perry remained pretty generally upon the baselines, content to fence with his rival and draw an error in the rallies.

Budge, on the other hand, was always pressing, always striving for the opening, and sometimes, it must be admitted, coming into the forecourt when the opening presented itself. He used his backhand, a long, low-sweeping shot to the left corner, to give him a chance for the winning volley, and more often than not, drew an error from Perry on that side.

The fact is that in the fifth set, the champion was so hurried and also so worried that he was actually running around shots to his backhand and taking them down the right side.

Rain Holds Up Match.

Budge started out with a rush that gave him the first set easily. Perry was politely contemptuous. The Britisher dug in the second set, and had no trouble taking it after a ten-minute intermission due to rain, when he was leading at five-two in games. The third set was critical. Budge, playing his best tennis, had a three-one lead which he threw away carelessly and games were even to six-all. Here, two beautiful volleys gave Perry the fourteenth game on Budge's delivery and he went in for the rest leading.

The fourth set was also interrupted by rain, by the applause of the crowd which bothered Perry, and decisions on the lines which he did not like. He threw it after the third game, and went into the epic fifth set. Overhead the clouds darkened, lightening crashed beyond the Stadium but not a person among the 10,000 spectators moved from his place as the red-headed American and the black-haired Britisher came to grips for the title.

Perry looked cooler but Budge, playing magnificently and throwing in several fine drop volleys when Perry was anchored on the baseline, drew ahead to five-three.

It was a critical moment and the youngster was not equal to it. He became nervous with victory in his grasp, overdrove the lines and Perry, winning his service, was soon even again.

But the gods were good. They gave Budge one more chance at seven-six. This time he was but two points from the set. Again his hand tightened in the crisis and again he weakened just when he appeared to be winning. Perry's cool

Browns Win Doubleheader From Red Sox, 6-4 and 3-2; Face Yankees Here Today

By Harold Tuthill.

Playing like a pennant contender instead of the seventh placers they are, the Browns, yesterday afternoon took both ends of a doubleheader from the Boston Red Sox, winning the first game, 6 to 4, and the second, 3 to 2 in 10 innings.

Poor pitching has been largely responsible for the Browns being where they are, but yesterday the pitchers were in form as Thomas and Knott collaborated in the first game victory and Earl Caldwell won the second all by himself.

The New York Yankees, 1936 American League champion, will pay a one-day visit to St. Louis today, meeting the Browns in a doubleheader, only two games being scheduled in the series. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock. Elon Hogsett and either Ivy Andrews or Russ Van Atta will pitch for the Browns while Monte Pearson and Irving Hadley are due for the new champions.

Caldwell Finds Control.

Caldwell was not a bit like the pitcher who was removed in Friday's game because of wildness, because he only issued one base on balls and except for the sixth in-

Back Comes the Bicycle.

BICYCLE days, contemporary for a time with horse and buggy days, are here again. The national championships, which conclude here today with finals in Forest Park, tell us that. Also, the highways show an increasing number of bikers with almost every month. That guarantees a return of public interest in competition which, for years, almost passed out.

An interesting and new phase of bicycle racing developed during the current meet when, for the first time, showmanship was introduced into the distance racing.

Following the lead of the professional six-day bicycle promotions the management of the amateur championships introduced into the 25 and 50 mile events a series of sprint to be started approximately after each five miles.

To Prevent "Loafing."

THIS feature was devised to liven up the contest and create a spectator interest throughout entire distance of the contest and to keep the bikers trying throughout every mile of the distance.

Heretofore complaint has been made that a distance race was a pain in the neck because the riders, grouping in a bunch, maintained that formation (except for changes of pace) throughout the entire route, the decision resting on the result of a sprint during the final mile of the competition.

This, of course destroyed two features of paramount import-

HELEN STEPHENS IN EXHIBITION, BREEZES PAST BABE DIDRIKSON

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Helen Stephens, the American Olympic track star, raced a 220-yard exhibition here today as a feature of the annual Federal Government inter-departmental track and field championship, which was won b y the Agriculture team.

Giving entrants in the girl's sprints a 50-yard handicap, Miss Stephens overtook them and breezed past to win in 25 seconds. She had a slow start but picked up speed on the turns and was racing easily as she broke the tape.

On hand to watch her, for the first time, was Mildred "Babe" Didrikson, the all-around feminine star of the 1932 Olympic track contest who since has turned her attention to golf.

'She's plenty fast," said Babe as she watched the Fulton (Mo.) girl streak along. "Helen and I should have had a pretty good race if we'd met a few years ago."

WORLD SERIES OPENS SEPT. 30 IN NATIONAL WINNER'S PARK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The National League pennant winner—whether it's the Giants, Cardinals or Cubs—will be host to the New York Yankees and the first two games of the 1936 world series, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

Contending club owners decided that, among other essential details, at a meeting today with Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis to make arrangements for what likely will be a financial record-breaker, if, as now appears likely, the New York Giants qualify to meet the Yankees in the first "Subway Series" since 1923.

Such is the combined seating capacity of the Polo Grounds and Yankee Stadium, the American League's biggest park, that five games on a sellout basis would result in a new record for receipts, with the $100,000 for radio rights taken into account. The all-time series "high" of $1,207,864 was set in a seven-game series between the Yankees and Cardinals in 1926.

The third, fourth and fifth games will be at Yankee Stadium, home of the American League champions. The sixth and seventh, if necessary, will be played under National League auspices.

The Prospective Dates.

With an all-New York series in prospect, the specific dates for the title set would be, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 at the Polo Grounds; Oct. 2, 3 and 4 at Yankee Stadium, and Oct. 5 and 6 at the Polo Grounds, also if needed.

However, should the Cardinals or Cubs come through in the National League, a day off for traveling would be necessary between the changes of locale.

Exclusive broadcast rights have been purchased for $100,000 by the Ford Motor Co. for the third straight year, Commissioner Landis announced.

BUFFALO WINS THIRD VICTORY IN PLAYOFF

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 12. — The Buffalo Bisons took a lead of three games to one in their International League semifinal playoffs today by downing the Newark Bears, 6 to 1, behind Bob Kline's six-hit pitching.

The Bisons now need one more victory to clinch their place in their spot in the final playoffs with the winner of the Rochester-Baltimore semifinal for the Governor's Cup and the right to represent the International League in the "little world's series."

The score:
Buffalo— —010003020— 6 10 0
Newark— —000010000— 1 6 1

Batteries—Kline and Crouse; Sundra, Makosky and Baker.

DIZZY DEAN CHARGED WITH 11TH DEFEAT IN FIRST, 9-8, WINS, 10-3, FOR 23D VICTORY

Redbirds Unable to Hold Six-Run Lead in First Contest—Frisch's Men Now Trail Leaders by Three and Half Games—Winford and Parmelee to Face New York This Afternoon.

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 12.—Frankie Frisch's pitching staff blew up in the first game of a double-header with the Brooklyn Dodgers this afternoon and the Cardinals missed a fine opportunity to make a substantial gain in their desperate struggle to overtake the New York Giants.

The Gas House Gang had a lead of 7 to 1, going into the sixth inning of the first contest of the day, but Silas Johnson staggered, George Earnshaw and even the great Jerome Herman Dean faltered as relief pitchers and the Dodgers, scoring eight runs in their last three innings, turned an apparently certain defeat into a victory, nosing out the Redbirds, 9 to 8.

Dizzy Wins No. 23, Loses No. 11.

Dizzy went to the hill in the eighth inning with one out and Dodger runners on second and third with enough runs to tie the score. Before Dizzy could end the frame those two runners and one other crossed the plate and the defeat was charged to the account of the ace of the Gas House Gang.

Jerome Herman came back in the second game and registered his twenty-third victory of the season, coasting to a decision behind a vicious St. Louis attack. Dizzy had a lead of 8 to 0 before the Dodgers were able to score and the final count was 10 to 3.

Redbirds 3½ Games Behind.

Had the Redbirds protected their early lead in the first game, the Chicago victory over New York would have reduced the stumbling Giants' first place margin to two and a half games, an advantage that the Cardinals could have wiped out in the three-game series that starts at the Polo Grounds tomorrow. But as a result of the even break with the Flatbush comedians, the Frisch forces are still three and a half games behind the Giants. Moreover they are four behind on the lost side of the standing of the clubs, which means that the Giants can win the pennant by winning all but three of their remaining contests.

Winford and Parmelee to Hurl.

Frisch's team is not in good condition for the three-game struggle with the Giants. With Dizzy Dean out of the way for the series, unless he goes to the firing line with only one day's rest in the Monday game, the Cardinals are hard up for dependable pitchers, to put it mildly. Jim Winford will hurl one of the games tomorrow, but when he has taken his turn, there is nobody to inspire enthusiasm. Frisch said this evening that LeRoy Parmelee would draw the assignment in the second game. Parmelee has been knocked out by the Pirates and Dodgers in his last two starts.

GIANTS LOSE; WARNEKE GIVES ONLY FOUR HITS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A fifth inning uprising which shelled Hal Schumacher to the clubhouse enabled the Cubs to cash in on Lon Warneke's four-hit pitching and down the league-leading Giants, 6 to 0, in the series finale between the two clubs today, witnessed by 17,109.

The defeat clipped half a game from the Giants' first place margin, leaving it at 3½ games as the second place Cardinals split their double bill with Brooklyn.

The victory sent the Bruins out or town on even terms with the Giants for the season. Each team has 11 victories and 11 defeats.

Young Phil Cavarretta's eighth home run of the year into the upper deck of the right field stands, with two down in the fifth started the explosion that broke up a scoreless pitching duel between Schumacher and Warneke and started Schumacher toward the showers. Incidentally, Cavarretta's last three round trippers have been made off the Giant righthander.

Bill Herman followed with a single. Frank Demaree walked. Stanley Hack singled to left, scoring Herman. Gus Mancuso lost the throw to the plate and when Schumacher picked up the ball and threw wild to third Demaree counted. AugieGalan then drove in Hack, who had raced to third during the error epidemic.

This was more than enough, but the Cubs put the game on ice by counting two more in the sixth. Bill Jurges greeted Harry Gumbert with a homer into the right-field stands, and a minute later, Warneke beat out a hit, went to third on Dick Bartell's error and counted on Herman's long fly.

Meanwhile, the elongated Warneke was twirling superbly to hang up his fourteenth victory of the season and give the Bruins their seventeenth 1936 shutout. He was never in danger of being scored on.

By Babe Ruth.
Chairman, All-America Board of Baseball.

For the fifteenth successive year, it is my privilege and pleasure to offer my idea of the All-Star baseball team of 1936. In making some of the selections, the task has been a simple one, due to the outstanding performances of certain players, during the season now drawing to a close. In some positions the competition has been close enough to cause considerable deliberation before a player could be named.

The system which has been followed since the selection of the first team in 1922 was observed again this year. I have named two pitchers, but only one player for each other position. I note in looking over the selections of this season and last that only three of the 10 players named a year ago have held the pace through the 1936 campaign. The seven chosen in 1935 who failed to make this year's team are Tom Bridges, Gabby Hartnett, Hank Greenberg, Arky Vaughan, Pepper Martin, Roger Cramer and Mel Ott.

As seven players drop from the ranks, at least temporarily, four who were members of the All-America team previous to last season have returned to the fold. Three others are newcomers. The 1935 team included six players whose names had not previously appeared.

General value to the team must, of course, be the basis on which these selections are made. The argument is frequently advanced against a selection that such and such a player is a better fielder, or perhaps a better hitter. In a club such as this batting must play a big part, inasmuch as hits and runs spell success or failure for a ball team. But neither batting nor fielding can be considered alone.

Must Consider Many Things.

The capable fielder, who is a powerful hitter, must naturally be chosen over another player who may be more brilliant in the field, but much weaker at the bat. By the same token a player may be a strong hitter and not good enough in a defensive way to get the call. Team spirit, speed and hustle are other considerations in choosing any team of this broad scope.

At times in the past the cry of favoritism has been raised—that one league had more representatives than the other. When I was playing with the Yankees it was quite natural, I suppose, to have the question advanced whenever the American League players were more numerous than National Leaguers. But I finished my playing days in the National League and am now out of baseball. So I can hardly be accused of favoring either league.

It is a matter of fact that I have never attempted to balance the leagues by naming five players from each. I pick the players, regardless of league, and if it ever happens that seven or eight are from one league the names will be offered just the same. Last year six of the 10 players on my team were National Leaguers. This year six of the 10 are from the American League.

I have worked again this year in conjunction with the All-America Board of Baseball, which consists of 10 sports editors or baseball writers, and Christy Walsh, organizer of the board. They submit their views on the relative merits of the players. I compare their selections with mine, weigh the values of the players as I know them, and then make the final decisions.

My reasons for making these selections will be given later.

The members of the All-America Board of Baseball are as follows: Jack Malaney, Boston Post; Tom Swope, Cincinnati Post; Ed Geiger, Chicago American; Stuart Bell, Cleveland Press; Bud Shaver, Detroit Times; Bill Slocum, New York American; James Isaminger, Philadelphia Inquirer; Harry Keck, Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph; J. E. Wray, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Kirk Miller, Washington Times; Christy Walsh, New York.

Now for the various positions and the reasons which prompted the selections:

FIRST BASE

As the vote of the All-America Board indicated, there isn't likely to be much debate on the choice of the outstanding first baseman of the year. Nor is it necessary to offer much in the way of comparison to justify the selection of Gehrig for the place. Lou has been an outstanding performer for many years. At times he has been displaced as the leader, three times by Jimmy Foxx, once by Bill Terry and once by Hank Greenberg. But there is none among the first basemen of 1936 who can be advanced seriously as Lou's rival for the place.

SECOND BASE

Gehringer, the Detroit Tigers' star, was the outstanding player at this position for the three seasons prior to 1936. Billy Herman has been outstanding in the National League just as Gehringer has been in the American. From a fielding standpoint neither leaves much to be desired. It is on hitting that the choice must depend, and the Detroiter has the edge on the Chicagoan in both power and consistency at the plate.

During the early part of the season, Stuart Martin of the Cardinals was an outstanding player at this position., but failed to maintain the steady pace. Burgess Whitehead of the Giants bows to none as a fielder, but lack of hitting power holds him back.

SHORTSTOP

Appling win the place as the outstanding shortstop of the year through his steady fielding and strong hitting. Appling has had previous good years in the field, and he has had good seasons in batting. But in no past campaign did he perform so well in both departments.

I believe the shortstop play of the current season has been generally higher than the work of the second and third basemen. Leo Durocher of the Cardinals has been having his best year with the stick since coming into the majors and his fielding has been brilliant, as always. But his mark is under the .300 line, while Appling has been well above the .350 mark much of the season.

THIRD BASE

There has been no standout player among the third basemen. The caliber of third base play has been generally good, quite up to the average, I would say, but there has been no third sacker who showed the allround value of Pie Traynor through several seasons; of Bill Werber in 1934; of Fred Lindstrom a few years back, or the dash and fire of Pepper Martin last season.

As the vote of the All-America Board members clearly indicates, there is a wide difference of opinion as to the merits of the third baseman. On 10 ballots seven different names appeared, no player getting more than two. I have picked Odell Hale chiefly on the long distance hitting power which he possesses, because I can see no great difference in the fielding skill of several players, at least not enough to offset this hitting strength.

Red Rolfe of the Yankees and Harlond Clift of the Browns are other long distance hitters, and capable third basemen, as well.

LEFT FIELD

Left field, like first base, leaves little room for argument as to the season's leading performer. During the early weeks, it looked as if Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees would sweep through to top honors with something to spare. Joe Vosmik, the star at the position in the American League a year ago, got away to a poor start and the Yankee youngster was brilliant. DiMaggio still ranks as an unusually fine performer for a first year man, and one of the greatest players to come into the majors in many years. But as the weeks rolled by the clouting of Joe Medwick became more and more impressive. Medwick clubbed his way well above the .350 mark and continued to battle Paul Waner and Frank Demaree for the National League batting leadership. Medwick occupies the clean-up position in the Cardinals' batting order and he has been the main cog in the drive which kept the Cards at the top, or close to it, during the season. His unanimous choice for this position by the members of the All-America Board merely confirms a belief which generally prevails.

CENTER FIELD

The choice of Earl Averill for center field is not likely to occasion much argument. A year ago the hard-hitting Clevelander was entirely out of the competition, due to an accident early in July. Roger Cramer was the star at this position, combining unusual ground covering ability with strong batting.

Averill, always a powerful hitter, figures to close his season with a batting mark far above any he has reached in the past. Recent figures show him hitting .376 to lead the A. L. with a generous sprinkling of extra-base hits in his collection. His fielding has been high class. The brilliant DiMaggio, who spent some time at this position, has done enough to have earned first call on some of the All-America teams of the past. But I cannot place him above the veteran Clevelander, any more than I would rate him above Medwick, in considering the left fielders. Next year Joe may top them all.

The Cardinals have brought out a brilliant newcomer in this position, Terry Moore, and the Giants have a capable first year player in Jim Ripple, who has won the place from the hard-hitting Hank Leiber.

RIGHT FIELD

The leading right fielders of the year, as I view them, are Frank Demaree of the Cubs, Paul Waner of the Pirates, Mel Ott of the Giants, Beau Bell of the Browns, Jonathan Stone of the Senators, and George Selkirk of the Yankees.

There will be some dispute as to my choice of Demaree. I realize that fact from the vote of the committee and fromthe opinions of fans or players with whom I have discussed the right fielders. Some have agreed with me that the up-and-coming Demaree is superior to some of the veterans with long, established prestige. Others disagree.

I have chosen him over players who hit about as well because I have been impressed by his general work and style. He strikes me as a player who is improving all the time.

CATCHER

The outstanding catchers of recent years in major league baseball have been Mickey Cochrane, Gabby Hartnett, Bill Dickey and Rick Ferrell. Last year, Hartnett had a great season and was the main factor in the pennant drive of the Cubs. He was my choice then, though many picked Cochrane. In the 1934 season, Cochrane had been my choice, and in the two seasons prior to 1934 Dickey had been the leading backstop.

There is little argument this year as to who belongs in first place. Cochrane has been out of the game most of the year; Hartnett has had no such season as he enjoyed in 1935, while Dickey has been hitting far beyond his best previous mark and also having a grand year behind the plate.

PITCHERS

If there is any dispute about the pitching selections for the 1936 all-America team I think it will be whether Dean should be placed above Hubbell, or whether Hubbell gets first place. In other words who would get first call for a world series if both were on the same team.

The two are tied in number of pitching victories and are close together in number of games and innings. Hubbell has fewer defeats. On the early season's work, when Dizzy was running up a string of successive victories he had the call over the New York lefthander. But in recent weeks the brilliant pitching of Hubbell has made him appear better than Dean.

I don't think there are any American League picthers equal to this pair of National Leaguers.

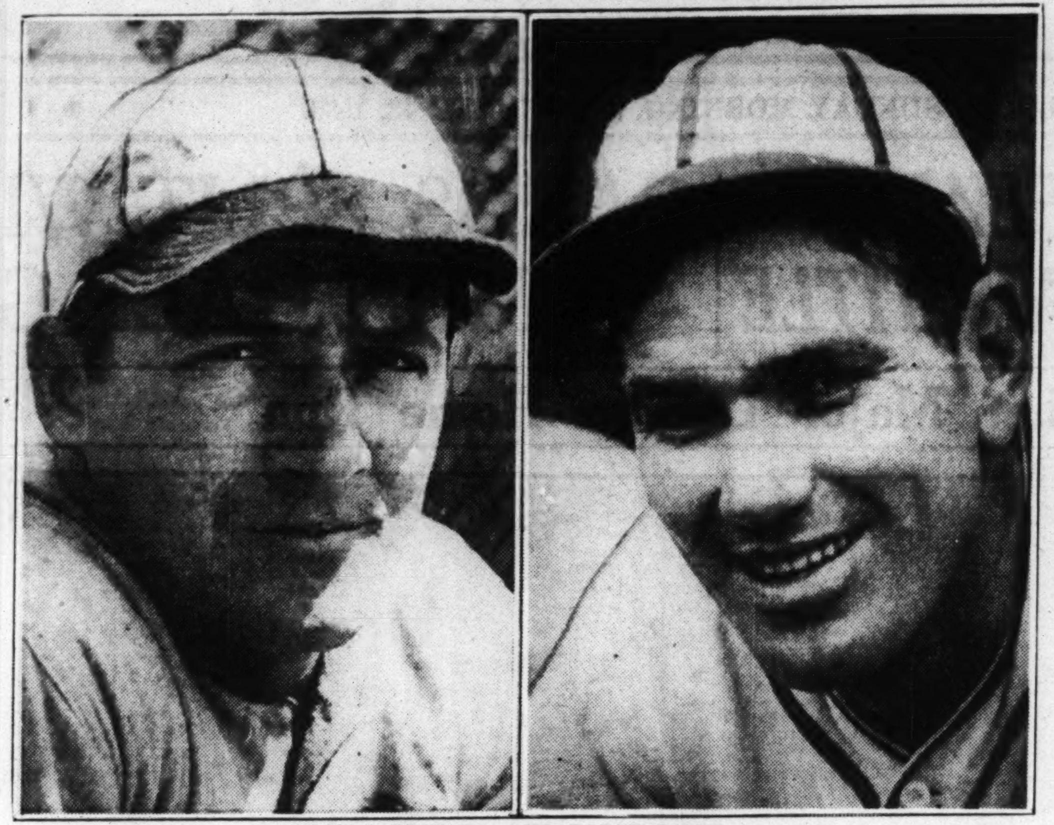
Cards Picked by Ruth for His All-America



JOE MEDWICK AND DIZZY DEAN

Cardinals Split With Dodgers; Gain Half a Game on Giants

are likely to oppose Winford and Parmelee.

Winsett Villain and Hero.

Jack Winsett, long-legged, hard-hitting outfielder, was the villain and the hero of the opening game. Casey Stengel bought him after seeing him hit several home runs in an all-star game and there is no question about his hitting ability. But in the early innings he helped the Cardinals to an early lead by leisurely fielding which enabled Don Gutteridge and Art Garibaldi to turn hits to left field into home runs inside the park. However, the boos that greeted his clownish fielding changed to cheers when he started a three-run rally with a home run in the sixth inning and drove in the tying and winning runs in the eighth with a single off the great Dizzy Dean.

How Birds Scored in First.

Garibaldi's single, Pepper Martin's double and an infield out gave the Cards a run in the first inning and the Dodgers tied the score in the second on a pass to Phelps, Hassett's single and an infield out.

Medwick doubled to open the fourth and after Mize and Durocher had flied out, Gutteridge hit to left field and when Winsett missed his attempt at a shoe-string catch and then was slow pursuing the ball, Gutteridge circled the bases to follow Medwick over the plate.

With one out in the fifth, Fullis tripled to right center and Garibaldi got his homer inside the park while Winsett was chasing it after it rebounded from the left field wall. Pepper Martin followed with a double to right and continued to third on Randy Moore's fumble, but was out at the plate on Medwick's grounder to Stripp. Mize then walked and when Stripp fielded Durocher's infield hit and threw wild to first, Medwick and Mize scored.

That made the score 7 to 1 and the crowd of 15,249 was resigned to a defeat. In fact, the customers seemed to be rather pleased, for it meant a tightening of the race and perhaps a bit of worry for the despised Giants.

But then the Dodgers went to work. With boos of the crowd rumbling in his ears, Winsett changed the tune by lofting a homer over the right-field screen. Phelps singled to left and Hassett doubled to left. Phelps scored on an infield out and Hassett on Frey's single to right. Singles by Stripp and Phelps and Hassett's double to right scored two more in the seventh, after Mize had hit a homer in the Redbird half for the Card's eighth run.

Earnshaw In and Out.

That left the Cards with a two-run advantage and when Ogrodowski singled in the eighth, Frisch called on Collins to bat for the weary Silas Johnson, and when the Dodgers went to bat, Earnshaw was the St. Louis pitcher.

Earnshaw walked Frey, the first hitter in the eighth, on five pitches. Bucher batted for Baker and popped out, but George Watkins, the big striker-outer of yesterday, batted for Jordan and when George punched a double against the right-field screen, Frisch threw a towel from the dugout and called Dizzy Dean to the rescue. Bordagaray greeted Jerome Herman with a single to left, scoring Frey and after Stripp walked, Winsett singled to left, scoring Watkins and Bordagaray to put the Dodgers ahead.

Dizzy stopped the rally at that point, but it was too late and when George Jeffcoat, a juvenile hurler, disposed of Pepper Martin, Medwick and Mize in the ninth, the Cardinals went to the gloom of the clubhouse.

Second a Breeze for Dizzy.

The second game was a breeze for Jerome Herman, who was a shutout pitcher except in the fifth inning. In the first, a pass to Fullis and Medwick's double produced a run and in the fourth Medwick again doubled and scored on Mize's single.

In the fifth the Redbirds put the game on ice. With one out, Fullis singled to left and Garibaldi singled to right. Pepper Martin was thrown out on a tap in front of the plate, but after Medwick was passed intentionally, Frey missed Mize's hot grounder, Fullis and Garibaldi scoring and Medwick reaching third. Durocher lined a double to left center, scoring Medwick and Mize, and Gutteridge singled, scoring Durocher. Gutteridge then stole second, took third on Phelps' high throw and while the Dodgers were still in a daze, the young third baseman from Columbus made a clean steal of home, his second in two days.

In the Brooklyn fifth, Hassett doubled, Randy Moore singled off Garibaldi's glove, Frey walked and Bucher's fly and Cooney's single sent in three runs.

The Cardinals scored the ninth and tenth runs in the ninth on singles by Garibaldi, Pepper Martin and Medwick and Mize's long outfield fly.

EIGHT FORMER CHAMPIONS IN U. S. AMATEUR GOLF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 12.—A wild free fight in blustery weather without a single dominating figure in the field was the prospect for the National Amateur golf championship today, as the 210 entrants prepared for their last practice rounds before the championship gets under way Monday.

The historic course was shaved and trimmed today and, as the wind mounted, the veterans in the field were receiving more attention than ever before.

With Lawson Little, the present champion now in the professional ranks ,Albert "Scotty" Campbell, Seattle, and Johnny Goodman, are generally favored, though betting has been light because of the unusually large number of capable players.

There are eight former champions in the field—George Dunlap, New York, 1933; C. Ross Somerville, Canada, 1932; Francis Ouimet, Brookline, Mass., 1914 and 1931; Max Marston, Philadelphia, 1923; Jess Sweetser, New York, 1922; Jesse P. Guilford, Boston, 1921; Chick Evans, Chicago, 1916 and 1920; and Dave Herron, Pittsburgh, 1919.

Four of these are definitely conceded some chance of coming through. They are Somerville, Ouimet, Dunlap and Swetser.

Somerville, playing the game of his life right now, and Hector Thomson, the shy, stammering Scotch boy who holds the British Amateur championship, are outstanding among the 19 foreign players in the field. Two other Scotch boys, Jack McLean and Gordon Peters, are also given a chance to come through, specially McLean who is in the fourth and apparently the least difficult quarter in the draw.

Three youngsters, Freddy Haas, New Orleans, the Canadian amateur champion, Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, and Reynolds Smith, Dallas both members of the American Walker Cup team, are being favored by some critics.

Francis Ouimet has also collected quite a following by his play this week. He has been putting the slick Garden City greens especially well ever since arriving here and today he toured the course in 71, two under par, for the best score of the day.

FRED PERRY DEFEATS DONALD BUDGE FOR U. S. TENNIS TITLE

confidence carried him through, and toward the end the American was fairly tottering about the court. In the last two games there was only one man in action and that man was the winner.

Stroking with amazing resourcefulness and displaying completely unexpected "staying" power, Miss Marble came from behind to down Miss Jacobs in their drama on the famous West Side Stadium court.

Few in the gallery had, from the start of the tournament, any idea that the challenger could break down the steady and remorseless game that since the withdrawal of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody has ruled the world of tennis.

Marble-Jacobs Match.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Miss Marble, who lost to Miss Jacobs in the finals of the Manchester, N. H., invitation tournament last month, started auspiciously, breaking through Helen's service in the first game and going on to take a 3—1 lead. Miss Jacobs rallied and pulled up to 4—3, but she was not stroking the ball overhead as confidently or with the finality she demonstrated in the two previous rounds. But she lifted her play to championship form as she won the last two games on eight errors by Miss Marble and took the set at 6—4.

It was with the start of the second set that Miss Marble produced some of the finest shotmaking the championship has known. She found a vulnerable spot in Miss Jacobs' backhand and kept plugging the ball at the righthand corner every chance she had. She not only had the better long game, but caught the defending champion flat-footed time and again with brilliantly executed drop shots that fell just over the net and went for winners every time.

After trailing 0—2 in the second set, Miss Marble won four games in a row, shattering Helen's delivery in the third and fifth games, largely by playing to Miss Jacobs' backhand and using that tantalizing drop shot. She clinched the set by overcoming a 15-40 deficit and again breaking Miss Jacobs' service in the ninth game.

Up to this time the thumb on Miss Jacobs' racquet hand, which was taped after being dislocated in practice earlier in the week, didn't seem to bother her, but in the final set she constantly rubbed the digit under her left arm. After the match she said it didn't hurt her, but it probably wouldn't have made any difference either way, because Miss Marble played an unbeatable game in the third set, pulling away to a 4—0 lead with the loss of only four points in the stretch, and then biding her time for the kill, which came in the eighth game, which she won on her seventh and last service break of the match.

Browns Win Doubleheader From Red Sox, 6-4 and 3-2

ning kept Boston's seven hits fairly well scattered.

The Browns had the satisfaction of beating Mike Meola, their ex-teammate, who was picked up by Boston from the Syracuse Club of the International League. However, Mike pitched a creditable game and after the first inning when the Browns counted their first two, did not allow a run until the tenth.

The extra inning frame was typical of the way a fighting ball club should stay in there all the way. Lyn Lary opened by bunting past Meola, and while the Sox infielders wondered who was going to cover first, Lary reached the bag safely. Clift bunted for a sacrifice but forced Lary, Meola to Cronin. On the hit and run Solters singled past the spot where Joe Cronin had been standing a split second before and Clift raced to third.

Bell Drives In Winning Run.

At this point it seemed the strategic thing to pass the hard-hitting Beau Bell, but Manager Cronin ordered Meola to pitch to him. Bell slashed a hit that hopped in front of and over Cronin; just topping his glove, for a single and Clift crossed the plate with the winning run. The Browns opened the second game scoring when Lary walked and reached second on Clift's single past Werber. Solters' sacrificed both runners along. Then Lary scored on a wild pitch, Clift moving to third. Bell grounded out, Clift holding third. Bottomley doubled to right, scoring Clift. West walked, but Bejma forced him at second for the third out.

The Sox tied it up after two were gone in the sixth. Cramer singled to right and Foxx followed with a triple in the same direction. Kroner then tripled down the right field line and Foxx scored. Cronin ended the rally on a fly to Bell.

Thomas Victor in First.

In the first game, Manager Hornsby took a few chances so that when Al Thomas showed signs of weakening in the late innings, he was removed in favor of Knott. Since Thomas in the there for seven and one-third innings, he was credited with the victory, his ninth of the season. H also has lost nine games.

The Browns got to Fritz Ostermueller, the starting pitcher for a run in each of the first and second innings, but in the third Boston tied it up when Ostermueller singled and counted on Gaffke's home run in to the left field seats.

Bottomley Bats in Two Runs.

In their half of the fifth frame the Browns put on a storm with two gone that netted them three runs. Solters started with a single to right. Bell singled to center, Solters reaching third. Sunny Jim Bottomley tripled off the wall in right center, scoring Bell and Solters. Bottomley counted on West's single to center and when Flit Cramer fumbled, West went to second, but he languished there while Bejma grounded out.

The blow that led to Thomas' removal was delivered by Babe Dahlgren, who punched a home run into the left field seats with Cronin on base. Thus all four of Boston's runs were batted in by circuit clouts.

The Browns' sixth and final run was manufactured by Harlond Clift, who lofted his nineteenth home run of the season in the left field seats. There was nobody on at the time.

Knott pitched part of the eighth and the ninth without being scored on.

By their double victory the Browns gained a game and a half on the last-place Philadelphia Athletics. The Browns also took the series from the Sox, two games to one.

Brownie Notes.

TED OLSON, who appeared in the relief role for the Red Sox in yesterday's game, is a graduate of Dartmouth, class of '36.

The season's final with the Red Sox drew about 3000, many of whom were women, who took advantage of ladies' day.

Harlond Clift's fielding has been of sterling quality during the Brown's present stand. He has been getting his share of hits,

In the second inning of the second contest yesterday, Lyn Lary caught Mike Meola napping and stole third base while Mike held the ball. In as much as Lary had just previously stole second it gave him his thirty-first and thirty-second thefts of the season.

115 Begin Play in Qualifying Round at Algonquin Tomorrow

By W. J. McGoogan

A number of out of town entrants in the second annual Missouri women's golf tournament, which starts Monday morning at Algonquin Golf Club, arrived yesterday and practiced over the course, the last opportunity for them to do so.

Anna Sue Kennedy, Columbia, Mo., school teacher, who eliminated Babe Didrikson from the Western Open tournament at Topeka, Kan., this season, was one. Miss Kennedy is expected to be one of the favorites along with Sara Guth of Algonquin, to reach the final round.

Miss Kennedy played around with Miss Guth and both of them did fairly well.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, defending champion, also went over the course again but a bad seven on the second hole caused her to take an 80, three strokes over her first-score.

The tournament really gets under way this afternoon when driving, approaching and putting contests will be held, scheduled to start at 4 o'clock.

The qualifying round of 18 holes will be played tomorrow with a round of match play at 18 holes each day until Saturday when the 36-hole final round for the title is scheduled.

There will be flights arranged for virtually all the contestants and they will be paired according to their qualifying scores with 32 in the championship flight.

Officials of the club and of the tournament were hoping for more rain today to help the course along

There were 11 women paired for the qualifying round with Mrs. Hill and Miss Guth the first pair to leave the tee at 8 a. m. They will be followed by Miss Kennedy and Mrs. Doris Spalding, Westborough, 5 minutes later with the others starting in pairs at five-minute intervals.

LAWSON LITTLE

Templeton Four Wins Polo Cup

By the Associated Press.

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Templeton, runner-up for the National Open polo championship, won the Monty Waterbury Memorial Cup tournament today by defeating Roslyn, 14 to 13, in the final match at the Meadow Brook Club. The teams which compete in the open, meet annually on a handicap basis in the Waterbury tourney. Greentree, the open winner, did not participate.

BRADDOCK READY TO RETURN TO NEW YORK, ARM, HAND IMPROVED

By the Associated Press.

VENICE, Fla., Sept. 12.—James J. Braddock, world's heavyweight boxing champion, packed his bags tonight and prepared to leave for New York after a month spent here undergoing treatment for arthritis.

Accompanied by Marty McGann, he will leave Venice Monday. He will stop in Lakeland to referee a fight, and in Tampa. His present schedule calls for him to arrive in New York Wednesday.

Staff physicians at Florida Medical Center, where Braddock underwent treatment at direction of Dr. Fred H. Albee, said his general condition was improving after his stay in Florida.

Braddock said his ailing arm and hand, which forced postponement of his scheduled title bout with Max Schmeling, are beginning to feel "fine." He said he would continue the treatment directed by Dr. Albee for two or three months in New York.

LAWSON LITTLE WINS HIS FIRST TITLE AS 'PRO'

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Sept. 12. — Lawson Little, the subject of much doleful head-shaking because of his performances since he gave up his amateur status last spring after two years of sweeping the United States and British amateur golf championships, came into his own as a professional golfer today.

Winning his first tournament as a pro, Little staged a stirring finish to capture the Canadian open title from a brilliant field with a 72-hole total of 271 strokes.

Four times in succession the husky San Franciscan bettered the par of 70 for the St. Andrews public course to smash the scoring record for the tourney and record one of the lowest aggregates ever scored over a full-length course.

Despite his remarkable rounds of 67, 66, 69 and 69, Little had a fight on his hands to stay in front of the field through the last 36 holes today as Jimmy Thomson, the Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., clouter, rattled off a 69-69 for the last two rounds. Starting 10 strokes behind, Thomson at one time cut his deficit to three strokes. He was five behind as the last nine began, then saw his hopes vanish as the Presidio Pounder shot five birdies on the last six holes.

Little's victory brought him $1,000 in prize money, while Thomson, finishing with a 279, earned $600. The $400 third money went to Craig Wood, blond New York shotmaker, who also carded a pair of 69's today for a total of 282. Leo Diegel of Philmont, Pa., who set the old scoring record of 274 in the 1929 tournament at Montreal, had a 283 to tie with Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., for fourth. Each received $250.

Paul Runyan, the White Plains N. Y., sharpshooter, who was not far behind Little after the first two rounds, had the comparatively high scores of 74 and 73 today and took sixth money, $100. Al Watrous, Birmingham, Mich., and Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, received $75 each for scoring 285's.

The lowest Canadian scorer was Robert T. Gray Jr. of the Sandwich Golf Club, Windsor, Ont. He carded 286.

Even a stampeding gallery of 8,000, running through the traps and brushing the course stewards aside in their efforts to reach vantage points, cheering like a baseball crowd whenever he made a good shot, failed to perturb Little when the chips were down.

WRAY'S COLUMN

ance—first, the test of individual endurance; second, the observers interest in the event, except for the final flash.

The Amateur Bicycle League of America in using the new plan, has tried to give the public a race which would be a test of the riders and a treat for the spectators.

The Finish Is Fine.

FOR the first time, the former American road race idea was introduced at the Olympic Games in Berlin. Under the European system, each rider was started off at a definite time. He was left to his own devices as to what pace to set and the result was that each man put forth his best effort throughout the race.

This system was a fine test of the man; but it is a poor spectacle for the public. Even the timers had little idea of who had won until all the returns were in. There was no struggle at the finish and the cold facts, assembled after some minutes or hours, alone determined the winner.

The Olympic Games Committee, moved by a desire to create spectator interest, this year abandoned the European plan.

The result was a long, dull grind by a bunched group and a terrific sprint by a large field at the finish. Spills were numerous and perhaps the best man won and perhaps he didn't. But it was a thrill for the spectators.

It Can't Be Done.

UP TO the Olympic race, this writer held the view that our local long distance races, which resulted in the same sort of sprint after a long grind, were due to loafing and lack of initiative by our riders.

With the pick of the world's riders in the Olympic Games, this view was knocked cold. This writer now believes that the American style will never result in a race in which each rider is extended all the way.

None of the riders is good enough to jump his field. So they remain grouped to the finish.

Whether the new plan, tried here for the first time, will prove satisfactory, is a guess. It is highly artificial, but it does break up the monotony, from the spectators' standpoint.

Still Another Plan.

THE St. Louis Cycling Club, one of the veteran amateur organizations of pre-war times and still very active, has another plan which it has submitted to the Amateur Bicycle League of America.

This suggestion was developed following dissatisfaction expressed with the 62½ mile Olympic trials held here. This writer presents a copy of the recommendation made by the club in the hope of creating a truly run-race as well as one that would interest observers. Here is the Cycling Club's idea, embodied in a letter from President Louis Knippenberg, chairman of the race committee, Harry S. Sharpe and Secretary Herman H. Schulze; undoubtedly the suggestion will receive serious attention from the Amateur Bicycle League:

The American System.

"Bicycle road racing has for years created a difficult problem. The American system appeases a thrill-hungry crowd because it assures a thrilling sprint at the tape. With its spills and smashup, it offers a stirring climax to an otherwise uneventful, though possibly gruelling grind.

"The riders, if evenly matched, take pace off each other for the distance and then save everything for the final sprint. The great drawback of this system is the fact that Lady Luck plays only too important a part in the final stretch and in countless instances the best riders are bottled up or eliminated because of spills due to massing.

"The race against time is a fairer test of the individual rider's prowess and the winner usually crosses the tape as a winner because he is the best man in the field. As a spectacle, however, such a race is a total loss. Since each man rides alone and unpaced, the thrill of massed, maniacal sprints is missing and the crowds stay at home.

"The search for a workable solution has been uninterrupted but so far, futile. At this time, however, the St. Louis Cycling Club would like to go on record with a recommendation that it believes to be practicable.

The Cycling Club's Plan.

"In the Olympics each country is represented by a team of four riders. Our suggestion is that each TEAM be started at five-minute intervals. As long as three men of any team remain in the field, they are to be considered a team, but if more than one man should drop out, for any reason whatsoever, the team as a TEAM, is eliminated.

"However, the remaining riders may continue in the race and vie for individual honors. Thus a trophy or any other prize decided upon will be given the winning TEAM and a set of three medals, gold, silver and bronze will be awarded to the three riders who cross the tape as first, second and third TIME-WINNERS, regardless whether they are all members of one team or of three teams.

"Should one team overtake another, they may take pace off each other and group together if they choose, but it is naturally to the advantage of the team so overtaken to try once more to break loose and shake off the pursuers.

Advantages of Plan.

"A race run on this pattern has many advantages.

"1. It gives every rider an even chance. The dreaded massing of riders on a narrow road with its subsequent hazards, is done away with, since the race is run in small groups.

"2. The winner is really WORTHY of his reward. He has beaten the field against TIME, paced only by the few members of his own team. He is a CHAMPION.

"3. It speeds up the race from gun to tape, since no man can at any time be assured of a winning position and every second may count.

"4. Due to this speeding-up since rivalry is ever at fever pitch, since there is NO LET-UP, NO LOAFING PERIOD and since the race is ridden by groups rather than merely individuals, SPECTATOR INTEREST IS GREATLY INCREASED.

"5. Because of the five-minute starting intervals, which cause a breaking up of the field into groups, the crowd is assured of a SERIES of gruelling sprints at the tape.

"6. It is our belief that sport writers who have often constructively criticised the weaknesses of the present style of races will capitulate and give cycling a better break.

"TRIALS in this country, patterned along the above suggestions, would be run as follows: All contestants would be divided into teams, either by selection of the judges or by lot, and started at five-minute intervals. Individual performance alone would count, so that the riders chosen to represent their country would be men who have won their race against TIME.

"The St. Louis Cycling Club feels that a race conducted under such rules will be extremely fair to each and every contestant, that it will result in the qualification of the ablest riders and that it will accomplish this not only without detracting from the spectacle of our American system race, but that it will even add to the spectator interest because of a series of group sprints.

"LOUIS KNIPPENBERG, President.
"HARRY S. SHARPE, Chairman of Race Committee.
"HERMAN H. SCHULZE, Secretary."

CAVALCADE FINISHES LAST; FIELD OF NINE

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 12.—Cavalcade, Mrs. Isabella Dodge Sloane's three-year-old champion of 1934, reached the end of a once brilliant racing trial at Narragansett Part today.

The 5-year-old son of Lancegay, striving for a comeback after an absence of more than a year, finished a badly beaten last in a field of nine in a $1,400 handicap race, won by the Calumet Farm's, Sun Teddy.

It was the second start within the week for Cavalcade and the second successive time that the former champion finished in the ruck. Today, his performance in the mile and a sixteenth test for the $25,000 Narragansett Special was even more miserable than his initial effort earlier in the week.

Cavalcade, with Georgia Woolf astride, was never a contender and wound up twenty-three lengths behind the winner.

Sun Teddy, a 3-year-old son of Teddy, won the event by a length from Mountainy Man, with C. V. Whitney's Pundit third. Eddie Arcaro, who rode Sun Teddy, brought the chestnut colt across in 1:44 4-5.

MUNICIPAL SOCCER OFFICIALS TO HOLD MEETING TUESDAY

The annual preliminary meeting of the Municipal Soccer League will be held at Sherman Park Community Center Tuesday evening, it was announced yesterday by Frank D. Sullivan, superintendent of public recreation.

The Caballeros, last year's junior league champions, will enter the intermediate division, according to Manager Benito Fernandez.

POMPOON AND ACTION WIN $5,000 STAKES AT AQUEDUC

SON OF POMPEY BEATS FLYING SCOT IN JUNIOR CHAMPION RACE

Sets Excellent Time of 1:18 1-5 for Six and One-Half Furlongs—Action Leads From Break to Win Edgmere.

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., Sept. 12.—J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon, advance favorite for the rich Belmont Futurity, took another important step nearer to the juvenile title here today when he won the fourteenth Junior Champion Stakes of six and a half furlongs.

For nearly six furlongs it was a thrilling, ding-dong battle between the Philadelphia-owned son of Pompey and John Hay Whitney's 20 to 1 shot, Flying Scot. Then Pompoon slowly but surely demonstrated his superiority and was going easily in the final strides to win by three parts of a length in the excellent time of 1:18 1-5.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Tedious, third in the Hopeful Stakes, was a badly beaten third, eight lengths back and a half length before Maemere's Rockwood. E. R. Bradley's Biologist was last in the field of five. Besides the winner, Flying Scot and Biologist were named for the Futurity, which also is at six ad a half furlongs.

Pompoon, carrying 119 pounds, or nine more than Flying Scot, was a 2 to 7 favorite with the big throng, which, however, did not measure up to the 20,000 or so that visited the course Labor day. It was Pompoon's fifth score in six races. His more important previous success was in the national Stallion Stakes at Belmont. He earned $5530 today.

Action Wins Edgemere.

Action, the converted jumper which has scaled the heights through a succession of claiming races, graded affairs and finally topflight handicaps since being purchased for $1000 by Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs last spring, continued his amazing victory march by winning the seventeenth Edgemere handicap of a mile and a furlong.

The seven-year-old son of Olambala led seven smart rivals virtually from the break and took the $5030 winner's share of the purse by a length and a half under Johnny Gilbert. It was his tenth success in 11 efforts this year and brought his total earnings for the season to $17,985, or nearly 18 times what he cost.

Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Arthur, recent hard-luck second in the Washington Park Handicap; Mrs. A. A. Baroni's Ann O'Ruley and A. A. Baroni's Goldeneye, the latter pair coupled, were bunched for the place. They were placed in that order after the photo had been examined. Action, carrying 122 pounds, ran the nine furlongs in 1:49 4-5 and was a 7 to 5 choice He gave Trainer Hirsch Jacobs his one hundred and twenty-eighth triumph of 1936.

Trolley League Clubs in Second Title Contest

The second game between the Stags of Belleville and Edgemont A. C. of East St. Louis for the 1936 Trolley League championship will be played this afternoon at State Street Park, East St. Louis. Play begins at 3 o'clock.

Last week, the Stags won the opening struggle at Belleville, coming from behind in the eighth to deadlock the count by scoring four runs and winning in the tenth, when Fred Seiler crossed the plate on Vernon Starr's perfect bunt down first base line.

The Stags need only one more victory to give them their second straight title.

In an effort to get more hitting, Manager Ray Besse of the Athletics will change his bating order. "Smokey" Clarence Smith will be the starting pitcher, while Besse will replace Bob Stephens behind the bat.

Glen Barthleme, who went the route for Stags last Sunday, will probably start the game, with Eddie Bryan as relief hurler.

Bernie Driggers of Mount Vernon is scheduled to umpire behind the plate with Bert Seib working the bases.

VAN DYCK

No one else can say for you—nor you for any other man—just what is the "type" of young lady on whom your thoughts will linger most approvingly.

Just so with Van Dyck 32's. There's logic in our telling you that millions admire their smoking qualities, and find them satisfying—but only you can decide whether Van Dyck will be your favorite.

Why not risk an experimental 5¢? Light a Van Dyck... see if a few leisurely puffs—smooth yet delightfully gratifying—don't make you want more.

An introduction costs only 5¢. And here's a case where we judicially believe a "trial marriage" will mean you and Van Dycks will "live happily ever after". Why not get acquainted?

ALBIN JURCA OF MILWAUKEE WINS 25-MILE BICYCLE RACE

LITTLE-KNOWN RIDER IS EASY VICTOR; SIMES FINISHES FOURTH

William Logan of Newark Second, Ray Jones of Paterson, N. J., Third; Another Program Today.

By Reno Hahn

t will be Albin Jurca, Milwaukee -day bicycle rider, against the eld this morning when the 50-ile race, the second and concluding senior division event of the mateur Bicycle League of America's national championship is held Forest Park, for Jurca stole way from the field yesterday to ke first place in the 25-mile race nd gain five points toward the tle.

The rider scoring the most points the two races will be the champion. Points in today's race will count 7, 5, 3, and 1 for the first four finishers.

The sprint system, in use in the national races for the first time, favors Jurca for he has had much recent experience in six-day racing which the sprints are always sed.

The stout-legged veteran waited his time yesterday, content to ride with the field during the first ten miles. He won the next sprint, held after five miles. Then, instead of owing down, as the riders usually after a sprint, Jurca called on s reserve strength and with the id of his powerful legs and high-geared bicycle, he had a commanding lead on the field before it was aware that he was making his bid.

Partner Ordered to Stop.

They started to chase him, but e was sprinting all the way and hey couldn't catch him. Then, his eammate, Bob Pfarr of Kenosha, Wis., dropped behind the field and paced Jurca for a few laps until officials discovered that Pfarr and Jurca were not on even mileage. They made Pfarr drop out of the race. That forced Jurca to set his own pace and break the wind himself, a considerable handicap in a long race.

But he had the reserve strength to finish far ahead of the field, and his margin of victory was close to a mile. His time for the 25 miles was one hour, 6 minutes, 14.8 seconds.

Jackie Simes, the Harrington Park (N. J.) sprinter, broke away from the field on the last lap and followed Jurca across the line. But he won only one other sprint point and finished fourth on total points. He has one point toward the championship.

William "Buster" Logan, the Newark Olympic rider, finished second on points with nine, and Ray Jones, the young rider who has made a reputation for himself in a short time, was third with eight. Logan has three points and Jones two for the title.

The sprint points count only toward winning points in the race and are not counted in deciding the championship. Thus the points scored in sprints today will count only toward winning the 50-mile race.

System Spreads Field.

This new sprint system tends to spread out the field, for toward the middle of the race the riders are tired out from the sprints and one with a little reserve strength can make a break.

This is the first time that local bicycle fans can remember when a rider broke away from the field in a long-distance race.

Cecil Hursey, defending champion from Savannah, fell during the first sprint and was never a factor in the race after that. He caught up with the field, but the effort robbed him of his sprint strength and he finished among the last six.

Wisconsin riders took major honors, for Gene Pottente, Kenosha, scored the most points in the two junior events, winning the one-mile race, and finishing third in the ten-mile event for seven points. David Martin, Newark, defending champion, and Lucien Musso, New York, were tied for second with six points each. Martin took second in both events, and Musso first in the ten-mile and fourth in the one-mile.

BICYCLE NOTES

About 500 spectators watched the races from stands built near the finish line just west of the Jefferson Memorial. The course was 1.8 miles and was over the roads surrounding the nine-hole golf course in the northwestern part of Forest Park.

Chester Nelsen, St. Louis rider who finished second last year, has decided to quit competitive racing for this year, so he took part as an official yesterday.

Lou Droz scored two sprint points while Ray Florman, the other St. Louis entrant, failed to score any.

Jurca was a late entrant for the meet, but he isn't slow when it comes to finishing a race.

New Queen of the Courts

MISS ALICE MARBLE.

The conqueror of Helen Jacobs in yesterday's final at Forest Hills is shown here holding the cup she won at Seabright.

Tennis Finals Filled With Drama and Skill Says Vines

By Ellsworth Vines

World's Professional Tennis Champion.

(Copyright, 1936.)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 12.—For sheer drama and excellence of play, the men's and women's singles championships, decided today on the center court at Forest Hills, far outshone anything viewed here or anywhere in recent years.

From what, in pre-tournament predictions, looked like "cinch" victories for the two world's champions, Helen Hull Jacobs and Fred J. Perry, turned out, instead, to be a rout of the former and the toughest, most stirring comeback victory Perry has achieved throughout his brilliant career.

Alice Marble, whom I picked as a finalist, accounted for the dethroning of Queen Helen, and Alice, in her victory, surprised me with her stroke repertoire. I knew the Palm Springs girl had the strokes but I did not realize she could use them with such remarkable planned force under pressure.

The Perry-Budge match, which the Englishman won, 2—6, 6—2, 8—6, 1—6, 10—8, was the finest exhibition of strategy and stroke production and execution that I have ever seen. Here was everything—a great young player playing his finest tennis ever, pressing the world's champion to the wall, and then, this same world's champion fighting back with all of his experience and resourcefulness to emerge finally from the very brink of defeat to glorious victory.

Both Strong in the Pinch.

When the going was the tightest in a deciding set it was a treat to see these two great players hitting the ball with everything they had on the many crucial points.

From the very outset, it was quite evident that Don Budge had a preconceived plan of attack, while Perry was content to take the play as it came. Here we saw the determined youngster, Budge, continually striving to assume a forcing position. How well this worked can be seen from the final score. His attack was magnificent with but very few lapses.

In the final analysis it was only greater experience on the part of Perry that pulled him through the match. Had Budge played — winning and losing—over a period of years, as many matches as has Perry, he would have known the right procedure to follow when he held commanding leads of 4—2 and 5—3 with his own service to follow in the final set.

From the commanding position at both these points, Budge, who had been forcing, suddenly had a brainstorm and elected to play safe. This was just what Perry was hoping for, as it afforded him ample time to force the play himself. Had Budge greater experience he would never have changed his winning tactics.

Budge's forehand drive, so futile all week, was perfection personified today. Not only was he able to trade shot for shot off this wing with the great Perry, but time and again outscored him from this position. Perry was missing his forehand drive repeatedly today and, as in his match against Grant, his backhand was his stronger shot. Perry seldom came to the net, while Budge was at the barrier most of the time. Once there, both players volleyed and scored magnificently.

In his play today, Budge has proven himself to be, at least the second greatest amateur in the world today. He showed, even in defeat, his world championship potentialities. With the experience gained from this match, he should head the world ranking lists next year.

In the women's singles final, the four-time national champion, Helen Jacobs, had to take a "back seat" and a real tennis lesson from the new champion, Alice Marble, fellow Californian.

The climax of a wonderful comeback was achieved by Miss Marble in her victory today. Three years ago, after collapsing twice during the 1933 season, she was broken in both health and spirit. Today she demonstrated how complete her recovery has been for she now stands at the head of women's tennis.

America's Future Is Bright.

In my opinion, if more of the young girls who are striving for tennis reputations and honors would pattern their games after that of Miss Marble, we would see an unprecedented rise in the calibre of women's play in this country. Miss Marble justified the faith of her coach, Miss Eleanor Tennant, and, incidentally, my own, from the very outset in coming through for the great victory.

I am very glad to have had the opportunity to be present at this championship meeting, because, I believe, it makes the start of a new era in American tennis. The veterans were almost entirely pushed into the background by the new rising stars, and next year, we should see the cycle completed.

CALIFORNIA SOFTBALL TEAM TO PLAY AT SOUTH SIDE PARK

The Lucerne's champion men's team of Hollywood, Calif., will play the Independent men in an exhibition game tonight at South Side Park. The visitors have a record of only four defeats all season and have as their chief hurler, Joe Donchess, the strikeout king of the Western state with 325 to his credit this season. The Clay girls are scheduled to meet the Kroemeke team in the opening game at 7:30 o'clock.

HOLLYWOOD GIRLS' SOFTBALL TEAM AT NORTH PARK TONIGHT

The Kennedy Birdies, champion girls' team of Hollywood, Calif., will play the Meletio girls in an exhibition game tonight at North Side Park, starting at 9 o'clock. Featured with the visitors is Gwen Decker, 16-year-old pitcher, who has proven herself to be the most consistent hurler in her state the past season. A men's exhibition game will precede the girl's contest.

Lateral on Decline; Block And Tackle Still What Gets You Up in Football, Conzelman Says

By Jimmy Conzelman,

Coach of the Washington University Football Team.

In September, 1935, the pre-season gridiron talk centered upon the use of the lateral pass and its possible effect upon offensive and defensive football. The pessimists wagged their heads and declared that, if the grand old game was to have a basketball motif, there was no necessity of playing in the fall and everybody might as well wait until December ushered in the court game.

It would make the tackler's objective, they said, a point somewhere near the jugular vein, for if everyone carrying a ball was thinking of lateraling to a team-mate, he'd have to be tackled in a way that would prevent his passing the ball altogether, or at least tossing it accurately.

Jim Conzelman

The critics further insisted that the American game was mothered by a group that had found the English rugby game lacking the body contact that bluff, hearty sons of Uncle Sam demanded. (One American can lick any three foreigners, you know.) This English rugby game, it was further stated, was based on a lot of silly lateral passing and what was the use getting back to something that had been discarded 50 years ago? (If those English guys can't take it, we can.)

The Game Looked Familiar.

On the other hand, the optimists were elated. You're going to see four and five passes made after a run or a pass, they declared. The football spectator, the forgotten man of sport, was going to be able to follow the play and the player, and not wait until the loud speaker announcement gave the wrong man the credit. It was a wonder the coaching world hadn't thought of this before. "Wait until you see the first game," was the cry.

The first game came and went and if the home team happened to be playing an opponent with a much weaker personnel, perhaps the fans were treated to one or two laterals that didn't enter the picture the previous season. These occurred because the players were thinking and talking in terms of the lateral. In ensuing games where opposing elevens of equal strength were met, the lateral, except in rare instances, almost disappeared. As a direct offensive thrust, called for by the quarterback before the play started, it failed miserably. Occasionally, some fancy-fingered backs exchanged the ball before being tackled and there were a few instances of intercepted forward passes being lateraled after the catch. Outside of these exceptions, the old game looked rather familiar and by the end of the season, football was the same game of a few years before.

Increase in Forward Passes.

Possibly the greatest difference between 1930 football and the brand of 1935 was the increase in the number of forward passes attempted. The aerial route was formerly a threat, which the backbone of the drive toward the goal largely made up of line plunging and end runs. Passing is now the leading thrust in the big push, and if teams are unable to produce an acceptable passer, they lose to one that can.

There isn't anything particularly new in the coming season. The lateral has dropped farther behind in planning the season with good blocking and tackling once more uppermost in coaches' minds. The fans may see a few more shovel passes this year (a pass made underhand to a receiver behind the line of scrimmage after a forward passing gesture) as several teams worked them with considerable success during the past season. It is not a new play by any means but, because of a tendency to fumble the toss, only a small percentage of coaches used it.

If there is one significent change in football it will be found in the minds of the coaches and players and not in the technique of the game. We are all willing to gamble more than we did formerly. Chances are taken that would be frowned upon by the old line football men and that, more than any other thing, is the reason for the trend toward the open game.

The rules have helped some but not a great deal. Better coaching of the offensive deception and more frequent use of the forward pass have made scoring somewhat easier than it was two decades ago. The team playing purely the defensive type of game has found that it takes about two touchdowns to win a game—not one point or three points.

Even with the emphasis placed on passing, a team that doesn't have a sound running attack will find a wide-awake defense laying back for the aerial work. It is still good business to have an effective blocking team just in case your passer has a bad day or a wet field spoils the opportunity to go to the air. And a squad of hard tacklers might keep the other team from the goal line, in case there might be an impression that the offense is the whole thing.

It looks like a good season for football. University athletic departments report a considerable increase in ticket reservations over last year. All in all football's a great game and if someone could Einstein a system of scoring under whic hboth teams could win, I don't think I'd ever get away from it.

TENNIS NOTES

RAILROADS TOURNEY.

Tennis teams representing the Missouri Pacific and the Cotton Belt will meet in the final round of the annual railroad tournament at the Triple A Club this afternoon. The program consisting of three singles and two doubles matches will start at 2 o'clock.

The Missouri Pacific team is composed of William Burgess, Charles Durban, Elmer Cinnater, Gerard Browning and John Shaw, while Randall Klein, Walter Straubinger, Robert Engelman, A. M. Harris and Gilbert Smythe will play for the Cotton Belt.

MAGNOLIA RESULTS.

Walter George defeated Calvin Schopp, 6—0, 8—6 to complete the first round of the Magnolia Tennis Club's Class A tournament yesterday afternoon. In second round contests, Emmett Adels won from Elmer Bear, 6—4, 6—2; William Rothweiler defeated Julius Bischoff, 6—2, 6—1, and Eugene Kane eliminated Carl Diemer, 6—0, 6—2.

O'FALLON PARK RESULTS.

Mrs. Johann Bensiek is now in the final round of the O'Fallon Park Tennis Club's women's singles championship as the result of her 6—4, 6—4, victory over Elsie Abeln. Mrs. Florence Probert won her way into the semi-final bracket by defeating Norberta Schoenback.

In the men's singles Joe Bonkrud defeated Vernon Lich, 6—1, 8—6; Melvin Kraeger won from Walter Probert 6—4, 10—8, and Eugene Koch disposed of Lee Latham, 6—1, 6—2. Leonard Koch will play George Hoffman in the only remaining quarter-final round contest.

SHAW-MAGNOLIA TOURNEY.

The Shaw-Magnolia men's doubles tournament was completed yesterday when Robert Nelson and William Schwarze defeated Albert Steck and Albert Vogt, 8—6, 7—5. Robert Schroeder won the men's singles by defeating Schwarze in the final round last week.

Just a Rookie.

CONSIDER the great League of Nations,
Which bats for the whole human race;
Then consider poor Haile Selassie,
Who never got to first base.

Two strikes he already had on him
Before even taking his stance,
And when to the ump he protested
He got a swift kick in the pants.

He couldn't compete with the majors
In stratagems, spoils and intrigue,
And so after thinking it over,
He waived himself out of the League.

Not Bad.

With Mike Ryba, the one-man ball club, pitching the other day in Brooklyn, Don Gutteridge thought he would make it a two-man affair. So he proceeded to make two home runs, a triple, score four runs, bat in five and steal home.

While the Giants, Cards and Cubs are tearing at each others' throats, the Yankees are coasting along, playing out the schedule. It is usually that way with the advantage accruing to the team that wins in a common canter. Though some claim it is the other way around and that the team that wins by a nose will go right through the world series on momentum.

It is hard to see, though, how a club that has had to give every ounce that is in it to win the pennant can recover sufficiently after a few days rest to be at its best for the series. Time will snitch.

There are very few Scotchmen in the National League in spite of the fact that the race is always very close.

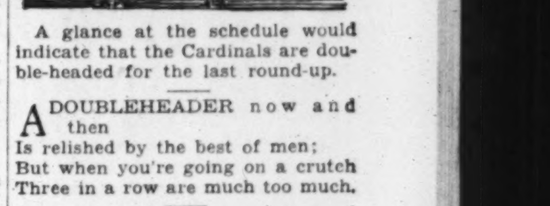
There is one thing the politicians haven't taken into account. That is the drouth. You can't have straw without wheat and you can't have straw votes without straw. Looks like an impasse.



A glance at the schedule would indicate that the Cardinals are double-headed for the last round-up.

As you might say in a manner of speaking, the Cardinals are all taped up and no place to go.

District Doubles Tennis Final Stopped by Rain

The district doubles tennis championship final yesterday between Mac Smith and Karl Kammann and Herbert Weinstock and Joyce Portnoy was halted because of rain after each team had won two sets. It will be completed today at the Lewis Park courts, University City, at 3 o'clock.

Smith and Kammann won the first and third sets, 6—4, 6—4, and Weinstock and Portnoy the second and fourth, 6—4, 6—1.

The championship of the Municipal Baseball Association will be decided this afternoon at Fairground Park, No. 1, when the J. Burke Democrats, Mound City League, and the Schaefer-Lafayettes, South Side League, meet in the deciding game, or games, beginning at 1:30 o'clock.

The Burkes hold the lead, having won the opening contest last Sunday, 17-11. If they capture today's first game, the series will be over, but if the Schaefers win, a third game will be necessary.

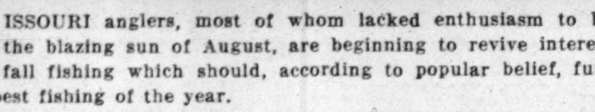
The Burkes are favored, and the revised schedule which calls for the title to be decided today, favors the club. The team has its hurling corps at full strength, with three pitchers ready to start.

Schaefers Lack Pitchers.

The Schaefers, on the other hand, must win a doubleheader to take the honor. They have but one regular pitcher ready for the two games, and he was hit rather freely by the Burkes in the series opener. Vic Valendy will be the starting pitcher for the Schaefers. He will be opposed by the veteran Gil Tesreau.

Junior Teams to Battle.

The junior finalists will also play this afternoon, with the teams taking the field at 4 o'clock in the second game of the three-game series. The Union Avenue Merchants, Durocher League, will try to win the pennant with its second consecutive victory, while the Vons, Rogers Hornsby League, will try to square the series. The Merchants won the first contest, 13-3 in five innings.



MISSOURI anglers, most of whom lacked enthusiasm to brave the blazing sun of August, are beginning to revive interest in fall fishing which should, according to popular belief, furnish the best fishing of the year.

Until November 1, when the trout season closes, all game and rough fish are takable, even gig and spear fish. Bass and jack salmon specialists can operate for the remainder of the year in fact, and, in certain parts of the state, fishing is possible right up to New Year, except in cases of exceptionally cold weather.

The expected change to lower temperatures should improve the activity of all sorts of fish and give somewhat disgusted anglers a chance to cheer up.

Muskies Biting in Wisconsin

Many Missourians are still trying their tackle in the lakes of upper Wisconsin and Minnesota, where the real fighting finny fellows are found.

Cooler weather has started the muskies biting and B. E. Henderson sends a picture of a pair of beauties he landed at Cranberry Lake in the Eagle River district. One weighed 35 pounds and was 49 inches long. The other scaled 16 pounds and measured 38 inches.

Game fish of that size are not found in Missouri waters although big mouth bass weighing in two figures have been landed and occasional large rainbow trout is reported.

Our huge river catfish some of which weigh above 50 pounds are not in the game class.

Talking of Big Fish—

WHILE on the subject of big fish, here's a really huge one, caught on a hook and line: It happened at Nova Scotia, where the huge tuna fish enjoys its summers and autumns.

Albert Rossner of New York recently landed a 781-pounder, which officials of the Wedgeport Tuna Club say is the second largest in history. It is only seven pounds below the No. 1 tuna catch of all time, that by Dr. J. R. Brinkley of De Rio, Tex.

STATE game laws for 1935-36 upland game bird hunting seasons, compared with those of the 1934-35 period, reflect an increase in the supply of some species, reversing a general downward trend that has prevailed for 25 years, according to a survey by the More Game Birds Foundation.

Pheasants and quail, and to a lesser extent the wild turkey, appear to be the only species increasing nationally, the game law survey reveals. This, the report commented, is probably traceable to success attending artificial propogation and stocking of these species.

Pheasant hunting seasons alone show an increase in number over 25 years ago. Twenty-seven states now provide open seasons on this introduced game bird, as compared with but eight states in the 1910-11 period. The total numbers of days in pheasant seasons has also increased from 475 to 506, as compared with 416 days 25 years ago.

Quail hunting seasons are provided in game laws of 33 states. Thirty-eight states permitted quail hunting in 1910-11. The total number of days in seasons has been increased from 1632 to 1658 in the current period. Twenty-five years ago, however, sportsmen enjoyed 2736 days of quail hunting.

Fifteen states permit wild turkey hunting, seasons showing an increase of from 836 to 845 days, as compared with 1998 shooting days in 1910-11.

State game laws provide 12 open seasons on prairie chickens, the same as a year ago, but 25 years ago 15 states had open seasons totaling 840 days as compared with but 133 days now. Seasons on these game birds continue to be curtailed, with eight days being lopped off the total for the previous period.

Twenty-four states have open grouse hunting seasons, a loss of one state season over 1934-35 but a loss of 11 seasons over 25 years ago. Ten days have been cut off the total number of days in grouse hunting seasons, which now total 684, as compared with 2310 in 1910-11, the survey showed.

Beaumont, With All-Veteran Team, Topheavy Favorite to Win Title In 1936 School Football Season

By Robert Morrison.

They won't have to manufacture the "Beat Somebody" buttons at the city high schools this year. It's just as plain as your nose that the main idea is "BEAT BEAUMONT."

Chills run up and down the spine of Coach Burns Franklin every time he thinks of it. He has the best team in the city—almost intact from last year—but the trouble is, everybody knows it and therefore will make the cool or cold football afternoons at the Public High School Stadium pretty hot for the Blue Jackets.

When someone mentions that around the circuit they all think Beaumont is head and shoulders above every other contender for the title won last year by McKinley, Franklin puts on his worrying cap.

Franklin Is Modest.

"We don't figure to burn up the league this season," said Franklin, dusting off his best understatements.

"We're woefully weak at the tackles. We lost three last year and there's not much in sight to fill one tackle position. The other probably will be taken care of by Glennon Neibur, letterman."

Lee Carlson will smile when he hears about those weak tackles. Carlson is bringing along what may prove to be the heaviest eleven in the league, his Roosevelt team averaging—

"I think I'll keep the weight average a secret," grinned the Rough Rider boss. "Really, I don't think we'll be much heavier than two or three other teams."

Which sounds like Roosevelt will have to be considered in the title debate.

The new season brought Otto Rost a minus-20 in lettermen, but he has five returning at McKinley. And the weight average of the city champions fell off 10 pounds, but they can't be overlooked in the forecast.

Out at Soldan, all Coach Arnold von Lehsten had to say was that Soldan won't be seventh this season because there are now only six teams in the league, which is fair enough considering that one of his regular tackles will be a freshman. Blewett, seventh member of the circuit, will not participate in football this year.

Lou Kittlaus, first-year coach at Central, is counting on unusual enthusiasm and exceptionally capable boys he brought up from his own "B" squad of 1935.

Old "Dean" Fenenga.

And way down south, at the other end of town, there's a dark horse grazing in the pasture. Bert Fenenga, dean of the coaches, is quietly grooming Cleveland for a comeback which may set the other league teams back on their heels.

Roaming the yardlines for Beaumont this season will be Bud Schwenk, who ate up more ground in the league last year than anybody else, and his backfield mates, Vic Theiling and Eugene Rapplean. They will have 10 lettermen to keep them company.

Roosevelt will have eight "R" men back to ride the range, including Al Seidel, star track runner, who will play right half; Ken Main, a good passer; Dick McDougall, speedy end, and Joe McCue, 6-foot, 170-pound tackle.

Johnny Trubacek and Mike O'Sullivan, co-captains and left half and guard, respectively, head the list of five lettered veterans at McKinley. The others are Frank O'Neill, right half; Joe Cook, guard, and Bill Howle, end.

Led by Capt. Bob Luck, who is a tackle, these four lettermen will swing into action for Soldan late this month: John Hequenbourg, halfback; Art Beddoe, halfback, Clyde Newhouse, halfback, and Jerome Notowitz, guard.

When Cleveland boys came out for practice, Coach Fenenga counted the lettermen on one hand and still had two fingers to spare. The boys were Frank Amelung, left end; Carl Fink, halfback, and Charles Gualdoni, end.

Among Central's six old hands coming back is Don Riley, a good punter, and Ed Linihan, another backfield man.

This is how they finished last year: McKinley, Beaumont and Roosevelt tied for second; Cleveland, Blewett, Central, Soldan.

12 Bear 1935 Freshmen, 10 Billikens Expected To Make Varsity Grade

By James M. Gould

When a college football coach needs replacements for his varsity squad—and what coach doesn't, what with graduation and scholastic hurdles of all sorts—his eyes naturally travel toward the freshman squad of the year before. Much time has been spent on the youngsters; much midnight oil has been burned trying to get them past those big, bad men—the professors. Finally, the time comes when the kids should begin to make some return on the investment the schools have made.

Sometimes they are there to make the return by filling vacant places on the varsity squad; sometimes, alas, they are somewhere out in the wide, wide world far from campus and stadium when football work begins.

A year ago both the Bears of Washington and the Billikens of St. Louis U. had fine freshman squads and Head Coaches Conzelman and Muellerleile were consequently elated. Of course, Muellerleile didn't need freshman help badly for he lost only three lettermen by graduation. But, Conzelman did for his casualties totaled 17-all experienced men who had received insignia for their football feats of derring-do.

Bear Horses.

And, as it happened, when the roll was called this season, Conzelman the coach who needed help most, found he had lost several promising youngsters while Muellerleile discovered all the kid stars he had counted upon were back in school and ready to go.

However, Conzelman checked up and learned that an even dozen members of the 1935 freshman team were available for duty. He also mourned the loss of five others upon whom he had depended for replacements.

In the list of those who are back at work are the names of Dick Yore, former University City halfback, who will be a first-stringer this season; Bob Minkey and Bill Frefecky, also half-backs; Harold Tracy, full-back; Dick Lund, an end; Charley Gould, a center; Russ Meredith, Fred Merritt and Otto Geyer, guards; George Campbell, a tackle, and John Frosch and Bill Brew, ends.

Lost in action were Norman Hare, center, John Mizen, end, Bill Smith, tackle, Glen English, quarterback, and Manuel Wisbrock, guard. All five casualties were sure-fire varsity material.

Four Bills Lost.

Only four of Coach Muellerleile's freshmen—Hauser and Masseli, tackles; Hafford, a quarterback, and Hraba, a half—failed to return to school while 10 of Ed Hall's freshman players reported for practice and are sure to make the varsity squad.

Chief among these are Mel McGonnigle, regarded as one of the best Billiken back prospects in years, and Len Gorman, former C. B. C. star, who is putting in a real bid for the regular center job. Others, all of whom will see service, are Bill Clark and Dick Putnam, guards; George Johnson, a tackle; Carl Totsch, Frank Hagan and Frank Gayer, ends; Cletus Roemer, a quarterback, and Noel Worthington, a halfback.

Today, the Billikens will continue work while the Bears will have a day of rest.

Coach Conzelman sent his Bears into scrimmage for the first time yesterday. The men had been working but four days but Jim decided to get "contact" early. Bob Hudgens was an absentee, having been called to his Illinois home because of sickness in the family.

The Billikens had a dash of line scrimmage yesterday and may have some of the real thing for about 10 minutes today. "Mull" plans to have the varsity and freshman teams mix it after another week of work.

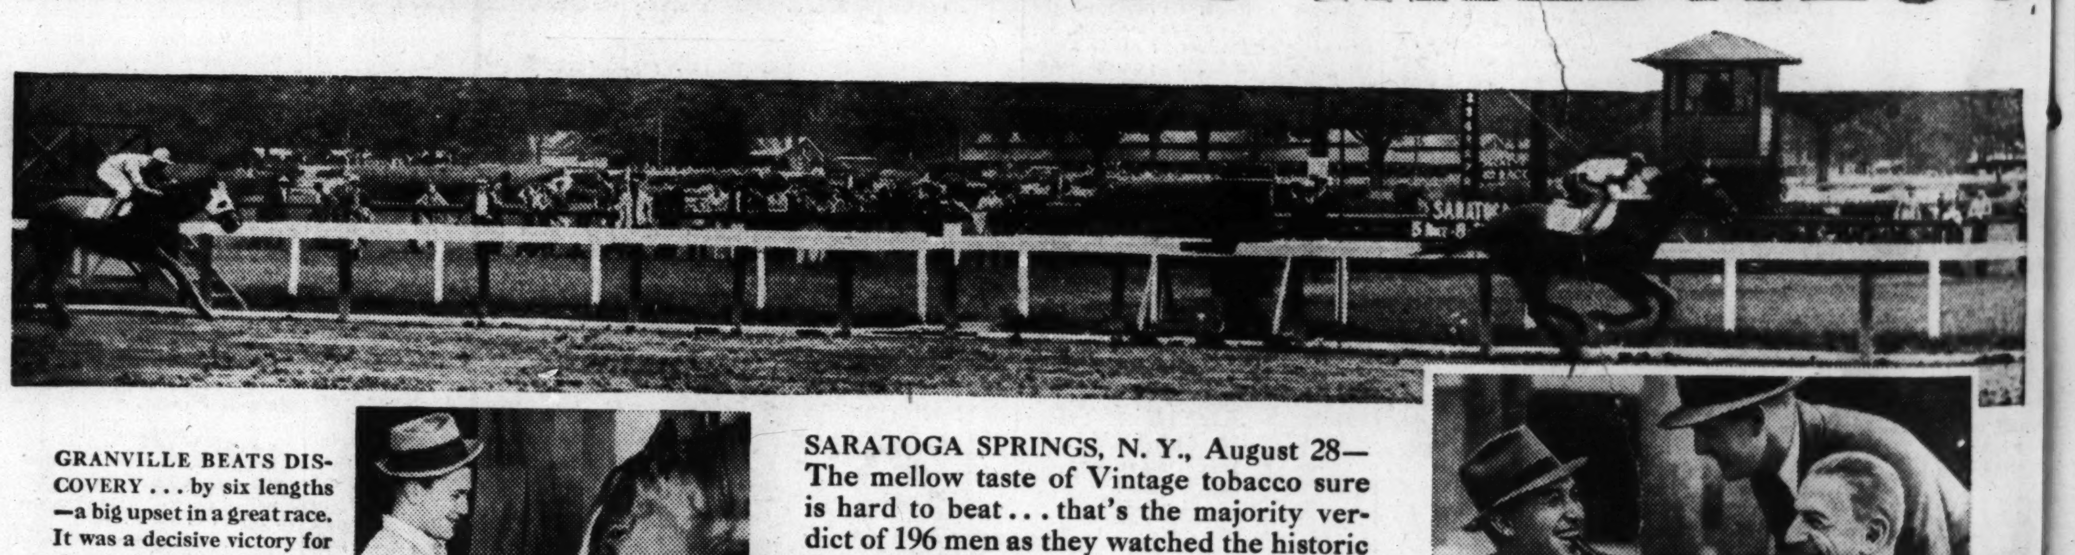
St. Louis U., with a few days' start, is farther advanced than Washington at this writing. The Bears will have a chance to catch up when the Billikens, returning to classes, will be forced into one-session workouts.

That interest is increasing in local football is shown by the number of visitors each day to the practice fields of both teams.

Less than two weeks remain before the opening of the regular season. St. Louis meets the Missouri Miners a week from Friday and the following afternoon, the Bears oppose Bradley Tech. Then, the fun begins.

Charley Gould, center candidate of the Bears suffered the first injury of the season when he was kicked in the right eye tackling Joe Bukant, Bear fullback and came out with a discolored optic.

SARATOGA GOLD CUP CLASSIC—
76% VOTE FOR VINTAGE TOBACCO MILDNESS



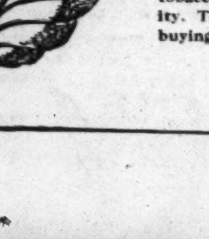
GRANVILLE BEATS DISCOVERY . . . by six lengths—a big upset in a great race. It was a decisive victory for the 3-year-old champion. And just as decisive was White Owl's victory in the taste test. Another proof of Vintage tobacco's milder taste!

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., August 28—The mellow taste of Vintage tobacco sure is hard to beat . . . that's the majority verdict of 196 men as they watched the historic Saratoga Cup race.

We picked smokers for the taste test at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both cigars, then indicated the one he liked best. 76% preferred the mellow mildness of Vintage White Owl.

Wherever you are, you can always get the same mild, uniform cigar that won these taste tests. And it costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.



● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

HOUSE BOUGHT IN HAMPTON PARK ON CLAYTON ROAD

Maurice S. Jelenko Acquires Residence of A. G. Enderle—Other Residential Sales.

Residential purchases were resumed on a reassuring scale with the advent of the fall buying season, with acquisitions in county additions predominating.

Noteworthy was the recent purchase by Maurice S. Jelenko of Stix, Baer & Fuller, of the residence of A. G. Enderle, druggist, in Hampton Park, on the south side of Clayton road, east of Hanley road in St. Louis County. The Arthur Goldman Realty Co. handled the transaction.

The house is of English design. The first floor consists of large living room, dining room, sunroom, breakfast room, kitchen and lavatory, while the second floor comprises four master bedrooms, two bathrooms and maid's room, with bath. There is an acre of ground. The building is of steel and concrete construction. It was erected in 1929 at a reported cost of $60,000. Maritz & Young (now Maritz, Young & Dusard, Inc.), were the architects.

La Hacienda Sale.

Another purchase was that by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hosek of No. 19 La Hacienda, in La Hacienda subdivision, at Ladue and Price roads in St. Louis County. The house has eight rooms and two baths, and is finished on a handsome scale. There is an attached two-car garage with study over it. George F. Hayden was the architect and builder.

The John P. Dolan Realty Co. reports that negotiations are in an advanced stage for several houses in La Hacienda. This firm has recently sold several lots in this addition to persons with ambitious building plans. There also is evidence of renewed activity in Ridge Top, on the south side of Clayton road, west of the North and South road. A number of handsome houses, recently completed in this addition, are attracting decided attention. Both La Hacienda and Ridge Top are being marketed through the John P. Dolan Co.

Purchase contracts have been signed for two handsome houses recently completed in Lake Forest at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads. The names of the purchasers, however, are withheld pending financial arrangements with the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co. Negotiations in both instances are being handled by W. L. Gourley, director of sales in Lake Forest.

Ninety-six houses, ranging in cost from $25,000 to $125,000, have been built in Lake Forest, placed on the market in 1929. The addition comprises 150 lots, all except one of which have been sold.

20 Oakleigh Lane Bought.

A residence at 20 Oakleigh Lane, in Ladue Village, was recently acquired by James R. Kearney Jr. of the James R. Kearney Corporation. It was built by Howard Godwin. The Barngrove Realty Co. handled the transaction.

Contracts have been closed with Albert T. Terry, Son & Co. for a residence in Washington Terrace. The name of the purchaser, however is withheld, pending execution of the deed.

Frederick Beardley Wolf, patent attorney, has purchased a lot in Brittany Woods in St. Louis County as a site for a costly residence. The lot has a 54-foot front, with a depth of 150 feet and is 135 feet wide in the rear. It is one of the choicest in the development. Mary Potter Love, Inc., handled the transaction.

RESTAURANT CHAIN ACQUIRING LOCATIONS

Recently Organized Concern Leases Ground at 3821 Delmar.

Blue Plate Lunches, Inc., a recently organized chain, is casting about for locations for 25 restaurants to be distributed strategically throughout the city and county.

The first of these new eating houses will be established at 3821 Delmar boulevard. It will occupy a lot 49 by 130 feet facing Grandel Square. The site is now occupied by an old dwelling, which is to be replaced by an one-story restaurant structure of modernistic design, with a side drive. It has been taken under a 10-year lease by the Blue Plate company, which will erect the building.

The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. was the intermediary in the negotiations for the ground, which is owned by Murray Edwards.

The Blue Plate company also has concluded negotiations for a long lease on the northeast corner of Sarah street and Delmar boulevard as a site for another restaurant. It is also understood options have been taken on two other sites, for which similar structures are planned.

The new restaurant chain is headed by R. Hintz.

Keeney-Toelle Expands.

The Keeney-Toelle Real Estate has enlarged and refurnished its quarters at 5506 Natural Bridge avenue to provide for increased business. It has added four men to its sales force.

NINE LACLEDE AVENUE HOUSES CHANGE HANDS

Property at Corner of Garrison Figures in Resale—Olive Street Deal.

Nine buildings at the northeast corner of Laclede and Garrison avenues have been acquired by Joseph H. Pollack as a speculative investment.

The sellers were Gitt & Steinbaum, professional real estate operators, who had just purchased the property from the Croatians-American Building Association, "Balkan," which had taken it under a mortgage.

The resale was made at a substantial advance in price, it is understood. The amounts involved in the two transactions, however, were not disclosed.

The improvements consist of eight six-room attached houses facing Laclede and a building comprising stores and flats, on the corner of Garrison.

The conveyance in the first instance was made by receiver's deed.

The building at 4722-24 Olive street has been purchased by a client of the Dubinsky Realty Co., with title taken in the name of John Simpson. It was owned by the Evangelical Lutheran Synod.

The site has a frontage of 54 feet on Olive. It is only a short distance west of the building of the Price Mercantile Co., which stands at the southwest corner of Olive street and Walton avenue.

RESIDENTIAL BUILDING SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Activity in August at Best Level Since 1931, Says F. W. Dodge Corp.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Residential building begun during August attained a level of activity not seen since March, 1931, F. W. Dodge Corporation, announced today.

The August volume exceeded the figure for July by 41 per cent and the month's total was nearly 2½ times that reported for August, 1935.

For the 37 Eastern states and the District of Columbia the figures were $100,522,500, against $71,993,700 in July and $40,528,300 in August, 1935.

Part of the current gains are attributable to accelerated activities under the PWA housing program, but the bulk of residential work undertaken in August represented private operations, the announcement stated.

WEAREN FOOD SHOPS LEASES BUILDING AT 5977 DELMAR

Wearen Food Shops, Inc., has leased the one-story building recently completed at 5977 Delmar boulevard, west of Hamilton avenue, by Bullock Bros., which are the lessors. Possession of the new structure, occupying a lot, 100 by 240 feet, has already been taken. The premises include parking space for the convenience of patrons.

PRUDENTIAL 20 YEAR LOAN
$6.60 PER MONTH
Only $6.60 per Thousand Monthly Pays the Interest and Pays Off the Loan
Lowest prevailing interest rates and a single, self-repaying loan spread thin over a long period—that is what makes such low monthly payments possible.
Each month less and less of this low monthly payment goes for interest. Each month more and more of it is applied to reduce the principal amount of the loan. Thus the amount you invest in the safest, soundest form of saving (real property) increases month by month until it brings you a home or income property clear and free of debt.
The Prudential 20 Year Plan entirely does away with the worry and uncertainty of frequent renewals of your loan. Written for one, single long term it saves you recurring commission costs and other renewal expenses.
The Prudential Twenty Year Plan is but one of several long term and short term loan plans available. Before you make any loan for buying, building or refinancing, let us show you how a Prudential plan can be fitted to your needs.

6-HOUR DAY 'SOLUTION OF JOBS PROBLEM'

W. W. Kellogg, Cereal Manufacturer, Says His Experience Has Proved Principle Sound.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Sept. 12.—W. W. Kellogg said today he believed general adoption of the six-hour working day in the United States would solve the unemployment problem and greatly reduce the number of industrial accidents.

"Our experience has proved the principle to be sound," said the cereal manufacturer who introduced the six-hour day in his plants nearly six years ago. "I firmly believe the time will come when six hours will be the usual working day for employes in industrial plants."

Last November Kellogg demonstrated his faith in the principle by increasing wages of his employes to highest levels in the company's history. The minimum wage for male workers in the plant now is $4.50 for a six-hour day, whereas it formerly was $4 for eight hours.

"There is one thing you ought to make clear though," the manufacturer suggested. "It will not do any good just to divide up the available jobs without increasing wages. Wages will have to be increased to compensate for the shorter working day if purchasing power is to be maintained. It is purchasing power that is needed to create prosperity and that always will be true."

Men Displaced by Machines.

Kellogg said the contention that labor-saving machinery had displaced workman was correct.

"It has, and we are going to have more machinery, he said, but why be afraid of it? The thing to do is to take advantage of it—not only the employer but the workman. What is to be gained by a man putting in eight, 10 or 12 hours a day when, with a machine to help him, he can do the same job better in less time and with less fatigue?

"The trouble is that not enough of the advantages of labor-saving machinery are being passed along to the workers. That is what we are doing through the six-hour day. It has enabled us to increase employment 20 per cent."

Kellogg said, while it might be impracticable for some plants to increase wages and reduce hours at the same time, he believed many of them would obtain greater efficiency by adopting the principle.

Four Work Shifts a Day.

"With a six-hour shift, there are four shifts a day," he said. "With only six hours for work and with 18 for rest and recreation, the efficiency of our workers has increased. Simply stated, more units per dollar of overhead and per dollar of labor costs are produced under the six-hour day then under the eight-hour day.

"It seems clear to me that this will have to be the answer if the country is not going to have the dole as a permanent thing."

Browder Sees Scottsboro Negroes.
By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 12.—Earl Browder, Communist candidate for the presidency, visited the Jefferson County jail today to talk to the Negro defendants in the celebrated "Scottsboro" case. Jail Assistant Warden Jim Pinson said one of the nine Negroes, Roy Wright, refused to see Browder, saying he did not want to "get mixed up in that mess." Pinson said the other defendants talked a few minutes with the candidate.

MAKING STUDY OF LICENSE LAWS

Realtors Expect Report to Aid States in Fighting Unscrupulous Agents.

A comprehensive study of real estate license laws in the twenty-eight states which have such legislation, is now being made at the instance of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which is acting in co-operation with the National Association of Real Estate License Law Officials.

The study, which will cover both legislative provisions and administrative decisions under them, is being made to give the various states aid for effective action against unscrupulous and incompetent real estate agents, Walter W. Rose, Orlando, Florida, president of the Realtors' Association states. With the opening of what is indicated to be a new movement for real estate investment and real estate use the safeguard provided through effective license legislation becomes of particular public importance, Mr. Rose points out.

Semenow Making Analysis.

Robert W. Semenow, Pittsburgh, chief of law enforcement of real estate licensing for Pennsylvania, Department of Public Instruction, is making the review of existing laws and enforcement practice, on request of the realtor association after conference with officials of the license administrators' body. Semenow is secretary and treasurer of the national organization of state officials administering real estate license laws. He is the author of a recent book "Pennsylvania Law of Real Estate Brokerage, Landlord and Tenant."

Results of the study are expected to be brought before the board of directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at their coming quarterly meeting, to be held in connection with the association's annual convention, at New Orleans, Nov. 16-21.

The study was undertaken upon vote of the directors at their May meeting.

Need of Safeguarding.

Protection of the public against fraudulent offerings or the incompetent agent or adviser through real estate license legislation has proceeded in several great waves or phases of progress. And the 10-year period ahead of us may be expected to mark a new wave in this advance, and new social usefulness for this legislation, President Walter W. Rose predicts. He adds:

"In safeguarding the expected new movement for real estate investment and real estate use, including creation of new home ownership and new home areas, we certainly have both the need and opportunity."

Rose Led Movement.

Rose, who as president of the Florida Real Estate Association, led the movement for license legislation in that State and served for years as its real estate license commissioner, says:

"When California, to its honor, passed the first real estate license law, and when, after the courts overthrew that law it passed another measure, and when the California Real Estate Association and the National Association, battling jointly to establish the constitutionality of that law, took their case to the Supreme Court of the United States, and won it, that victory set the corner stone for security of the relationship between real estate client and agent in this country. It set a corner stone for the employment of skilled judgment in real estate investment and real estate use, for the business of real estate as we know that business.

"Our advance in this whole matter of license legislation has been somewhat in waves. We first had the problem of gaining support for the general principle. We had to show the question of public welfare and public policy involved. Following this we had a wave of administrative advance. We learned much from experience. Then we had a wave of amendments strengthening the laws. We secured 'one transaction' clauses, and we established these in the courts.

"Very recently, in such states as Ohio and Nebraska, we have written into the license laws a very specific statement of what constitutes unfair competition and have made unethical practice no less than outright fraudulent practice punishable by revocation of license.

"This year we have come again into a condition that calls for thought about our license laws. They have a real task ahead of them. In some respects it is a new task. They need whatever strengthening we can give them."

BUILDING AND LOAN CONCERN ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

The Real Estate Building & Loan Association at its annual meeting Sept. 1, elected officers for the year as follows:

David F. Barrett, president; William J. Wotawa, vice-president; Thomas J. Wallace, treasurer; Charles H. Stewart, secretary, and Miss Margaret C. Brady, assistant secretary. The association, established in 1888, is a member of the St. Louis League of Building & Loan Associations, the Missouri League and the United States League and the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

Y. M. C. A. Realty Course.

The course in Real Estate Fundamentals at Jefferson College of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. will be taught this year by Curt C. Mack, real estate officer of the Laclede Bond and Mortgage Company, whose appointment was announced yesterday by Ferron Troxal, dean of the Evening Division of Commerce and Finance of which the course is a part.

This course, which is offered with the approval of the Real Estate Exchange, is a continuation of the first real estate course offered in St. Louis 15 years ago by Jefferson College, then known as the Y. M. C. A. Schools.

STANDARDS FOR APPRAISAL TO COME BEFORE CONVENTION

Proposed revision of the rules of professional ethics of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards further defining ethical practice, and proposed detailed standards of practice for real estate appraisal, as drafted by a special committee of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will come before the governing council of the institute at its next meeting, to be held in connection with the association's annual convention at New Orleans, Nov. 16-21.

Frederick M. Babcock, chief of the underwriting section, FHA, and author of comprehensive texts on appraisal of real estate, is chairman of the special committee which has drafted the proposed rules and standards.

Text of the proposed statement has been placed in the hands of every member of the institute for study.

Examinations for admission to the institute will be held at New Orleans on Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 16 and 17, of the convention week, Maurice F. Reidy, Worcester, Mass., president of the institute, announces. The institute, organized as a definitely professional body having for its purpose identification of qualified appraisers of real estate, requires of applicants for its membership to have had a considerable and satisfactory appraisal experience, and gives them an examination on their understanding of appraisal principles and method.

Consider Fall Planting in Home Garden

Gardeners are conscious of the approach of autumn before most others. All plants ripen and show by their appearance and behavior that the end of another season is approaching.

Most of this year's work is behind us; but at the height of the period of harvest it is time to plan for another year. In gardening the pleasure of planning and working for the future is even greater than enjoyment of results of past efforts.

There are improvements and additions to be made, and innumerable things which must be done better next year. Nothing will contribute more to satisfactory execution of our plans than a complete fall program, carefully studied.

Fall planting is of two kinds: First, the tasks which can be done only in the fall, and second, those which can be performed either in the fall or spring. There is no option about the first class, which includes the planting of tulip, narcissus, hyacinth and the minor hardy bulbs, and setting out of peonies and madonna lilies. If these subjects have not been put in the ground by the time it freezes you must wait another year to add them to your garden picture.

It is surprising the number who do not understand this and who try to purchase tulip bulbs in the spring. These tall bulbs are imported each year at this time from Holland and are available at no other time. They must pass the winter in your garden soil in order to bloom in the spring.

The second class of fall planting tasks, those which can be done either in fall or spring, include many which are better done in the fall; and the experienced gardener may usually be told by the way in which he gets these jobs out of the way.

Fall planting is essentially a matter of foresight. There is no urge like the spring garden fever; only a keen imagination will bridge over the months of snow and winter just ahead to see the burst of spring glory next year toward which our fall work will contribute. Only one-third of all gardeners undertake complete fall planting programs.

The optional jobs include planting trees and perennials, making and repairing lawns, and sowing some annual and perennial flower seeds.

Autumn is by far the best time to sow lawn seed for new lawns or repair work, but a warning should be given. The best time to sow is in mid-August, and every day that passes after that shortens the time in which the new grass plants will have to establish themselves for the winter. Each day's delay, therefore, costs something, and by the middle of September fall lawn seed sowing begins to be hazardous in most communities. It still may succeed, but there is peril of frost injury, depending on the weather, of course, which nobody can predict. Young grass plants, like small human beings, are more delicate than adults, and might fail to survive a temperature which would leave older plants untouched.

Light Switch Is Placed Near Most Used Door

In selecting a location for lighting switches in rooms where there are more than one entrance, it is important that the switch be placed adjacent to the entrance which is most often used after dark. Thus in a living room it is a common error to locate the light switch adjacent to the outside door, while actually if an analysis is made of the use of it switch it will immediately be evident that the switch should be located adjacent to the living room entrance leading to the sleeping quarters. The vestibule or outside entrance light will provide enough lighting for the living room to prevent danger from injury when entering from the outside.

Following the same procedure when selecting the location of the light switch in the kitchen, it should be located adjacent to the entrance into the space provided for dining facilities.

Thus in practically all cases where rooms have an outside and an inside entrance the most convenient location for the room light switch is adjacent to the inside entrance.

Stake Plants.

If you are having trouble with drooping plants, stake them. This will prevent the wind from bending them to the ground, and the effect on the appearance of the garden will be worth your while. All tall growing flowers should be staked; use tiny bamboo stakes, or you can make them at home yourself.

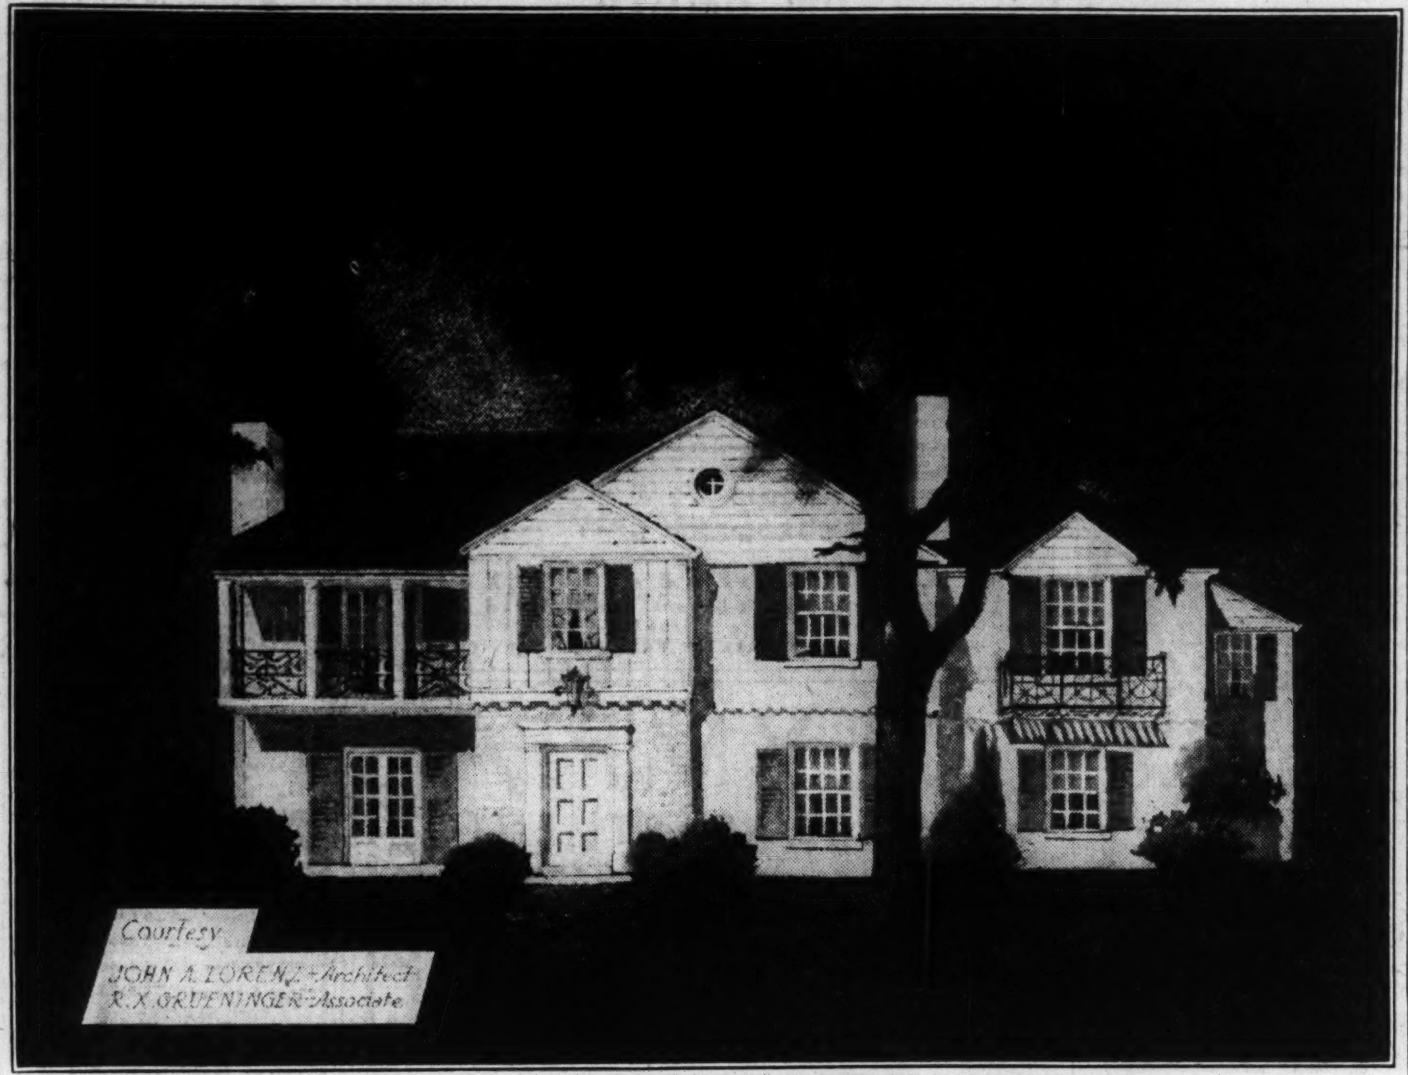
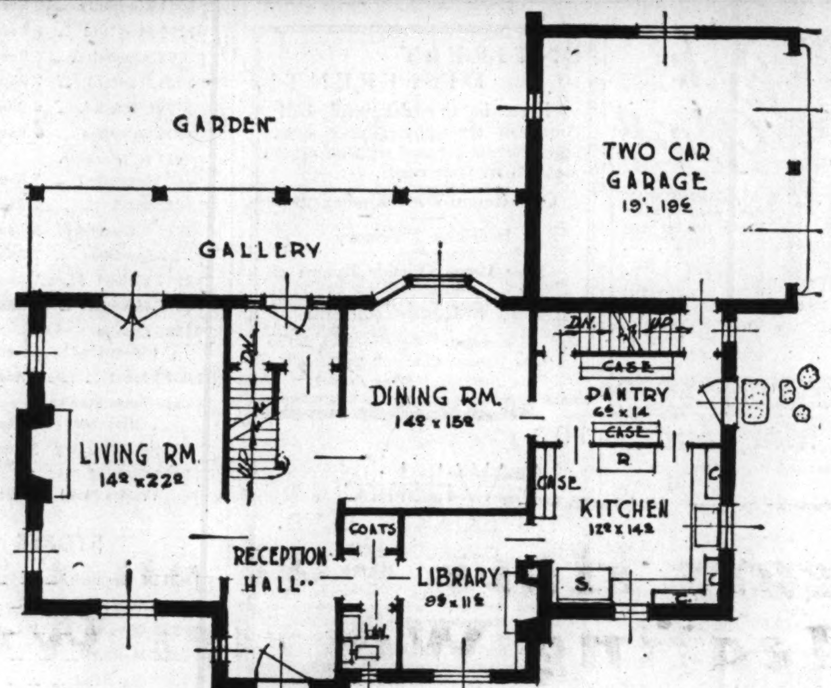
A Symposium of Two Architectural Styles





FIRST FLOOR

The Fine Blending of Monterey and Southern Colonial Have Evolved a House That Is Both Spacious and Interesting.

BUILDING a house with benefit of the architect is undoubtedly a most satisfying experience since it allows the prospective home owner the privilege of placing his problem of likes and dislikes, his wants and needs, in the hands of a person who is trained to [illegible] about order and synthesis.

The architect, John A. Lorenz, calls this house a symposium of two different styles. The perspective shows a rather rambling house that tends toward the Southern Colonial architecture found along the eastern seaboard in Charleston. It also has porches and balconies, tall windows and gables which are reminiscent of houses found in Southern California. The owner who was strongly attracted to both the Monterey picturesqueness and Colonial spaciousness is responsible for the completed work has turned out to be a delightful gathering of the best points in both styles.

The Monterey influence is shown in the vertical batten boards in the entrance bay. There are balconies with wrought iron railings and the gallery at the back which overlooks a walled garden is perhaps the most striking Monterey feature.

The gables, windows with shutters, and the floor plans are distinctly Colonial. The first floor is the "double house" with dividing hall and living room and dining room on either side of it.

The entrance hall is spacious and formal and has a door that opens on the garden. The staircase that leads to the second floor has a walnut handrail and simple, turned balusters. The newels, too, are simply turned. A window on the second floor landing overlooks the garden.

To the right of the entrance hall is a library which may be used for informal dining since it opens on the kitchen and faces east. The kitchen likewise faces northeast and has full benefit of the morning sun. A large pantry with storage space for dishes connects with the dining room and here is also the service stairway to the basement and second floor maids' rooms and the passageway to the garage.

There are three children in the family and a separate bedroom has been planned for each child. One bath serves two bedrooms. The northeast bedroom which connects with the master bedroom has been planned for the youngest member of the family.

THE master bedroom opens on a balcony and overlooks the garden on the southwest. The fireplace is a marble piece and is a good example of the fine old mantles found in early Victorian houses.

Quarters for the maids have been planned over the garage wing. One of these rooms overlooks the garden and may be used eventually as a guest room since it has access to the second bath. All bedrooms are equipped with hanging cases which also have drawer space.

The interior is typically colonial. The wood trim is fluted and the walls are papered. The mantle in the living room is of simple colonial design with a marble surround. The floors are oak, stained dark and highly polished. Bathrooms are done in colored pastel tiles. The second bathroom has a modern square tub.

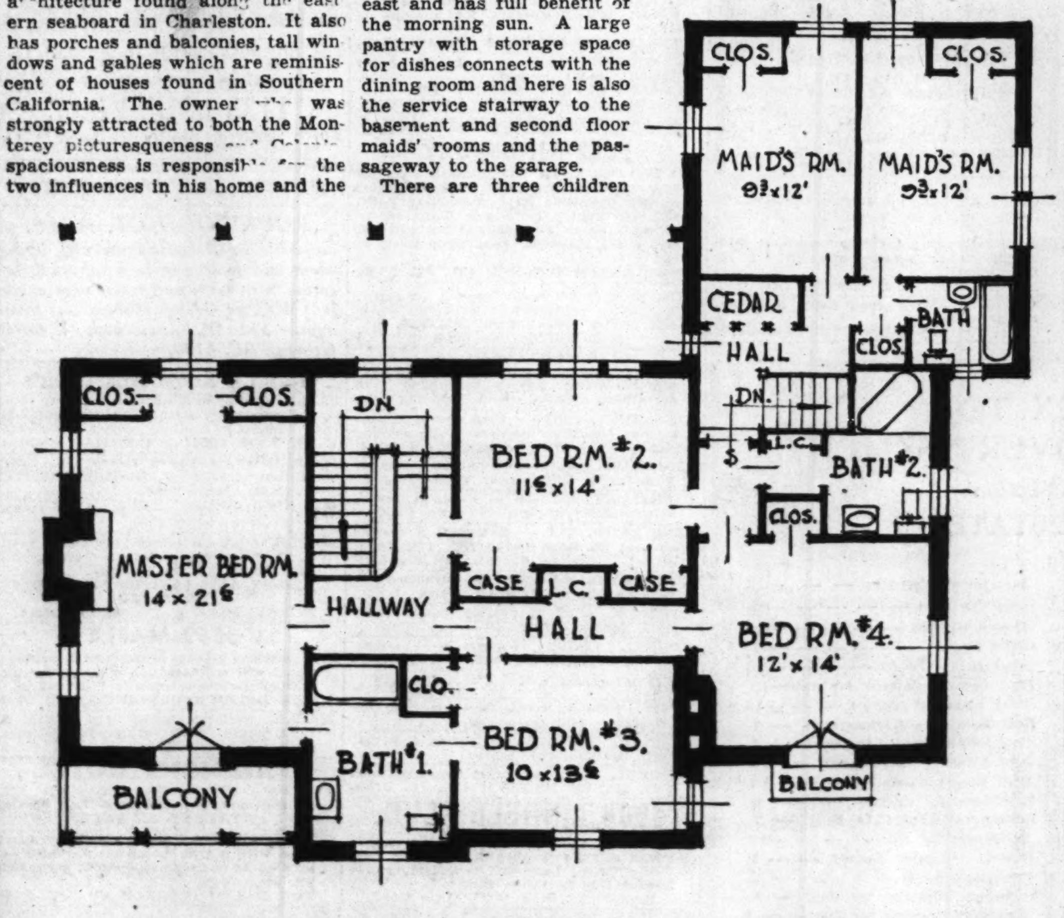
The basement is fully excavated and has a pine panelled recreation room with fireplace. In the northeast portion of the basement are located the laundry and heater room to which the service stairway gives access. The attic has no storage space, but there are provisions for a ventilating space and fan for summer use. The heating plant is a gas fired winter air-conditioned furnace.

ONE of the most interesting points about the house is its construction. The entrance bay is of semi-plastered white washed stone. This, together with the batten boards in the second story gives the feeling of Monterey architecture. The remainder of the house is brick painted white. A brick corbel course carries the horizontal line between the two balconies. The door is a solid panel door set in a simple Colonial frame. All windows have small lights and shutters, which are painted a dark green. The tall window in the living room and the one which opens out on the balcony are Queen Anne and give the facade of the house a nice balance.

The roof is covered with brown hand-fettled tile, which imitates the heavy handsplit wooden shingles used on the Colonial houses in Charleston.

For one whose hobby is gardening the small inclosure which is to be laid out after a formal plan serves the purpose in every respect. The house is set on an acre of ground, which is wooded and has a small creek that flows through one section. The walled garden which is to be bound up with a certain amount of outdoor living, provides both privacy and pleasant relaxation for the owner. The overhanging gallery makes a shelter that permits enjoyment of the garden even in wet weather.

The house which is under construction is being built for Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hoxie in Oakleigh Lane. It contains 53,000 cubic feet and the cost has been placed approximately at 31 cents per cubic foot.



SECOND FLOOR

Provide for Water Proofing Of the Cellar

Whenever a house is to be built with a cellar, the possibility of the necessity for waterproofing should be considered and provided for in the specifications. There are, of course, communities where it is a certainty that no difficulties with water will be met. But in most places this is only a guess, and adjacent houses may have entirely different experiences.

It is always possible to include a sum for waterproofing in a bid, so that if it is determined, after the excavation has been dug, that waterproofing is necessary, the owner has learned before letting the contract how much he will have to pay for it, and it will not come as an unexpected extra expense. If it proves to be unnecessary, he has just that much more to put into other features of the house. There are few things more discouraging in a house than a few inches of water in the cellar—unless it be a foot or two!

There are three ways in which cellar walls and floors may be waterproofed. But in all cases it must be remembered that to waterproof only a part is not of much value. For if the walls are tight and the floor porous, or vice versa, or if the join where the wall and floor meet is not caulked, there may be leaks. So, whatever system is adopted, it should carry throughout the cellar construction.

The membrane system is a covering that is put on the outside of the walls and under the floor and is composed of alternate layers of building felt and hot pitch. If this system is used, it should wrap the entire cellar, like the paper on a package, in one continuous unbroken sheet.

Another method is to apply a continuous coating of neat cement mortar in conjunction with a metallic waterproofing compound to the inside of the cellar walls and floor.

The third method is integral waterproofing mixed in the concrete at the time of erection. With this last method the necessity of waterproofing the joint at the wall and floor is paramount. It should be filled with oakum and hot pitch or other suitable nonrigid waterproofing cement.

Kitchen Now Thing of Beauty and Joy

The kitchen in the modern home is no longer an eyesore to the owner. The days of rusty pipes, steaming stoves, and peeling walls are a thing of the past, and today neatness and cleanliness predominate. Asbestos wainscoting in attractive-colored tile, marble or panel effects can be applied right over the old walls. It will not chip, stain, warp, or corrode and is a minute's work to wash. A breakfast nook in one corner is almost an essential in the modern kitchen.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. Our house is a Cape Cod cottage built about six years ago. The bedrooms which are just under the roof get very hot in spite of the fact that there is cross ventilation. Would a fan in the storage space help any? There are no louvres in the storage space. L. D.

A. If the house is not insulated we suggest that you get a reliable contractor to give you bids on insulating the ceiling above these bedrooms. There are a number of excellent materials on the market now any of which will suit your particular needs. Louvres and a ventilating fan in the storage space will help a great deal towards maintaining a lower temperature in these upstairs bedrooms. A trapdoor in the upper hall is necessary to draw the warm air out of the bedrooms as long as the fan is running.

Q. I have a frame house that is plastered on the inside and sometimes the walls sweat and run water. Can you tell me what to do? J. G., Clayton, Mo.

A. It is curious that walls of a frame house should sweat. It must be that the house gets very warm during the day and at night, when the outside air cools rapidly, the lower temperature penetrates the walls quicker than the inside atmosphere of the house cools off and, since the plaster has one side cool and the other warm, condensation on the warm side occurs. If there is excessive moisture in the air due to the use of gas that may have a high water content, or from a great use of hot water or other unusual causes, the condensation is understandable. We suggest that you open as many windows as possible at night to cool the interior quickly. Insulation in the outside walls would help considerably.

Q. What does one do when the bottoms of the posts of the porch rot?

A. The posts should be removed and either all the rotten wood sawed off and replaced or, better yet, new posts installed. Be sure the bottoms of the bases of the posts are ventilated, and if they are box posts, the posts themselves should be ventilated, too.

Q. We have bought an old house, and the eaves extend way out over the walls. Can't we have these cut back so we can have a nice neat cornice like the Colonial houses? J. T. M.

A. Yes; it is quite possible. It would be advisable to consult a competent architect to design and supervise the alteration.

Q. Some of our furniture has tiny holes in it and little heaps of sawdust appear at them. What causes it, and how can we stop it?" MRS. A. R.

A. It is probably the lyctus beetle that is doing the damage. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin (No. 1477) on the subject that may be of help. It may be obtained by sending five cents in cash or money order (not stamps) to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

Q. Can you tell me how to stop water from coming in between the walls and floor of my cellar? S. M. T.

A. Cut out the crack and pack it with oakum and hot pitch or white lead and cover with a cove of a neat cement-and-sand mixture.

The Finish on Wood Floors Very Important

The finish of wood floors is one of the things that the visitor first notices on entering a house, and quite naturally, too, for he involuntarily looks down as he steps over the threshold. It is, therefore, essential that the housewife who prides herself on the neatness and condition of her house give careful consideration to the floors.

In the first place, the kind of wood of which the floors are made must be considered before the finish is determined upon. If it is a nice hardwood, like oak or maple or walnut, it would be a shame to paint it, so a natural finish should be used. However, there is no reason why a stain should not be used to darken the wood, for dark floors are much richer and furnish a better background for rugs and upholstery than do light floors. If, on the other hand, a soft wood has been used, paint is an appropriate and pleasant finish.

With hardwood floors, the stain is applied first, either separately or as a filler. On top of this there are several days of proceeding, depending upon what sort of finish is desired. If wax is to be used, it may be put directly on the wood. It requires several coats and much elbow grease to get a polish with this method, but once attained, it is the easiest to maintain, as the wax will have permeated the wood and if spots get dull, it can be brought back quickly by adding more wax.

Penetrating waxes may also be used with less labor and good results. These waxes contain a stain as well and therefore will not need any other coloring.

A quick, simple method is to first apply shellac in one or two coats and then add the wax. The shellac makes a skin over the pores of the wood that prevents the penetration of the wax. A bright finish can be gotten with one or two applications of wax. If this method is used, the floor should be watched for wearing spots, for once the wax coat is penetrated, the shellac is all that protects the wood. If the shellac coat is destroyed, the wood may become soiled and damaged by scuffing feet, and to bring the floor back to its original state it must be washed and reshellaced and waxed; and sometimes the whole floor must be done. Wax should be applied frequently to all surfaces exposed to constant wear.

Varnish may be used either with or without wax. Good quality floor varnish is tough and gives good service under hard conditions. A wax covering will help to prolong its life, and as in the case of the shellaced floor, the wax should be renewed frequently where wear occurs.

To Deaden Sound.

To deaden partitions between rooms effectively so that sounds will not penetrate, direct contact between the wall surfaces should be broken. A way of doing this is to set two rows of studs staggered and weave a blanket of deadening material in and out through the studs.

Reynolds Specification Houses feature...
AIR CONDITIONING DESIGNED FOR CAREFUL INVESTORS

The initial cost of the Reynolds Air Conditioning System is well within the budget of any home buyer who can enjoy the economies and healthful comforts of conditioned air. More important—its actual cost is definately low for it operates most economically, and operating cost governs actual cost.

Examine carefully the air conditioning system you choose for your home! The humidifier, for example—insist on automatic humidity control—avoid the pan type affair which operates whenever the burner turns on regardless of how much moisture you want in the air. A proper amount of moisture not too much or too little adds to comfort—guards against irritating dryness in nose and throat membranes. But you want the correct proportion of humidity—and you want to maintain it constantly and uniformly. Automatic humidity control is standard equipment on Reynolds Air Conditioners.

Notice the compact design of the Reynolds unit—the stainless steel burner—the changeable filter which removes and traps impurities from the air you breathe—the non-"flashback" and non-snuffing-out features of the Reynolds burner.

Call us for a demonstration of the Reynolds Air Conditioner—with your builder and architect, inspect the other Reynolds Specification Materials which help make your new home a modern home.

Dolan Homes Will Make Profitable Investments

There is no longer any question about this nationwide rebirth of interest in home owning. You read it in all the newspapers! Everyone is talking about it! And you see it in today's tremendous building activity!

Labor and material costs are rising, the price of a home is going up, not quickly, perhaps, but steadily. The "Buyer's Market" is rapidly dwindling and will soon be a thing of the past.

The John P. Dolan Co. renders a real service in advising you to buy property now at the start of this inevitable real estate boom.

Wisdom will direct you to buy from a firm with a broad background of success and a reputation of unquestioned integrity. With more than a quarter century of experience in real estate transactions, the Dolan Company may well be your choice. Pictured here are thirteen homes which offer a sound investment with endless possibilities for security and profit. They represent the widest selection of location, of cost, size and style. Each home is flawlessly constructed, smartly landscaped and has the interest of time-tested, yet ever-new architecture. Inspect one or more of them in the neighborhood of your choice. Naturally, the best homes will be taken first, so we urge you to see them today!

All Buildings Open Afternoon and Evenings

If you plan to build a home or would like to refinance the home you now own, the John P. Dolan Company will be glad to assist you in your plan, through the F. H. A. or private financing. Talk it over with us, we offer every kind of home building service and real estate investment.

CARDS OF THANKS

WE wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for all the kindness and sympathy shown us in the late sad loss of our dear mother, Barbara Meyer. Especially do we thank Rev. Fathers Lemkes and Richter, Sisters of Loretto and St. Joseph's Order, pallbearers, St. Barabas Married Ladies Sodality, the Rock Springs Gymnastic Society, Stuart and Sons for their kind, courteous services. Also for the beautiful floral and spiritual offerings.
THE MEYER FAMILY.

The family of ELIZABETH BLAKELY wish to express their sincere and heartfelt thanks to their many friends, neighbors and relatives for the beautiful floral offerings and their kind expressions of sympathy. We wish to especially thank the Rev. D. F. Engstrom for his kind and consoling words, and the Pall Bearers.

IN MEMORIAM

AUFDERHEIDE, WILLIAM—In loving remembrance of my dear husband who died Sept. 15, 1931.
I often sit and think of you,
When I am all alone.
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.

BERLINGER, MARY—In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away Sept. 15, 1935.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

FINKE, CHRIST—In loving memory of my dear husband who departed this life Sept. 8, 1917.
There is a voice I loved so dear,
A voice I no longer hear,
But even though he's gone away
In memory he's with me every day.
Sadly missed by wife and daughter,
MRS. M. FINKE, MRS. A. MERKEL.

FOEHINGER, OLIVER—In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away 9 years ago, Sept. 14, 1927.
You're not forgotten, dear,
Nor ever shall you be;
As long as life and memory last
I shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, CARRIE.

FORESTAL, JOHN F.—In memory of my beloved husband, our dear father, who died Sept. 12, 1935.
The depths of my sorrow I cannot tell
At the loss of my husband I loved so well. Requiem mass, St. Matthews Church, Saturday, Sept. 12, 7:00 a. m.
HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

HOLTMANN, PHILLIPPINE—Sacred to the memory of our beloved mother, who departed this life Sept. 15, 1935.
Gone, but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN, WILLIAM, ANNAN AND MARIE, AND FAMILIES.

IN MEMORIAM

GARST—In loving memory of our dearly beloved son and brother, George W. Garst, who passed away Sept. 10, 1935:
One year of sorrow, lonely and blue;
Life is so empty, dear son, without you.
It was sad indeed the way you died,
Without a chance to say good-by.
Your spirit flew, before we knew
That you from us had gone.—
If you had raised a dying hand
And bid us all farewell,
The blow would not have been so hard
For those who loved you, dear, so well.
Sadly missed by broken-hearted
MOTHER AND SISTER.

HELLMANN, ED.—In memory of our brother, who departed this life Sept. 10, 1921.
In grief comes the thought so solemn and deep.
He is not dead but just asleep.
Sadly missed by HELLMANN FAMILY.

KNITTEL—In loving memory of Ferdinand I. G. Knittel, who departed this life Sept. 13, 1926:
Deep in our hearts you are fondly remembered;
Sweet, happy memories cling 'round your name.
True hearts that loved you with deepest affection
Always will love you in death just the same.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.

LEPPE, LOUIS—
A kind heart
A kind thought
A kind word
A kind deed
That, my Dad, was you.
NETTIE MYRLE MARTIN.

MUENCH, RUTH—In memory of our dear daughter and sister, who passed away Sept. 13, 1935.
Deep in the heart lies a picture of our loved one laid to rest;
In memory's frame we shall keep it because you were one of the best.
Sadly missed by MOTHER, SISTER AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

NEWMAN, MINNIE E.—Sacred to the memory of my beloved wife, who departed this life Sept. 15, 1933.
Gone, but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by HUSBAND.

ODEWALT, LEE—Passed away Sept. 12, 1935. Sadly missed by wife and sons.
ODEWALT FAMILY.

OLIVER, HARVEY S.—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, who departed this life Sept. 14, 1933:
Days of sadness oft come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow,
Love shall always keep you near us,
Though you left three years ago.
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade,
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

PENSA, CHARLES A.—In loving memory of our dear son who passed away Sept. 13, 1933:
Three years of sorrow, lonely and blue,
Life is so empty, dear, without you.
Sadly missed by
FATHER AND MOTHER.

QUINN, PETER — Remembrance of our wonderful husband, daddy, and son, who died Sept. 17, 1935.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, CHILDREN AND WIFE, ADELE.

RINGWALD, RUTH W.—In loving memory of Ruth W. Ringwald, who passed away 4 years ago today, Sept. 13. Sadly missed by HER MOTHER AND GRANDFATHER.

ROBESON, MARY—In loving memory of my dear mother, departed this life Sept. 13, 1932. Sadly missed by daughter, ELEANOR.

RUHLAND, EDWIN F.—In loving remembrance, who died Sept. 13, 1935.
The depth of our sorrow we cannot tell,
In the loss of Edwin whom we loved so well
But while he lies in peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by GRANDPARENTS, LOVING RELATIVES AND FRIENDS.

RUHLAND, EDWIN F.—In memory of our dear son and nephew, who departed this life Sept. 13, 1935:
We think of him in silence,
No eye may see us weep;
But many silent tears are shed,
When others are asleep.
Sadly missed by FATHER, AUNT AND UNCLE OF CHICAGO.

SHUCK, LINDA SMITH—Who departed this life one year ago, Sept. 13, 1935.
"In our home she is fondly remembered.
"Sweet memories cling to her name.
"Those who loved her in life sincerely
"Still love her in death just the same."
Sadly missed by DAUGHTERS, SONS-IN-LAW AND SISTER.

SOMMER, IDA—In loving memory of our dear mother who departed this life Sept. 16, 1930.

Correspondence With British On Which Arabs in Palestine Base Charge of Broken Pledges

Suppressed by London, Letters Revealed by Late King Feisul Show How English Encouraged National Aspirations in 1915-16.

By ALBIN S. JOHNSON
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.

WITH the decades-old controversy in Egypt apparently amicably and definitely settled by the London Treaty, just signed, Great Britain can now be expected to turn its attention seriously toward liquidating the embarrassing Palestine problem. Caught between two equally sincere and precise, but contradictory promises, made in the war days when the Empire's existence was at stake, British statesmen have, for more than 15 years, preferred to take the path of least resistance when dealing with Jewish Zionists and Arab politicians. But just as the Ethiopian crisis forced Britain to consolidate its position in the Mediterranean so are international events forcing a showdown on the Palestine embroglio.

It is not, according to Arab leaders, the desire of the Jews to go to Palestine that they oppose. It is their forced settlement by Great Britain and other Powers. If unopposed in their present homes, they say, only a small number of Jews would ever settle permanently in the Holy Land and these would be welcome.

The writer has discussed the Palestine problem with such Arab leaders as the late King Feisul, Nuri el Said, the Grand Mufti el Husseini of Jerusalem, the Nationalist leader Auni Bey Abdullhani, Ihsan el Jabri Bey, former Chancellor of Kings Hussein and Feisul, Emir Chekib Arslan and many others. Their brief, almost entirely, is against Great Britain's failure to fulfill solemn pledges.

Much has been heard, indirectly, of the celebrated MacMahon-Hussein correspondence. It has never been officially published and is still guarded in the British Foreign Office. From the late King Feisul and his ex-Chancellor, Ihsan el Djabri Bey, the writer secured complete resumes of the eight famous letters and a photostatic copy of the "reaffirmation" of previous pledges, made by Lord Balfour when he was Foreign Secretary and a year after the famous Balfour Declaration.

The Correspondence.

In the first letter, King Hussein, Cherif of Mecca, to MacMahon, dated July 1, 1915:

> "Cheriff Hussein offers military aid against the Turks to the Allies in exchange for recognition of Arab independence within a territory limited by: On the North a line through Mersina and Adana and following the frontier to the Persian Gulf. On the East the Persian frontier to the Persian Gulf. On the South the Indian Ocean, Aden, however, being left to the British. On the West the Red Sea and the Mediterranean to Mersina.

The second letter, MacMahon to King Hussein, is a reply in which MacMahon, in the name of the British Government, declares that:

> The interests of the Arabs are identical with those of Great Britain and Great Britain intends to recognize the independence of the Arabs and the Caliphate as soon as it has been proclaimed. Furthermore, Great Britain will favor the transfer of the Caliphate to a descendent of the Prophet. The discussion of the frontiers of the Arab State are considered to be premature.

The third letter, dated Sept. 9, 1915, is a reply from King Hussein in which:

> King Hussein insists upon the settlement of the frontiers and declares that in all Arabia there is a single Arab element. All Arabs demand their independence and realization of this wish is plainly in accord with British interests.

The fourth letter, dated Oct. 24, 1915, from MacMahon to King Hussein, conveys in the name of the British Government a note saying:

> The districts of Mersina and Alexandrette, and those parts of Syria extending west of the districts of Damascus, Hems, Hama, Aleppo should not be considered as purely Arab. With these modifications and without prejudice to existing treaties with Arab chieftains Great Britain accepts the proposed frontiers. As to those territories where Great Britain is free to act wtihout prejudice to the interests of her French ally, I am authorized to give, in the name of Great Britain the following assurances: The British Government declares that it is ready to recognize and defend the independence of the Arabs in the territories comprised within the limits and frontiers proposed by the Cherif of Mecca.

Then follows assurances concerning Bassorah and Baghdad and the character of the assistance Great Britain is to lend to the Arabs.

Acceptance in Part.

The fifth letter is King Hussein's response, dated Nov. 5, 1915. It declares:

> I am unable to renounce the districts of Aleppo and Beyrouth for the reasons that these regions are purely Arab provinces and that there is no difference between Christian and Mussulman Arabs, seeing that the two elements descend from the same ancestors.

Hussein, however, accepts the modification of the frontiers insofar as it concerns Adana and Mersina.

The sixth letter, MacMahon to King Hussein, written Dec. 13, 1915 states that the British:

> Having taken under serious consideration observations of His Majesty (Hussein) and without accepting definitely, since the interests of France, Great Britain's ally were involved, Great Britain, having promised her assistance to the Arabs, will never make a peace with the Turco-Germans in which the independence of the Arab nation will not be recognized.

The seventh letter, dated Jan. 1, 1916, is from Hussein. In it he agrees:

> To drop, for the duration of the war only, the question of the Liban, in his desire to avoid difficulties among the allies who are fighting for a common aim. (King Hussein, adds, however) That it will be impossible to admit the slightest derogation which will give to France or any other Power a foothold in these regions.

The eighth letter, dated Jan. 25, 1916, is MacMahon's final reply in which he:

> Frankly recognizes, and entirely appreciates, the motives which have guided King Hussein in this important question and the motives which inspire his defense of Arab interests.

MacMahon further states that: "The British Government have taken note of the remarks of King Hussein, concerning Mesopotamia and that they will be taken under serious consideration when the enemy has been vanquished and the moment for pacific regulation has arrived." The letter thanks King Hussein, in the name of the British Government, and declares that henceforth the Arabs will be considered as allies.

It was a year later, in 1917, that Lord Balfour, British Minister of Foreign Affairs, agreed to sponsor the famous Balfour Declaration. What that statesman's interpretation of the Jewish pronunciamento was, or would be, is sealed in the grave. However, Sir Ronald Storrs, former Governor-

Committee Indictment of New Deal Which Bar Association Side-Stepped

Warns Against "Election of National Government Which Seeks Ways, Not to Observe, but to Avoid Limitations of Constitution," and Assails Roosevelt Policies in Detail

By IRVING DILLIARD
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE most highly charged committee report which has come before the American Bar Association in the 58 years of its existence was side-stepped at the recent convention of that organization in Boston by resort to the familiar parliamentary procedure known as "tabling."

What was thus evaded by leaders of the nation's legal profession was a recommended condemnation of the general policies and the governmental outlook of the Roosevelt administration.

The tabled report represented the views of the majority of a special committee created by vote of the Bar Association at its annual convention in Milwaukee two years ago for the study of "legislation and policies as effecting the rights and liberties of American citizens."

Much time and work went into the making of the report. The special committee was not ready to announce its conclusions at the Los Angeles convention in 1935 and the meeting continued the committee with the direction that it report this year. Ordinarily the American Bar Association's reports are delicately worded. This one handled its subject without the customary gloves.

Charges Effort to Evade Limitations of Constitution.

Warning against "the election of a national Government which seeks ways, not to observe, but to avoid the limitations of the Constitution," four of the seven members of the committee severely criticised the hurried enactment of legislation which flew in the face of Supreme Court decisions invalidating earlier statues designed to achieve substantially the same ends.

"There is no indication that the administration recognizes any obligation whatever to protect the individual citizens in his constitutional rights," the majority report declared. "For a time there was an unwillingness to expedite rather than to impede the cause of the citizen with money and courage enough to withstand official pressure and to ask the courts to determine his right. Professed regard for the Constitution and purpose to conform thereto were belied by attempts to forestall judgment of the constitutionality of radically new policies which in the meantime, were aggressively enforced against citizens few of whom had any chance to do otherwise than submit."

The committee members who charged the New Deal with disregard for the constitutional rights of American citizens were John D. Clark of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Fred H. Davis of Tallahassee, Fla.; George L. Buist of Charleston, S. C., and Charles P. Taft II of Cincinnati, the last a son of the late one-time President and Chief Justice, William Howard Taft. Their report proposed the adoption by the convention of the majority's findings and the discharge of the committee after its two-years' labor.

The dissenters on the committee were James G. McGowen of Jackson, Miss.; Fred L. Williams of St. Louis, and Kenneth Wynne of New Haven, Conn. Williams was a commissioner of the Missouri State Supreme Court from 1913 to 1917 and a Judge of the same court from 1917 to 1921.

Minority Does Not Take Issue With Majority Report.

The report signed by these three did not take issue with the findings of the majority. Consisting of only four short paragraphs as against 13 printed pages for the majority report, it pointed out that when the committee was established in 1934, the constitutionality of little, if any, of the Federal legislation involved had been passed on by the Supreme Court.

The minority then went on to say that since the major portion of this legislation had now been reviewed by the Supreme Court—and rejected, incidentally—"further study by this committee would serve no useful purpose," and "due to the fact that this is the year of a presidential election" might result in "embroiling the American Bar Association, whether willingly or not, in bitter partisan political discussion and internal dissentions."

Steering as clear of the issue as it could, the convention adopted neither the report of the majority nor that of the minority. But it had to do something with the committee, so it tabled both reports.

The Bar Association's instructions to the committee when it was created two years ago were plain enough. Asserting that "the rapid development in recent months (1933 and 1934) of novel legislative and governmental trends in the Federal Government" had resulted "in great diversity of opinion as to the effect of these theories" and that "the people at all such times look to the Bar for advice and guidance," the adopted resolution called for a review of the effects of these new laws with respect to human rights.

Trend of New Deal Uncertain Majority Report Asserts.

The text of the majority report, with the exception of several paragraphs which are summarized in the proper places, is as follows:

"The Federal activities upon which public attention was concentrated at the time the resolution was adopted were the enactment of important legislation in a brief session of Congress immediately after the inauguration of Mr. Roosevelt and the establishment and operation of many new Government bureaus and commissions, the most important of which were the National Recovery Administration and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. In the two regular sessions of Congress which have now passed, many additions to these Federal activities have been made and operations of the multitude of new agencies have been so extended that no one could become acquainted with all of them even as a matter of history.

"Notwithstanding this elaboration of the New Deal, its true character, the 'trend' mentioned in the preamble of the resolution of the association, is just as uncertain today as it was two years ago. Laws specifically proposed as emergency measures with limited life have been declared by important members of the administration to be the beginning of permanent changes in national policy. There has been a continuing conflict between such officials as to whether a new social and economic order is in the making or the old institutions are being perfected so that they may be preserved.

"On the other hand, during the delay in the presentation of a report by the committee, many of the most important new statutes have been considered by the Supreme Court of the United States. The mortality rate has been very high. So much of the central legislation of the New Deal has been declared unconstitutional that if the committee took another view of the field of its study it could present a brief and definite report which would be only a synopsis of the late decisions of the Supreme Court. But these authoritative decisions as to the constitutionality of this legislation have afforded surprisingly little light upon the problem which the committee believes has been set before it.

Rejection of Federal Power Extension Held Important.

"The refusal of the Supreme Court to accept a new theory of the extent of Federal legislative power under the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution is of the greatest practical importance. That theory, as succinctly expressed in the opening paragraph of the National Industrial Recovery Act of June 16, 1933, is that in order to remove the burden upon interstate commerce, arising from widespread unemployment and the disorganization of industry, Congress possesses the power to enact laws for the broadest control of industrial, manufacturing, merchandising and labor policies.

"Later the administration expanded the theory beyond its emergency character and took the position that our modern economic life is so complex that no act within it can fail to influence the whole and therefore the Federal jurisdiction must be held to be as broad as the problem with which it must deal. In each form this new theory of Federal power has now been rejected by the highest court.

"But the separation of powers between

The Disease and the Proposed Remedy

SIGNIFICANT phenomena growing out of the public resentment against economic depression are set out by George L. Buist of Charleston, S. C., a signer of the majority report, in a separate memorandum of his own. He also lists ways in which, as he puts it, the New Deal is "legalistically altering the form of the government of the United States" to "satisfy the public demand for change." His statement reads in part:

"Last year this committee, as a result of its studies of the question prior to the meeting at Los Angeles, reached certain conclusions that were embodied in tentative drafts of a report. Among these conclusions the committee observed that the New Deal is not something that has just happened; that while we are so close historically to this development that difficulty is experienced in discerning its specific origin, yet it is undoubtedly an expression of public resentment against economic depression, and that among the demands of the public, growing out of this resentment, the following may be identified as significant phenomena:

> "(1) The public objects to the concentration of private economic power in the hands of a few individual citizens. Deconcentration is demanded.
> "(2) The public objects to some uses of economic power by individual private citizens. It demands new vindication of old-fashioned honesty and the recognition of trusteeship to the public on the part of those who have attained economic command.
> "(3) The public demands a stricter regulation of groups organized in corporate form, with a view to preventing abuse of a legal instrument so useful to mankind.
> "(4) The public demands a fairer adjustment of exchange between agricultural products and manufactured goods.
> "(5) The public demands the distribution of a greater percentage of the products of the machine to the man who operates it.
> "(6) The public demands protection by the industrial institution of the institutionalized industrial worker . . . . .

"The plan of the New Deal for meeting the demands of the public cannot be determined from the examination individually of the several pieces of legislation that it has caused to be enacted, nor by testing whether they are valid under the Constitution, nor can it be determined by the examination of any one line of policy; but when all of the legislation collectively is considered, and the policies announced or practiced by the executive branch of the Government are viewed as a whole, it becomes somewhat evident that the New Deal is endeavoring to satisfy the public demand for change by legalistically altering the form of the Government of the United States in the following respects:

"1. To eliminate or greatly restrict the right of local self government within the states and subdivisions thereof.

"2. To concentrate the power of Federal Government in the executive branch thereof, (a) by so strengthening the executive and weakening the legislative branch as to make the latter subject to the dictate of the former; (b) by discrediting the judicial branch, preparatory to inhibiting it from rendering decisions the effect of which is distasteful to the executive.

"3. To use the autocratic power of the Federal executive, so created, to regulate and control in a planned economy the lives and activities of every citizen by means of a vast bureaucratic system centering around the executive.

"4. To deny to the efficient and thrifty citizen the normal economic rewards of his activity by forcing him to support, through confiscatory taxation and political distribution, those members of the populace who desire to live in indolence; and thus to produce a collectivist form of national life.

"5. In order to accomplish these things, to break down the Constitutional system of government, because it is inconsistent with a planned economy for the individual citizen to have enforceable rights against the government under the Constitution, or for the central planning government to have less than plenary power."

How Soviet Has Increased Gold Output 600 Per Cent Since 1931, Rising to Second Place in Volume

Roads, Schools, Hospitals and Theaters Follow the Prospectors — 'Poorer' Fields, Like America's, Not Touched Yet.

By A. SEREBROVSKY,
President of the Board of the central gold mining organization, "Glavzoloto."

MOSCOW, August.

IN the most distant part of the Soviet Union, amid mountains and forests in far corners of Siberia, the Far East and Yakutia of fabulous beauty, are scattered the numerous mines and gold fields of the Soviet gold mining industry. Half a million people in the mines and gold fields are engaged in surveyng for gold, digging new mines, building factories and dredgers, extracting the precious metal, transporting material, equipment and food to the places of work.

Tremendous work has been done in recent years in the U. S. S. R. in the organization and development of the gold mining industry. New mining and placer districts have been brought into operation in Kazakhstan, the Trans-Baikal Districts, Western Siberia and Kolima. Seventy-five per cent of the work is mechanized, and this has made it possible to increase the exploited areas considerably, even such old districts as the Urals, the Lena and Eastern Siberia. Scores of new dredgers have been put into use, and the output of gold from the refineries with a complete cycle is six times as high as it was in 1931. As a result of this enormous and intense work, the U. S. S. R., as is well known, has risen to second place in the world for its output of gold.

Currency More Stable.

The gold reserve of the Soviet Union has grown considerably and has increased the stability of Soviet currency. And it must not be forgotten that such enterprises as Magnitogorsk, Dnieprostroy, the Kuznets steel plant, the Stalingrad and Kharkov tractor plants, the Cheliabinsk caterpillar tractor works, the Gorky automobile plant, and thousands of collective farms and state farms were built on Soviet currency.

The Soviet Government, by a special decision, set up a form of organization of the gold industry, most effective for its growth and development. There are tax rebates for all people living in the gold fields. A higher scale of wages is in force for the workers and the engineers. Communal facilities are free of charge. Workers receive two months' leave per year with full pay, and those with long service receive considerable additions to their wages.

The constant attention paid by the Government and the expenditure of large sums for equipment for the mines and gold fields began to have their effect in 1932. In December, 1933, Josef Stalin was already in a position to tell Walter Duranty, correspondent of the New York Times, that "our speed of development is high but the volume is not yet great; if we had more dredgers and other machines, we could quadruple the output in a very short time."

Intensified Campaign.

The statement made by Stalin, whose role in the reconstruction of our gold mining industry is extremely great, that the output of gold could be quadrupled, became the watchword of all districts of the gold and platinum industry of the Soviet Union. A general spontaneous drive began, with the aim of putting the words of the leader into effect. The gold mining industry set to work to quadruple its output. Dredgers and other machinery were constructed in the heavy industry factories. Ordjonikidze, the People's Commissar of Heavy Industry, made it possible to transfer a vast amount of material, metal, machines and tools to the gold fields for their outfitting.

At the same time, we turned our distant outposts — Yakutia, Kolima, the Far East, Bodaibo—into cultured and populated places.

In these distant outposts, we were able to build up good conditions of life, to build roads, schools, hospitals, theaters. In Yakutia and in Eastern Siberia, you can find not only potatoes and cabbage growing now, but cucumbers and even watermelons. It is no longer necessary to haul in potatoes and cabbage to these distant places. They have sufficient of their own production. But potatoes never before grew in Aldan.

Soviet's Mineral Reserves.

By the end of 1935, it became finally evident from the geological surveys that the Soviet Union possesses tremendous reserves of gold in gold fields spread all over the territory of the U. S. S. R. from the Transcaucasus to the Pacific Ocean.

When surveyors discover gold, they also find other rare metals, as well as tin, copper, iron, coal, oil. After the explorers come the builders, and towns with electric lighting, water supply, clubs, theaters, brick houses, appear in the depths of the deserted forests. Towns spring up together with the mines—Nezametny, Balei, Stepnik, Darasun, Soviet Mine. Railways are constructed and steamers travel along the rivers — the Lena, Aldan and Amur fleets.

Dwelling houses are being energetically built in the gold fields and about the mines, and cultured conditions of life are being formed for the workers and prospectors. During the last three years, houses have come into use with a useful floor space of 400,000 square meters (4,305,600 square feet), in addition to 100,000 square meters of schools and over 500 hospitals, children's nurseries and dispensaries.

We tell the workers and prospectors in all the gold fields and mines: "Work your hardest. We put no limit on your earnings and no limit to your output."

The gold field workers are guided by the words of Orjonikidke, the director of all the heavy industry of the U. S. S. R.: "We have to tackle the question of the growth of the gold mining industry with all the help that science can give and with the aid of the finest and best educated engineers, technicians, economists and organizers."

Reasons for Success.

It is precisely this which explains the success of the Soviet gold mining industry. It has the best plans, the finest technical ideas, the best engineers and economists, and growing numbers of Stakhanov workers. The Stakhanov gold prospectors perfect the technical methods of their business and introduce new ones. Their creative minds have considerably improved the technique of mining, particularly in respect to explosions, making deep boxings for the charges and using large amounts of explosives. This increases the productivity of labor many fold. But the work of Ponomariev in the West Siberian gold field, using two perforators mounted on one stand, introduced perfectly new methods such as the engineers and organizers had never dreamed of. Work with two perforators was perfected still further by Akmanov, a foreman in the Ivanov Mine, who gave his experience to all the mines of West Siberia.

"For the new technique to be able to produce its results, we must have people, working men and women, who are capable of taking the lead in the new technical processes and advancing them," said Stalin.

With such people, in truth, it is possible to work miracles. With the richest supplies of gold in the world in our mines and gold bear-

Plutarch on Public Speaking.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

VOLUNTARY critics in general and H. L. Mencken, the sage of Baltimore, in particular, have seen fit to criticise Gov. Landon as an orator and public speaker. Manifestly, these worthies are sinning against the real principles of oratory and public speaking.

What constitutes an orator? Ranting and running up and down the rostrum? Shouting, waving, scowling and making wild gestures? Beating the table with his fists or clapping his hands against his thighs, breast and pulling his hair? One moment rolling his eyes like a dying sheep, and the next endeavoring to express the fierceness of a Spanish bull?

No. The really impressive public speaker ignores all this claptrap and goes mild-manneredly straight to his subject. You may study the writings of all the great orators of the world, from Isocrates down, and you will find that they condemn such bluster in public speaking.

According to Plutarch, one Cleon was the first Greek who transgressed the sober rules of public speaking. Quoting: "Besides all this, he (Nicias) did great mischief to the city by suffering the accession of so much reputation and power to Cleon, who now assumed such lofty airs, and allowed himself in such intolerable audacity, as led to many unfortunate results, a sufficient part of which fell to his own share. Amongst other things, he destroyed all the decorum of public speaking; he was the first who ever broke out into exclamations, flung open his dress, smote his thigh and ran up and down whilst he was speaking, things which soon after introduced amongst those who managed the affairs of state, such license and contempt of decency, as brought all into confusion."

Also, it was said that Caius Gracchus was the first of the Romans who violated the rule. Again quoting Plutarch: "He would walk about on the hustings, and in the heat of his orations, pull his gown off his shoulders, and was the first of all the Romans that used gestures." And Cicero also criticised such conduct in orators. Again quoting Plutarch: "He used to ridicule loud speakers, saying that they shouted because they could not speak, like lame men who get on horseback because they cannot walk."

Obviously, in a communication of this sort only a few of the high spots may be reached, but, as indicated, if you will study the great orations of the world, from Isocrates down, you will hardly find an oration comparable to the homecoming speech that Gov. Landon delivered in Pennsylvania. It was simple and plain common sense, just expressing the feelings of a man returning to his boyhood home as one of its citizens.

Though nominated by a great party for the presidency, he was mild and humble in his speaking, and free from violating any of the rules of decency. His other speeches are equally meritorious in that they ignore all wise-cracks and invective and indulge only in simple, plain language, comprehended by all. A. H.

Correction.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MAY I say for the benefit of the person who signed his letter "A High School Student," that he has apparently been misinformed when he says that "up to the present time children have received just 1 per cent of their savings" which they had in closed banks?

St. Louis school children had their school savings in three different banks at the time they closed in January, 1933. One of these banks has completed the liquidation of its assets and the children's savings have been paid in full. Another bank has paid 70 per cent of the claims made against it, while the third bank has returned 20 per cent of the claims made against it.

The impropriety of anyone injecting himself into the bank's affairs prior to the final liquidation of claims made against it is obvious.

INFORMED READER.

Are the People Apathetic?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN the editorial entitled "The Issue in Missouri," you say: "It is the grimmest irony to talk about the people's will being expressed at the polls."

Most certainly these frauds are a disgrace and a menace, to be combatted with every weapon available, but evidently they ARE the will of the people, since statistics compiled by the Governmental Research Institute show that in the period 1931-34 in St. Louis, "the averages of all elections show that 63.77 per cent of the eligible voters registered, 34.71 per cent of the eligible voters voted, and 53.1 per cent of the registered voters voted."

If I remember correctly, another recent editorial in the Post-Dispatch said something to the effect that if every informed citizen made a point of voting on election days, issues could be carried or defeated in spite of fraud.

If the "will," then, of the people were really aroused against the outrageous sort of thing that has been going on all over the country for years, they would do something about it. Simple logic points obviously to the fact that they don't give a d—n. NANCY LEIGH HAEGER.

A MAJOR OPERATION NEEDED.

It is only a blunted sense of public morality that can find cause for rejoicing in the "infirmities of procedure"—to borrow a phrase from the United States Supreme Court—that have been held to stand in the way of an official recount of the ballots cast, or certified to have been cast, in the bond issue election of last September.

The published revelations of gross fraud in this election are enough to make every good citizen hang his head in shame. Whether or not the fraud was of sufficient scope to reverse the result, could the votes be honestly counted, is beside the main point. The point is that the ballot was basely prostituted, and it is no extenuation to plead that this was done in a worthy civic cause. The end can never justify the means when the means strike at the foundations of representative government.

The fraud in the bond issue election and the previously disclosed fraud in the registration for the August primary are symptomatic of a deep-seated evil that has got to be rooted out if the right of suffrage is to have any meaning in St. Louis.

It will be to the eternal shame of the city if the present occasion is not seized by its responsible officials for a powerful attack, with all the weapons at their command, upon the organized corruption that is making a mockery of our elections. Complacence in high official places has permitted this corruption to obtain its greedy and sinister control over the ballot. Too often it has had not merely complacence on its side but has had also the active connivance of faithless public servants and of private interests looking for special privilege. How widespread it has become, how deeply rooted, has been dramatically shown in the revelations the Post-Dispatch has been publishing—revelations which have received a new official confirmation in the report of the outgoing grand jury censuring the city's Election Board and recommending that the grand jury investigation go on.

It is heartening to have that report; heartening, further, to have from the grand jury the assurance that the Circuit Attorney, to whom the jury gives high praise, is preparing to move with the full powers of his great office against the corruptionists.

The task is onerous, but with it goes the opportunity for an unforgettable public service.

The task is one in which halfway measures will not suffice. Not through the irresponsible tactics of petty officials acting on their own initiative has the ballot been corrupted on the scale we have witnessed. There has been conspiracy to control elections by fraud. The task is to discover and punish not only those who executed the details, but—and far more importantly—those who made the plans and gave the orders.

That there was large-scale, and possibly controlling, fraud in the bond issue election has been proved up to the hilt. Ballot boxes were stuffed, fraudulent counts of the ballots were certified. The returns bore on their face the evidences of corruption. There was one precinct from which was reported the unbelievable result of 505 "yes" votes and none on the other side. Returns from numerous other precincts were almost equally fantastic—270 to 9, 751 to 11, 398 to 1, and so on. It is needless to review the details; they have been fully published.

On top of this prima-facie showing of fraud, it has been established by the Post-Dispatch through sworn statements that there was fraud in each one of the 19 wards of the city in which the bonds obtained the requisite two-thirds majority. These 19 wards, incidentally, favored the bond issue on the official returns by the amazing count of 89,892 to 18,616—almost 5 to 1—although in the other nine wards, where about a third of the vote was cast, the bonds had only a slim lead, far short of the margin required for passage. Fraud has been proved in all the 19 wards in question by the showing, on the testimony of individual voters canvassed by the Post-Dispatch, that in each of a list of selected precincts, more than 20 in number, more "no" votes were cast than were reported. For instance, against a reported "no" total of nine in one precinct, the Post-Dispatch has shown that actually at least 38 "no" votes were cast.

We cite the evidence here in order to set it off against the astonishing statement of Chairman Waechter just after the Post-Dispatch began its disclosures. "I think," Mr. Waechter is quoted as saying, "that when the grand jury makes an investigation of the bond election, it will find that there is not much to the allegations of fraud. I do not look upon this as something as serious as some people do."

This from the chairman of the board charged with the duty of keeping the ballot clean in St. Louis!

Not serious! Not much to the allegations of fraud!

It is impossible to characterize that attitude with restraint,

Mr. Waechter, it will be recalled, pooh-poohed the disclosures of fraud in the June registration. Yet a rechecking of the rolls, forced upon the board by the piling up of evidence of fraud, resulted in the entry of "not found" against more than 46,000 names on the lists.

In heaven's name, what does Mr. Waechter regard as a serious attack on the honesty of the ballot?

The outgoing grand jury has taken a different view from Mr. Waechter's. It has said that the revealed facts prove the urgent need of a further searching inquiry. So, beyond any faint doubt, they do. The inquiry must go on—lead where it may—to the end that St. Louis shall be freed from the grip of its political underworld.

We repeat that halfway measures will not suffice. What is needed is a drastic major operation to cut out a cancerous growth.

TRAGIC PARADOX.

The report of the American Federation of Labor, stating that "widespread under-nourishment" exists among this country's workers, points to the most tragic paradox of our times. From a survey of employed workers' incomes in the North Atlantic section, the federation found that only 26 per cent were sufficient for an adequate diet, while 30 per cent could not buy enough food for minimum requirements.

At the same time that this condition exists, there is concern over the so-called over-production of foodstuffs, and the Government follows a policy of crop restriction. The federation shows, as other investigators have done, that if the workers could buy enough to eat, 5,000,000 more acres of fruit trees would be needed, 2,000,000 more acres of truck crops, 17,700,000 more dairy cows, and so on. In short, the farm problem would be solved.

Because the workers' earnings are insufficient, the logical solution of the paradox—bringing demand and supply together—cannot be adopted. Industry would benefit itself as well as the employe group if it took the step of spreading its income more equitably and enhancing that mass buying power on which prosperity depends. Yet we continue to have the tragic situation of workers without enough to eat and farmers destroying or restricting their crops.

LEGALIZED NAVAL RACE.

Expiration of the London Naval Treaty on Dec. 31, 1936, with all possibilities for its renewal exhausted, has been viewed by some observers as the signal for a great naval race and therefore a calamity. That the expiration of this treaty, together with the denunciation of the Washington Treaty by Japan, darkens the hope for world peace is undoubtedly true. As a matter of fact, however, the naval race has already begun with the London Treaty still in effect, and it is made possible by one of the provisions of the pact.

This is Article 21, the so-called "escalator clause," which permits any signatory Power to increase its navy whenever this is deemed necessary because of "new construction of any Power other than those who have joined in Part III (imposing limitations) of this treaty." It was under this clause that England last July, citing the building of new submarines and destroyers by France and Italy, which did not sign the treaty, announced its intention to keep 40,000 tons of over-age destroyers which were scheduled to be destroyed. The United States recently also announced it would keep 40,000 tons of over-age destroyers in service.

The armaments race is an endless chain, in which each nation seeks to meet and surpass the forces of its neighbors. Japan also has joined the parade by announcing that it will retain 15,500 tons of submarines and 11,000 tons of destroyers above those allowed under the expiring treaty. This, in London's view, gives Japan an excessive tonnage of submarines, and the British answer doubtless will soon be forthcoming in the form of new submarine construction. This will call for the building of more submarines and other war craft by Japan and other nations, and so on and on.

Continuance of one of the naval agreements might have slowed down the steady upward trend, but with the escalator clause of the London Treaty in effect, it could not have prevented that trend. This clause, of course, was a makeshift, introduced because two important naval Powers did not sign the treaty. Its failure drives home the lesson that the effort was useless as a check on the arms race, and that the only effective limitation treaty is one that includes all the major nations. There is little chance now that all the arming nations can be brought to an agreement, but the principle is worth filing for future reference—perhaps at the peace conference that will follow the next war.

A PERTINENT ARTICLE.

We desire to direct the attention of our readers to the article, "The ABC of Permanent Registration," printed on this page. Originally published in the Baltimore Evening Sun to further the cause of permanent registration in that city, the article, explaining simply and clearly how the system works, is equally applicable to St. Louis in every salient detail. It requires amendment only in the name of the city, and in one figure: the cost of each regular registration. In Baltimore, it is $146,000; in St. Louis, it ranges between $135,000 and $180,000.

Economy is a persuasive reason for adoption of the system, but more significant to St. Louisans just now is its value in preventing fraud. The present exposures of fake registration, ghost voting, multiple voting and other methods of corruption point emphatically to the need for reform. Under the strict requirements of permanent registration, much of the fraud now disclosed would have been impossible. The experience of other cities in obtaining honest elections by this system may be cited. Even more significant is the fact that political bosses and hangers-on of political machines everywhere have opposed it. An overwhelming tide of public demand has always been required to bring about its adoption.

We wish the citizens of Baltimore well in their effort to obtain permanent registration. And we wish the same to the citizens of St. Louis.

THE TRAILER'S ARRIVAL.

When the fleet of "Highway Pullmans" rolls off its assembly lines within the next few days, the Pierce-Arrow Co. will very likely have started something. The event may be historic as the arrival of the trailer.

To be sure, the trailer has been with us for some time, but as a casual, say, or nondescript, or vagrant, in which motordom as an industry was not commercially concerned. But the refuge of a depression economy, or short-lived freak, if so it was regarded, has multiplied and progressed. There are now 1,000,000 of them on the road, they say, and they have sloughed off much of their early awkwardness, achieved something of stylé and comfort, and are now looked upon as an offspring of great promise.

The triumvirate—meaning, of course, Ford, General Motors and Chrysler—are said to be intensely interested in the possibilities of this new unit, according to a staff writer of the Christian Science Monitor. The history of those companies and the logic of the situation corroborate that assertion. How far they may have proceeded with their research or experimentation is not indicated. But if a-gypsying we are about to go, if we are to pitch our tents wherever Romany Road beckons, if "we are to live by the way as we journey through life" beyond the reach of the tax-collector's long arm, and in such numbers as to constitute an isolated, tax-exempt, profitable market, our nomads may be sure that the house will be provided, structurally secure, competently appointed, and at a price geared to the peripatetic purse.

Not that the citizens of Traileropia will permanently escape the white, black or yellow man's burden We may trust the various administrations, city, state and Federal, to make these unattached wanderers pay for the privilege of transit and temporary tenancy. Anyhow, here is a budding modus vivendi that may add much to the gayety of the nation and present us, too, with a fresh cluster of problems.

THE SOURCE OF POWER.

The ABC of Permanent Registration

Criticising present system as wasteful and conducive to fraud, Baltimore writer urges permanent registration; it would save money, work and trouble, tend to eliminate corruption and simplify voters' problem; signature requirement and sworn reports of lodging-house keepers are important provisions to insure honest elections.

George Sellmayer in the Baltimore Evening Sun.

MERCANTILE corporations used to take periodic inventories of stock on hand. Frequently the establishment was closed for a week or two and all employes feverishly counted items on hand, tabulated them and, after a hectic time, the executives of the firm knew (or thought they knew) where they stood.

Nowadays, it is done differently. A perpetual inventory is kept. At a moment's notice the president can tell what is on hand, and how much. The records are kept up to the minute. Money is saved; figures are more accurate; there is no waste of time and effort in securing accurate statements.

What a pity that the City of Baltimore doesn't keep a "perpetual inventory" of its voting population. That is all that permanent registration means. You have a record of those entitled to vote and you simply keep that record up to date. If the citizens of Baltimore really appreciated the plan, it would go on the statute books at the next session of the General Assembly; and not even the (so-called) influence of the politicians could stop its passage.

No business man would tolerate in his plant a situation comparable to what will take place during the four days of registration this fall. From 2 to 10 p. m., those who want to vote must go to the polling places, answer a lot of questions, bring their naturalization papers (if they are not native-born) and stay in line to get their names on the books. No matter how many years you have been on the books, you must register all over again.

If you are ill, or out of town on the days mentioned, or if you work during those hours, it is just too bad.

All this will cost about $146 000, just for these four days of registration. If we had the permanent registration system here, this extravagance and waste of taxpayers' money would end.

Illinois has a permanent registration law, passed this year. If that statute were in effect in Baltimore, the coming registration would be the last general one of its kind. As it is, it is going to be a waste of taxpayers' time and money.

Suppose we had permanent registration in Baltimore. This is what would happen: All voters would go to their polling places and register. They would answer certain questions and would be subject to challenge, as heretofore. Their names would be entered on the lists of those entitled to vote, but they would go on cards, executed in duplicate, instead of cumbersome bound books.

Once registered, you would stay registered. You wouldn't go through the process every few years. There would be only one exception, which may or may not be in the Maryland bill (although it seems highly desirable). Those who failed to vote for four years would be stricken off the books. All they would have to do to get back on the records would be to write in and request reinstatement.

To insure honest registration, all voters would sign the original and duplicate cards. When election day comes around now, under the present system, it is nearly impossible to detect repeating. Under the permanent system, a comparison of handwriting could be made. Those unable to sign their names would have to furnish certain additional data at the time of registration, which would make identification easy on election day. (They would give their father's first name, mother's maiden name, etc.)

Then—and this is of tremendous importance—a month before election time (as under the Illinois law), the managers of boarding houses, hotels, lodging houses, etc., would file a report under oath giving the names and descriptions of all persons claiming such establishments as places of residence. The Board of Election Supervisors would then compare the lists furnished with the list of registered voters from these addresses. Those registered, but not listed, would be mailed notices requiring them to establish their right to vote. (If such provisions were now in our law, the registered voting population in several wards in Baltimore would, I am sure, show an amazing reduction in number.)

The registration cards would be kept under lock and key and on election day the duplicates would be sent to the polling place for use by the officials. The originals would always remain at headquarters. Provision would be made for cards mutilated or lost.

Arrangements would be made from time to time for additional registration dates, so that persons entitled to vote and not previously registered might register at the office of the Election Supervisors or on special registration days in the precincts, should this be necessary. Verification would be made from time to time of those on the lists to ascertain if the voters had moved away or had died.

The Supervisors of Elections would be furnished with the lists of all women who marry, so that corrections could be made and their new names put on the books. Lists of all deaths would be furnished by the Health Department; voters convicted of felonies would be removed from the registration lists. The postoffice would notify the board of all changes of addresses, to keep the records complete and up to date. Persons desirous of changing their affiliation might do so. New voters could register with a minimum of effort.

In this way, voters would be surrounded by every protection so that registration should become simple and easy, with removals being handled expeditiously, challenges taken care of and provision made for appeals to court by aggrieved voters. A complete list of all voters would be conspicuously posted at the polling place prior to election. The public would have every opportunity to find out just who is entitled to vote, and thus fraud could be kept at a minimum.

Permanent registration saves money, eliminates a lot of unnecessary work and trouble, tends to eliminate fraud and simplifies the voters' problem. So far, no one has pointed out any good reason why it should not be put into effect. A lot of loose talk is heard about the fact that the politicians are opposed to permanent registration and voting machines because it will reduce the number of clerks and judges of election. Just let the general public indicate that it wants these much-needed reforms and no politician would dare stand in the way.

German "Guests" Abroad

From the New York Herald Tribune.

THERE are echoes of the madder moments of imperial pre-war Germany in the speech made at the annual Nazi convention, calling for the unification of all Germans living outside of the Reich.

"Even those who have already become citizens of their host nation," said the speaker, "by blood belong to us and to no one else." With becoming Nazi conduct, he looks forward to the day when these Gemans abroad will be used by the Fuehrer and adds: "This purpose means conflict, but we Germans abroad will never retreat."

Fortunately, these views are held by only a few Germans who have become citizens of "their host nations." Otherwise, this policy could be viewed only with resentment here in America. The German-born American citizens and their children and grandchildren are an integral and most valuable element in the United States. Their loyalty was not even shaken by the injustice done many individuals in the fever of the World War excitement.

Some of them, of course, greatly admire Mr. Hitler and his Germany, but many more feel as does Charles Nagel of St. Louis, that Hitler has betrayed and destroyed the kindly, cultured Germany that they knew and loved. In its place, he has erected a structure that is harsh, unyielding and unlovely.

To Americans of German descent, as well as to those of other blood, the very concept of a "host nation" is disagreeable. The host nation presumably receives foreigners as "guests." When these "guests" become citizens, they still regard their new country as merely a host. The presumption is that the relationship is temporary and that guests can never become an integral part of the family but remain always "outsiders."

Were this the case in America, we should have a sorry condition, indeed. In one group would be the descendants of the early settlers, the "host," and all the subsequent comers would be divided by nations of origin into groups of "guests." The Italians would regard themselves not as Americans, but as Fascists; the Germans as Nazis and the other nationalities as still citizens of other lands—even unto the second and third generation. This might be fine for Mr. Hitler or for Mr. Mussolini. But which would claim the loyalty of the son of an Italian mother and a German father?

ENEMIES OF THE FORESTS.

From the Boston Evening Transcript.

ARE you a match breaker? We have it on the authority of the United States Forest Service that the real woodsman always breaks his matches in two before casting them aside. He thus makes doubly sure that they are not burning.

He who is not a match breaker when in the woods may be counted a member of that army of the careless who are enemies of the forests. The Forest Service says that smokers caused 47,845 fires last year, or 23 per cent of the whole number reported. They who do not break their matches started more fires than were caused by railroads, logging or by debris burning. The smokers were responsible for three times as many fires as those that started because camp fires were not extinguished.

Visitors to the forests will smoke in them. It would be out of the question to undertake to bar from the woods the pipe and cigarette. Therefore, the importance of breaking the matches, for he who learns that simple precaution is likely to form the habit of giving thought to the danger of setting the woods afire by careless ways. Being a match breaker, he may return to his home firm in the knowledge that his presence in the forests did not endanger them.

ORMAN THOMAS URGES 3 CHANGES IN CONSTITUTION

ocialist Calls on Voters to See That Other Candidates State Stand on His Proposals.

OR TYING HANDS OF SUPREME COURT

ould Give Congress Power to Pass Social Laws Without Interference by the Judiciary.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 12.—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, in a radio speech tonight, called for three changes in the Constitution to avert "disorderly confusion—even civil strife."

He called on voters to see that other presidential candidates state their positions in regard to these proposals:

1. A grant of positive power to Congress, without interference from the Supreme Court, to enact whatever legislation the people deem necessary for their social and economic well-being.
2. Popular election of the President and Vice-President to replace the present electoral college system.
3. Provision for an easier method to amend the Constitution.

"The general ability of a small minority under our Constitution to block constructive change," he said, "may mean the difference between orderly progress and disorderly confusion—even civil strife."

Changes in the Times.

Citing what he called the Constitution's original "imperfect compromise" on slavery which "had to be interpreted by fratricidal war," Thomas said:

"It would be a miracle if a document, written for the age of handcraft arts, at the dawn of the collectivism machinery has forced on us, should be adequate in times which demand a co-operative commonwealth as the condition of the good society . . ."

The Supreme Court's "present supremacy," he said, "is undemocratic and dangerous. The court does not interpret law. It makes law. . . . In no other so-called democracy has a court such power.

"Those who zealously preach the religion of the Constitution want us to do the worshiping while they take up the collection.

"The forces behind Landon and Knox welcome this situation," he said. "They gain by it."

Criticism of Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt was charged by Thomas "with subordinating a democratic and statesmanlike facing of the issue to campaign politics. . . . He is entirely too intelligent to be satisfied inwardly with the Democratic plank promising a 'clarifying' amendment."

Thomas challenged "Father Coughlin and his man Lemke," who "pose as strict constitutionalists," to show how Congress, "like Santa Claus, is to give all good little boys something, if the Supreme Court decisions with their logical implications are to stand."

NATIONAL PREACHING MISSION PROGRAM IN CITY OCT. 11-14

W. W. Martin Made General Chairman of Committee of One Thousand.

The National Preaching Mission, an evangelical movement which will be conducted in 25 major cities by a group of 50 religious leaders during the next three months under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will hold a program in St. Louis from Oct. 11 through Oct. 14, it was announced yesterday.

William W. Martin, a member of Third Baptist Church and president of the Masonic Home of Missouri, has been made general chairman of the Committee of One Thousand, composed of representatives of Protestant churches in the St. Louis area, who will plan and conduct the program. Other offices are the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, the Rev. C. Oscar Johnson, the Rev. Dr. F. C. Klick and Bishop William Scarlett, honorary chairmen, Mrs. J. D. Bragg, vice-chairman, Albin P. Crowe, treasurer, the Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Armstrong, secretary, and Walter W. Head, president of the General American Life Insurance Co., finance chairman.

The mission starts today in Toronto and upper New York state. The local program will include a series of luncheons, seminars, ministerial and young people's conferences, addresses before high school students and luncheon clubs, and four public mass meetings at Municipal Auditorium Convention Hall.

Installation of Student Officers.

New officers of the St. Louis University student conclave, which directs campus activities, will be installed Thursday when classes begin. Robert E. Hennessy, senior in the School of Dentistry, is president. Thomas P. Neill is vice president; Paul E. FitzSimmons, secretary, and J. Shapleigh Driscoll, treasurer.

Correspondence on Which Arabs Base Palestine Demands

General of Jerusalem, stated in the presence of the writer, that "the old gentleman remarked that: 'Anyway, it will be an interesting experiment.'"

That Lord Balfour never dreamed of the Pandora's box he was creating was evident later, when, on a visit to the Holy Land he was nearly mobbed by angry natives and barely escaped with his life. The British Foreign Office has never officially revealed the seriousness of the crisis that was averted at that time.

That there are many skeletons in Downing Street's closets, however, has been admitted repeatedly. Speaking before Commons during the Wailing Wall disorders, Dr. Drummond Shiels on behalf of the government, said:

"Theer are still valid reasons, unconnected with the question of Palestine, which render it in the highest degree undesirable in the public interests, to publish this correspondence (the Hussein-MacMahon letters). . . These reasons may be expected to retain their force for many years to come. The ambiguous and inconclusive nature of the correspondence may well, however, have left the impression among those who were aware of the correspondence that His Majesty's Government intended to include Palestine in the projected Arab state."

That the Balfour Declaration in 1917 was made without any intention of prejudicing the promises made to the Arabs, is the contention of Arab Nationalists, Irakian statesmen and others. They base their belief upon an important letter re-affirming all previous promises and branding as intrigues of the enemy propaganda which reached the Arabs early in 1918, that they were being double-crossed by the British.

Text of Letter.

This letter, to King Hussein, in full, was as follows:

Translation.

Jeddah, 8th Feb. 1918 (27-4 1336)

To His Majesty the King of Hedjaz, Cherif and Emir of Mecca, etc.

I am directed by H. E., the Viceroy, to communicate the text of the telegram sent by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (Lord Balfour), London, addressed to Your Majesty as follows:

"The proof of perfect sincerity and earnestness which Your Majesty has given in sending the Turkish Commander's letter, address to His Highness the Emir Feisul and to Djafar Pasha, has made the best impressions upon His Majesty's Government, and the measures taken by Your Majesty on this occasion are another proof of friendship and sincerity which have always characterized relations between the Government of Hedjaz and that of His Majesty, the King of Great Britain.

"It is certain that the policy followed by Turkey tends to create suspicion and doubt between the Allied Powers and the Arabs who, under the command and direction of Your Majesty, have made admirable efforts to regain their former liberty.

"Turkish policy does not cease to spread doubt, to suggest to the Arabs that the Allied Powers have designs on their territory and to make the Allies believe that they can make the Arabs give up their determination.

"But the designs of the intriguers will not succeed in sowing discord among minds which are directed towards the same idea and the same end.

"His Majesty's Government, in accord with its allies, continues in its attitude of favor towards any movement having for its object the liberation of oppressed nations, and is determined to uphold the Arab nation in its struggle to reconstruct an Arab empire where the law and the Chari (Moslem legislation) will rule in place of Turkish injustice and where fictitious discord among Arabs, instigated by Turkish official authorities, wil disappear.

"His Majesty's Government reiterates its previous promises concerning the liberation of the Arab nation.

"After having pledged itself to this policy of liberation, it is determined to continue honestly in that course with the resolution to prevent Arabs who are already liberated from falling back into the abyss of bondage and to aid those who are still under the yoke to obtain their liberty."

I have the honor to be,
Your Majesty's obedient servant,
PABST, Colonel.
British representative at Jedda.

HARVARD LISTS FIFTY MOST NOTED ALUMNI

Roster of Men Named From Virtually Every Major Field.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—A committee of selectors has undertaken to list Harvard's 50 most noted graduates for a Harvard Hall of Fame in connection with the university's celebration of its tercentenary. Their choices are made public in a magazine published by the Boston Herald, in observance of the occasion.

Living alumni were eliminated from consideration by the judges. The Hall of Fame is as follows:

Charles Francis Adams, John Adams, Samuel Adams, John Quincy Adams, Edward Everett, James Otis, George Bancroft, Richard Henry Dana, Lebanon Russell Briggs, William James, Charles Eliot Norton, Nathaniel S. Shaler, William Hickling Prescott, Jared Sparks, Alexander Agassiz, Simon Newcomb, Theodore William Richards, Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Henry Lee Higginson, Samuel Gridley Howe, Theodore Parker, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Joseph Story, Henry Adams, Ralph Waldo Emerson, James Russell Lowell, James Lothrop Motley, Francis Parkman, Henry David Thoreau, Henry Hobson Richardson, Joseph Hodges Choate, Josiah Quincy, Phillips Brooks, William Ellery Channing, Edward Everett Hale, Increase Mather, George Pierce Baker, Percival Lowell, Caleb Cushing, Charles William Eliot, James Jackson Storrow, George Frisbie Hoar, Francis Davis Millet, George Herbert Palmer, James Bradstreet Greenough, Theodore Roosevelt, Wendell Phillips, Cotton Mather and John Edmond Fiske.

The committee making the selections comprised Dumas Malone, editor of the Dictionary of American Biography; Albert N. Marquis, editor of Who's Who in America; Dr. Elliott C. Cutler, president of the Harvard Alumni Association, 1935-1936; William Allen White, editor; Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War; President Karl T. Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Irita Van Doren, literary editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, and Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The governing factors on which the committee made its choices were specific accomplishment, relative attainment of eminence among their contemporaries, enduring quality of their endeavors and the scope of their influence.

The final selections disclose some interesting evaluations. The group which takes the largest number of niches in the Hall of Fame is that of literature, from which field the selectors named 11. Closely following are the men who attained eminence in the field of public life. They occupy 10 places. It is interesting to note that in this group are four Adamses, who, combined with Henry Adams in the literature group, give the family of that name a preponderance of recognition.

Nine Harvard men who were distinguished in the field of education were given places.

The committee found in the ministry six men they were agreed must be included. From science and law four each were chosen. Finance supplied three, art and architecture two and medicine one. It is noteworthy that no selection was made from the field of music.

Communists Get Radio Time.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12. — In a statement from the national election campaign committee of the Communist party, William Z. Foster, Communist campaign chairman, announced today two radio stations, CAE of Pittsburg and WTCN of Minneapolis, have been induced "under pressure" to agree to carry through their broadcasting contracts with the Communist party.

How Soviet Has Increased Gold Output 600 Pct.

ing sands, we can take first place in the world for gold output. But to attain this, we shall have to do much work. We hall have to dig new mines, build new factories, install new dredgers, hydraulic sluicers, excavators, improve transport still more, make new roads.

Supply "Unlimited."

Increasing its gold output year by year, the U. S. S. R. is increasing the strength of its currency.

There is no limit to the development of the gold extraction industry in our country. We have the richest resources of raw material in the world. We have many districts like Podluny Golets, Golets Visochaishy, Jelambet, Maikain, Kliuchi and Belaya Gora, which are waiting their turn to be worked. We have not yet touched the places with a poorer gold content, similar to gold fields that have long been worked in America and Africa.

The general prosperity of the Soviet Union, the widening and development of trade, the reduction in prices, the rise in the demand from the population, all make it possible for us to develop the extraction of gold still more, to strengthen the Soviet ruble still further.

The gold mining industry played a big role in giving improved value to the Soviet ruble. Thanks to the gold mining industry, the Government has ever-growing reserves of currency in the form of the precious metals that are needed for payment for purchases made abroad. It is greatly owing to the gold mining industry that the Soviet Union is the best and promptest paying creditor in the world. Thanks to the success of the gold mining industry in the Soviet Union, a large number of resources are set free for the still greater improvement of the country.

PUBLIC EXHIBIT OF FIELDIANA

Articles to Be Displayed in Stix, Baer & Fuller Assembly Home.

A public exhibit of articles that belonged to Eugene Field or were associated with his life, collected from all over the country for the Eugene Field Shrine, will be held from Tuesday, Sept. 15, to Saturday Sept. 26, in the Stix, Baer & Fuller assembly home. The articles, assembled with the aid of contributions from St. Louis school children, by a committee headed by Jesse P. Henry, will be placed in the shrine when it is opened next month.

Eugene Field II, will come from his home in Wisconsin, to be host at the exhibit. He will autograph catalogues, and talk on his father's life and poems. Colored facsimiles of the manuscript of "Little Boy Blue" will be given to visitors.

German House Anniversary.

The seventh anniversary of the building of the German House will be celebrated Saturday night at 8 o'clock at the house, 2345 Lafayette avenue, with an entertainment and dancing. There will be folk dances and group singing by the various German singing societies in the city.

LEAGUE REFORM ON AGENDA FOR COUNCIL MEETING

Optimists at Geneva See Hope for Peace in Failure of Recent Events to Start War.

SPANISH QUESTION LIKELY TO BE RAISED

Delegates to Convene on Friday Three Days Before Annual Meeting of Full Assembly.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 12.—The League of Nations Council will meet for its ninety-third regular session Friday.

Although the European situation is fraught with fear of war, the more optimistic leaders see hopeful signs in the fact that none of three recent events has precipitated international complications. They were:

Germany's denunciation of the Locarno treaty and the remilitarization of the Rhineland.

Italy's conquest and annexation of Ethiopia in defiance of League disapproval and sanctions.

The civil war in Spain, which threatened to involve other countries on lines of Communism vs. Fascism.

However, League leaders are discussing anxiously the possibilities of the Spanish situation; also the decision of Soviet Russia to increase its conscript army and the ensuing decisions of Germany to increase its term of compulsory military service from one to two years.

Not on Council Agenda.

None of these questions figures on the Council Agenda, although some observers believe the Spanish situation will be referred to by Latin-American delegates, both at the Council and at the annual Assemly of the League which opens Sept. 21.

Manuel Rivas Vicuna, former Premier of Chile, and now Ambassador to Italy, will preside at the Council session. The Council, after one or two days' meetings, will sit during the League Assembly period.

Twenty-four items appear on the Provisional Agenda. First, in popular world interest is the project to reform the League Covenant—a reform proposed after the League had failed to halt the Italian-Ethiopian war.

The special Assembly held in July invited Governments to send in proposals "to improve in the spirit or within the limits of the Assembly resolution the application of the principles of the Covenant."

What Resolution Said.

The Assembly resolution emphasized the desire to strengthen the authority of the League by adapting "the lessons of experience." It expressed attachment to Covenant principles, despite the League's failure in the Italian-Ethiopian conflict, and to the doctrine of American states "excluding the settlement of territorial questions by force."

The Locarno treaty, denounced by Germany, also figures on the agenda, but it was forecast that nothing would be done on this question because of the plans to hold a new Locarno conference this fall.

Economic, financial and mandate questions, opium problems and a plan to convoke an international conference to prevent the pollution of the sea by oil are among the other questions on the Council Agenda.

The present trend of League opinion is not to amend the League Covenant, but to let states interpret its stimpulations, and to have military sanctions against an aggressor state entrusted to regional groups of countries.

179,000 PUBLIC LIBRARY BOOKS LENT IN AUGUST

100,000 Volumes, Pamphlets and Clippings Consulted, Report Declares.

There were 179,333 books drawn for home use and 100,487 books, pamphlets and clippings consulted in the Public library last month, Arthur E. Bostwick, librarian, announced yesterday.

The number of borrowers' cards issued was 2644, making a total of 164,170 persons holding cards.

Among the books for which there is a heavy demand are "Man the Unknown," by Carrel; "Sweden, the Middle Way," by Childs; "Wake Up and Live," by Brande; "From a Surgeon's Journal," by Cushing; "The Return to Religion," by Link; "Inside Europe," by Gunther, and "Life Insurance," by Berman.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CAMPAIGN

Walter W. Head Chairman for Drive in Missouri.

Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America, has been appointed chairman of a committee to conduct a campaign in Missouri to encourage Sunday school attendance. The Missouri Sunday School Council of Religious Education reported 450,000 children were not receiving religious instruction.

The campaign is part of the recently announced program of the International Council of Religious Education, representing 41 Protestant denominations.

Gov. Landon Talks as One New Englander to Another

Doesn't Have to Affect Simplicity, But Finds Campaigning as Difficult as Roosevelt Does Easy.

BY MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ABOARD LANDON SPECIAL TRAIN, Sept. 12.—Under a gray New England sky, with low-hanging mist and fog that persisted all the way, Gov. Alf. M. Landon today rode through the stronghold of Republicanism to the climax of the campaign in Maine.

To the crowds who came to see him at every stop he spoke as one New Englander to another. Although a Kansan, Landon told those who crowded about the rear platform of his special train, he has shared the culture and traditions of this section. And in his homespun gray suit, his face sober, serious, with the air of mild but sufficient prosperity that marks him, he might well pass for a New Englander of the older order.

"I went to school in Lawrence," he says in his slow, deliberate, middle-western speech, "a town named after Amos Lawrence of Massachusetts. The principal street in that town is Massachusetts avenue. The first street to the west is Vermont, and the first street on the other side is New Hampshire. So, as I have said, I have grown up in a New England atmosphere." It is the usual local appeal, as old as politics itself, but it comes with a decided naturalness from this gray, ruddy-cheeked man.

The legend of the "Kansas Coolidge," has been repudiated by Landon's backers but it is, nevertheless, as though the Republican candidate were coming home.

A Changed Candidate.

As this tour continues, it is increasingly apparent that it is a different Republican candidate from the one who invaded Pennsylvania and New York some weeks ago. Those closest to Landon say that on that first campaign trip he was frightened. He was confronted for the first time with the realization of what it means to have to gear one's personality to the vast engine of publicity which is what a campaign train is. It was so utterly different from the Topeka street corner, from a Kansas state campaign.

His easy, homely informality registered with a group of Kansans on the State House lawn or even with a crowd of several thousand at the Salina Fair Grounds. But transmitted through a half dozen microphones to a crowd of 25,000 from a high platform, speaking from a forest of top hats and stuffed shirts it didn't carry at all. The need for translating himself into terms of the national campaign machine appalled him and his reaction was characteristic. He froze as tight as a millpond in December, like any other puritan American.

And those in the Landon camp could not help but realize that in this campaign Landon has an opponent who understands every stop and gear and lever of the publicity machine and uses it with a masterful skill. To press the publicity buttons is second nature for President Roosevelt. He adapts himself with the ease of a born actor to the required technique of the campaign train.

Landon Thaws Out.

To a considerable degree Landon has thawed out. That is the view of his close advisers and it is apparent even to those who have seen him but a few times. It is not that he has developed any marked histrionic talent, although he has taken an intensive course in how to speak over the radio. But he has decided to do this job as best he can, hew to the line and let the chips fall where they may. He is determined to use the publicity machine to say what he wants to say in his own way. Those who attribute his rusticity of manner to a calculated strategy, intended to capitalize on the Coolidge resemblance, are perhaps too subtle in their analysis.

As he comes down the aisle of the crowded day-coach back of his private car, which is the last on the train, his manner is one of brisk informality. These are Connecticut politicians who got on at Stamford.

He shakes hands right and left exchanges a word, passes on, his quick smile showing. Someone has brought him as a present a huge unwieldy bust of Thomas Jefferson in plaster. He bends down a moment, examines it, says, "Well now, that's nice, that'll be nice to have around," and passes on.

Reduced to Formula.

At Dover in New Hampshire a crowd of 3000, perhaps more, is massed around the station, waiting in a fine, steady rain for the candidate to appear. He comes out on the platform, waves his hand in salute and stands, bracing himself against the rail, talking into the loud-speaker.

He has developed a formula for these rear-platform appearances. "I know that you're here to look me over," he says, pausing and with a smile glances out over the crowd. This gets a laugh every time. "Well, that works both ways, I'm glad to look you over, too," and again the crowd responds appreciately. He makes a local reference calculated to touch local pride and then from the notes held in his cupped hand he begins to speak slowly and deliberately.

"The remedy for unemployment is not a permanent dole. . . . Relief must be continued as long as the need for its exists. . . . Limitation of production and destruction of crops is not going to provide this kind of work. . . . Jobs will be made secure when free American enterprise is restored. . . . Number of unemployed is just about what it was when this administration took office. . . ."

This, too, is a formula and the variation from one stop to another are slight. The governor seldom alters the expression of his voice, he does not lift his eyes; only occasionally does he give special emphasis to some point, pausing. And for the most part the crowds listen in silence, raising a cheer when he begins and when he concludes, but rarely interrupting him with any form of applause.

Leaders Await Him.

As his last words are spoken, the flagman gives the signal and the train begins to pull away. He must turn now to meet political leaders who have boarded the train while he talked. No one who has not had at least a glimpse of it can have any idea of the strenuousness of this campaign experience, of the way in which it must inevitably drain the energy of the individual who must be the real dynamo of the block-long sound wagon that this train is.

To his own private car the political elect have been admitted. They have reports to bring, tales to bear, appeals to make. And they must be accorded at least a sympathetic hearing. In the day coach and the parlor car immediately behind the candidate's private retreat are the lesser political lights who have also come aboard the train. Although they are not admitted to the sanctum, they must see the candidate and shake his hand.

All day long a variegated and incongruous crowd has been on and off the campaign special, illustrating once again the truth of that ancient political saw about politics and the strangeness of bedfellows. Here are Raymond Gram Swing, until recently of the left-wing Nation, and Ogden Mills, Hoover's financial adviser, one of the richest men in America. Both are supporters of Gov. Landon. Here are Charles D. Hilles, Old Guard Republican leader of New York, and Miss Margaret Eton, head of the National Young Republican Federation of the Eastern States, one of the many smartly dressed, attractive women who are to be found in the Landon camp wherever it happens to be pitched.

Women Like Him.

At every stop a group of well-dressed women, young and old, have boarded the train to ride to the next stop. They are obviously, for the most part, amateurs in politics, but they make up by their ardor what they may lack in knowledge of the "game." "Isn't he marvelous, so natural, so simple," they say when Landon has passed through the train. Their background is plain—a large, pleasant county house outside of New York or Boston or Lawrence or Lowell.

In striking contrast to these city people are the Kansans who accompany the candidate from Topeka as they did on his previous tour. Oscar Stauffer, small-town publisher; Lacy Haines, Kansas manager of the Kansas City Star and as close as anyone, perhaps, to the Governor; Jesse C. Harper, Sitka (Kan.) stockman and former athletic director of Notre Dame. These men have an obvious rusticity, a cracker-barrel simplicity that does not obscure their innate shrewdness, for they are all highly successful men who have amassed tidy fortunes through their own endeavors.

Of course, it is part of the Republican strategy to capitalize on the homespun qualities of their candidate. That is one reason why men like Haines, Stauffer, Harper and other Kansans accompany him on his tour and why the Ogden Milless and the Charlie Hillesses are kept in the background. It is part of the strategy to contrast Landon's simplicity—yes, his awkwardness of manner—with the glibness, the ready affability of Roosevelt. But this would seem to be making a virtue of a necessity, for that Landon could become, even though he had the long years in national politics that the President has had, a campaigner of the Roosevelt style seems doubtful.

Pace Is Tiring.

It is obvious for one thing, that he can't take it in the same way that Roosevelt does. His day began, considering the change in time from Kansas time to the East's daylight time, at 6:15 this morning and it ended around midnight, when the candidate had shaken the last hand and smiled the last smile. In that time the Governor was hauled and mauled about by some 15 to 20 different sets of people.

I talked to an old friend of the Governor's, from his boyhood home in Pennsylvania. "Alf's tired," he said. "I was back there talking to him just now, and he's tired. He don't act natural. But you wait until he gets into the White House and then he'll act natural. He's trying to act natural but he's too tired or something."

Gov. Landon is trying to step up his personality to the overwhelming magnitude of the great voice which comes from this huge sound machine that all day long has been rolling through the New England countryside. But it is not any easy thing to do and the strain of it is showing in Alf Landon's voice and in his face.

HAMILTON CHARGES 'JUGGLING' OF FEDERAL FINANCE FIGURES

Contends Relief Must Be Cut or Government Will Spend More Than President Says.

By the Associated Press.

LAKE WAWASEE, Ind., Sept. 12.—John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, charged in an address here today that the "highest officials" of the Democratic administration had "deliberately juggled figures in order to give a false impression of the true state of government finances."

Hamilton, speaking at a meeting sponsored by the Indiana Republican Editorial Association, said: "I charge Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau with deliberately misleading the American people as to the state of Government finance and with doing this solely for their own political advantage."

He contended that unless relief expenditures were drastically reduced, the Federal Government would spend during the current year "approximately $1,170,000,000 more than the President or the Secretary of the Treasury admitted in their report to the public."

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

More Than Good, Less Than Great

STEPS GOING DOWN. By John T. McIntyre. (Farrar & Rinehart, Inc., New York.)

IT IS NOT always apparent just what a writer is trying to do. Mr. Sobersides may be aiming at "literature" deliberately and with malice prepense while Mr. Golightly means only to turn out something that will amuse, divert or astonish and sell. Frequently Sobersides proves to be merely commercial while Golightly strikes an authentic note. Shakespeare wrote for the box office.

These remarks are prompted by John T. McIntyre's "Steps Going Down," which has been adjudged to be the American winner in the "All-Nations Contest" sponsored by a group of publishers, American and foreign. The book has won $4000; the capital prize is $19,000. The experts who picked it are William Soskin, Carl Van Doren and Joseph Wood Krutch.

Superficially it is the story of Pete, a "wise guy," on the dodge from the District Attorney's men and the police. Superficially it is a tale that any reasonably competent police reporter could have written. Superficially it is a clever, rapidly unfolding action story to kill an evening pleasantly, scarlessly. That ought to be enough for any man's $2.50.

Yet it all has large truth in it. There are any number of Petes in any big city, social beings, creatures of the grotesque fringes of civilization; smart and hard, sometimes inside the law, often outside; "fly," unmoral, usually likable in some ways—pragmatic anarchists. The world has no lack of Sadies and Thelmas who consort with the Petes, or of crooked Schimmels or mildly insane Gills. McIntyre spares nothing in his portrait gallery. That it is more fit for the Bertillon room at headquarters than anywhere else is not a criticism. McIntyre draws from life, shrewdly, with a fast, lean style. He must admire the works of Dashiell Hammett. Nowhere does he attitudinize—as of course he shouldn't—or do more than recite his gutterdemalions' low-lifedness, meannesses, disloyalties. Had McIntyre been less lavish with his realism, he would have had a no less acceptable story; had he chosen to cast his material with slightly different emphasis, he would have had something memorable.

As it stands, there remains a question. Just what is McIntyre trying to do—win a prize or write honestly and sincerely from experience? The two ideas are not, of course, mutually exclusive, but in "Steps Going Down" they seem mixed, wherefor the novel is better than good, considerably less than great.

Memories of India

INDIA MOSAIC. By Mark Channing. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

LIFE for the British Army officer stationed in India follows a set pattern based on the assumption that he is innately superior to the native, be the native Brahmin or sweeper. The author started his 20-year career as an officer in the country with the same prejudices. It was to him a land of superstitions, ugliness and filth. But he differed from the average in that he became, if not a convert, at least a sympathizer with the country's religious philosophy.

Channing's book, while not essentially a treatise on that philosophy, includes an unusually concise and understanding outline of it, interwoven with the chronicle of his experiences. His change of viewpoint was gradual, the outcome of his contacts with the people—and sometimes the form of his contacts was rather upsetting to his fellow officers—together with his normal intellectual curiosity. Perhaps, too, the matter of subconscious suggestion played a part, for he went there in love with a girl who had been born in India; who in fact, Channing half implies, may have had a strain of Indian blood. The girl died in Europe before they could be married.

There are, beside the description of Indian customs and viewpoint, enough exciting experiences in the way of tiger hunts, wild rides and fights with Afridis to keep up interest. And, for the reader interested in Yoga, there is his friendship with, and instruction by, a "guri" or teacher.

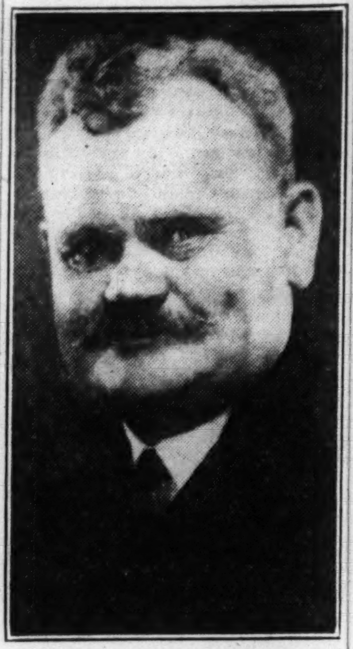
Poet Tells Powerful Tale of Maine



Robert P. T. Coffin

Larger Than Life Yet Truly Alive

JOHN DAWN. By Robert P. Tristram Coffin. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

THIS, Mr. Coffin's latest novel, is a tale of adventure, of ships and storms and sea-fights. It is a history of Maine shipping in the nineteenth century and of the men who made it great; and it is an imaginative record of the real Maine of that period—the Maine of ordinary people and their ordinary ways of living. But it is also something a great deal more, for Mr. Coffin is a poet and his imagination will not be confined within the usual frame of a novel. This is one of those rich books that demand of the reader a certain insight. One sees in it what one is qualified to see.

The book, indeed, can scarcely be called a novel in any strict sense. There is little attempt at rendering the subtleties of character, little "psychologizing." Almost all the characters, certainly all the Dawns, are a bit larger than life; they rise above reality into a higher existence as symbols. In the process they become at times grotesque, as are the characters in Rabelais—and for the same reason: a superabundance of strength, which breaks through all ordinary molds. These characters are something more than men; and yet, in spite of the exaggeration, they are alive.

That the book is believable is due to the poetic power of the author's conception. He can give reality and emotional strength to the most ancient of situations, to hackneyed bits of "business" that reek of melodrama and sentimentality. The reader accepts without question even the outrageously romantic love story of John Dawn, because here, as in the more nearly normal parts of the book, there is an intensity of feeling and vision which goes beyond the bareness of the visible framework to create a symbol.

But, for all its symbolic quality, there is no cloudiness in the story. The pattern is sharp and clear and simple, and it is only after reading nearly all the book that one begins to perceive something hidden beneath it. One is, perhaps, dazzled. The story is presented in a series of small bright pictures, glittering and icy-sharp, like diamonds. (It is significant that Mr. Coffin is, in his imagery, partial to diamonds. His own writing is like them, brilliant, sparkling, finely cut.) These pictures, however, are not disconnected. They are arranged to give a sense of movement; their progression is continuous and flowing, like the life-force of the Dawns themselves, and rhythmical as the sounds of the sea.

Suggestive of the ocean, too, is the deep undertone that throbs through the book. For there is nothing effeminate in this poetry. It is strong, blended of sweat and blood and glory. It roars. It thunders. But it can also be quiet and smooth, without losing its power; and the reader will leave the book with a feeling of having touched something noble and beautiful, and a little sad.

Graft and How To Go About It

YOU'RE PAYING FOR IT! By Charles H. Garrigues. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

A BETTER title for this book would be something like "The Beginner's Handbook of Graft and How to Get Away With It." For that is its general theme, save for a few pages now and then when the writer abandons his pedagogical vein for a passing mood of reflection. To the young and ambitious politician, eager to get his share of the pickings, which the writer says are to be had on all sides merely for the taking, no more appropriate gift could be imagined.

Much information necessary to a successful and lucrative career is given. The author tells in what branches of government the gravy is richest, and how the neophyte should go about gathering it. Not only such elementary forms as commissions and protection are treated, but there is also a comprehensive manual of bribery in its various aspects, including sound advice on how the proceeds may best be collected. The student learns the advantages and perils of taking cash, securities and real estate, and receives a warning about how foolhardy it is to accept checks. There is even a helpful chapter on "What to Do When the Sheriff Comes," containing helpful hints on behavior in court, for the benefit of inept students who let themselves be caught with the goods.

The writer is a newspaper man who has taken part in several antigraft crusades on the Pacific coast. What he does in this book is to cease running with the hounds for a time, to take a turn at running with the hare. Most ingeniously, he uses his material on the methods of graft-grabbers to write, not an indignant expose of their tactics, but a bland and sober "guide" for the ostensible purpose of assisting beginners in the craft. The effect is far more impressive than if he had written a more or less conventional muck-raking volume.

Mr. Garrigues is frank about the place of graft in the modern world. Politicians have privileges to dispense, and there are always people who can use those privileges, he points out. Nor should politicians be assailed for their ethics, for "the ethics of politics is neither higher nor lower than the ethics of business." It is at the points where business comes in contact with government, in regulatory provisions, licensing, contracts, etc., that graft grows thickest, he asserts.

Thoroughly cynical, he sees no reason why graft should not continue to flourish as long as the present scheme of society and government continues. The only thing that might seriously endanger it, he says in a chapter called "The Future of Graft," is "a change in the competitive capitalist, competitive democratic system." With removal of the profit motive, he adds, the incentive to graft would be removed.

Is this what the sly old pseudo-professor of graft has been driving at all the while? If so, it is most adroitly done. He does not labor the point; in fact, he drops it immediately to lecture learnedly on the subjects of fixing and log-rolling.

It is for the reader to decide whether he has read a manual of grafting technique or a masked criticism of the abuses under our economic system.

The Career of a Lovable Eccentric

STRANGE MELODY. By Neil Bell. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Garden City, N. Y.)

ANYONE possessing so romantic and tumultuous a nature as did John MacDermott was bound to find life an exciting adventure. An unexpected scholarship when he was a boy enabled him to become educated and rise above the extreme poverty of his father's house Later, a quarrel with the headmaster of the school where he was a bored and underpaid teacher sent him to London to besiege the literary world. No one expected this dabbler in painting and scribbler of yarns ever to succeed in being anything but an amateur. Indeed, the most foolish escapade of all appeared to be the using of his small store of capital to print a novel which legitimate publishers had refused. Fortunately, John MacDermott was justified in his self-confidence and all others were wrong, for this seeming absurdity opened the door to fame and fortune. From this time on MacDermott mounted from triumph to triumph. Even his sudden and tragic end was a spectacularly fitting finale to a life which ever had been marked by bizarre happenings.

Neil Bell has been fortunate in this choice of a hero for his novel. A man in whose nature sweetness of temper is mingled with a boundless vitality, optimism, and ambition, John MacDermott at once takes command of the book and charms the reader in much the same manner that he did his daughter Shiela who tells this story of her father's life.

The most interesting portion of "Strange Melody," as well as the most skillfully written, is the first half which deals with the struggles of MacDermott before he gained success. The portrayal of his love for his wife and little girl is marked by a tender gaiety and restraint which make all the more poignant the tragedy of the wife's death. Mr. Bell reveals his skill in characterization and story-telling in describing the slum where Shiela and her father then went while he continued to bombard publishers with his work, fiction which he turned out with a magnificent disregard of the demands of the market for which they were intended.

Perhaps the most entertaining bit of all is the relating of how the first novel became famous.

It is a pity that Mr. Bell has not sustained this high level throughout the whole book. He has not lavished as much skill upon the successful author as upon the struggler, and characterization has been sacrificed to a bewildering narrative of adventures dealing with the vagaries of the publishing world, a series of tales which become too technical and lengthy. Nevertheless, the end is impressive and quite in keeping with the dramatic John MacDermott.

Youngest Prize-Winner Issues New Volume

Audrey Wurdemann

By Author of 'Bright Ambush'

SPLENDOUR IN THE GRASS. By Audrey Wurdemann. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

AUDREY WURDEMANN, the youngest writer thus far awarded the Pulitzer Prize, began writing verse during her school days in Seattle. At about the age of 14 some of her poems, which had appeared in a Chicago magazine, attracted the attention of the late George Sterling, distinguished California poet, and through his influence a collection of her verse was published before she was 16 years old.

Shortly afterward, Miss Wurdemann entered the University of Washington, where she continued to write. After being graduated with high honors, she traveled in the Orient. Returning in 1932, she went to New York, met Joseph Auslander, one of the finest poets we have, and they were married the following year. Her second volume, "Bright Ambush", was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for 1934. During the following year a third volume, "The Seven Sins", appeared.

As for her latest volume here listed, doubtless many people, under the spell of her earlier work and her reputation, will read into the collection as a whole more than is there. Others, no less respectful and admiring, are likely to feel that little is added here. Treating a variety of subjects in a variety of forms, with and without rhyme, Miss Wurdemann occasionally achieves lines and brief passages not lacking in the authentic magic of poetry. But in general the work seems the product of a self-conscious desire to write poetry rather than of any profound inner compulsion to reveal a significant vision; and this self-conscious urge seems quite as obvious in the technique as in the substance.

If quotation were not forbidden by the publishers, it would be a pleasure to present here a poem entitled "These" which, more than all but a very few of the pieces in the collection, gives a distinct impression of being the product of insight and a compelling desire to share some vision of truth with others.

Droll Wisdom and the Irish Mood

THE NEED WE HAVE. By A. Hamilton Gibbs. (Little, Brown and Co., Boston.)

HAMILTON GIBBS, of that literarily prolific Gibbs family, has added another sensitive, sincere, idealistic story to his long list. These adjectives crop up with amusing regularity in his cover blurbs, but that does not make them any less appropriate to this latest novel.

To all but the most cynical sophisticate, this Irish story, written in the Irish idiom, in the typically Irish mood of vague melancholy tempered with droll wisdom, will bring imaginative stimulation and simple philosophical satisfaction. A talent for sensitive and perceptive phrasing brings us such descriptions as this: "Bounding and grinning, all three of them, the boy and dogs arrived at the washtub in a splutter of chickens." A touching expression of the pathetic and futile human struggle to get the most out of life is here—"For isn't the pace of life like the rush of a falling star and you reaching out trying to grab it to your breast before it disappears."

When Moira and Jim O'Hara were married they went to live with Jim's mother, as is the custom with Irish peasants. However, the jealous old woman's constant berating of Moira and belittling of her to Jim brings them to that unhappy state where "a wife and her man have not the speech between them, and use only veiled eyes for looking at each other." In a desperate effort to save what might be left of her husband's love and her own self-respect she runs away, for—"There are other needs more important than the physical ones of hunger, thirst, and shelter. There is the self-respect you have—apt to get sadly battered and dog-eared when the pressure never lets up on you. There is the vision—that should always be as bright and clear as a rainbow, but which gets cloudy and dim and recedes farther and farther, and, you with no love in your heart. And more than all there is the divine spark—that in you which makes you see beyond your ears and feel, not with your senses at all, but with the inner vibration for which there is no accounting, neither by the churchmen who believe they have plumbed the hereafter, nor by the men of science who circumscribe space and delicately divide atoms into their component parts."

Told in simply dramatic, breathlessly running words, the story of Moira's flight and her husband's groping indecision before he comes for her, is as exciting as any tale of doing and daring.

He Would Arise And Go to Art

LOST MORNING. By Du Bose Heyward. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

FELIX HOLLISTER was an artist. He might have been a great artist if it hadn't been for Miriam. Miriam was his wife, also his manager, for she was that kind of a wife. Left to himself Felix would have been a dreamy fellow who would let you steal his shirt. Miriam let him dream, up to a point, but she kept an eye on the shirt. Her idea of art was something that could be sold at a fat profit. Etchings, for instance, dozens of which could be printed from the same plate and sold to customers who, like as not, did not know what an etching was and who, in extreme cases, supposed that etching resulted from the bite of an insect.

So Felix, managed by Miriam, became an etcher and Miriam went into the etching business in a big way. The Hollister etching factory at the Carolina town of Exeter became rather famous, and the Hollisters prospered. Felix was, in a way of speaking, a success, but he wasn't happy. For he was an artist.

When, however, Manager Miriam got the big idea of selling Hollister etchings for cigarette advertisements, Felix blew up. That was too much. Next it would be postcards and maybe movie shorts. Felix Hollister came to himself. He would arise and return to his Art. Miriam could go on running the factory with the plates that were on hand, and good luck to her; but from now on Felix Hollister would be true to himself and to the spark that he had not entirely lost.

In his own strength Felix Hollister could not have taken a stand like that, for Miriam was stronger than he and had managed him too long. Hollister, if he was to keep at least his undershirt, had to be managed. So, of course, there was another woman. Her name was Leslie. She was his assistant in the etching factory, but her heart was not in it. She had despised him for selling out and then she had pitied him and finished up by loving him. Felix, without exactly knowing it, was getting a new manager. He liked Leslie because she understood him, but he did not exactly love her. Not at first, anyway. Leslie had to manage that. She managed it very well. So well, in fact, that Felix, lacking the fortitude of a St. Anthony, succumbed. By such a managerial coup Leslie became the "beautiful influence" that Felix needed to free him from Miriam's management, and he was all set for his come-back to Art. Then something happened that upset everything. Not exactly everything either. Leslie had given him the push that he needed, and he kept on, chucking Miriam and all her works, sustained by the faith that Leslie had had in him.

It is just as well, perhaps, that Du Bose Heyward leaves off right there, with Felix plunging into the modeling of the Leslie who had faith in him. Knowing Miriam as we have come to know her, it is a little difficult to imagine her letting it go at that. She is already, with Felix barely established in a New York studio, taking steps, sending their daughter to look him up and see if he has come to his senses, assuring him that everything has been attended to in Exeter, meaning particularly that the Leslie affair has been efficiently hushed up, and inquiring when he will be ready to come home. For marriage, as Miriam elucidates, is an all-round partnership, children, the home, business. You don't junk a corporation just because there is a breakdown in one department. You patch it up and you keep on doing business. It is the same way with marriage. She considers her marriage a success. Felix has a certain gift—so has she. They supplement each other. They're a going concern with a future.

It is all very nice to see Felix at the end of the story, back with his beloved Art, but he'd better watch out; for Miriam still lives.

Indicts Society In Symbolic Romance

J. B. Priestley

Views Our World With Genial Irony

THEY WALK IN THE CITY. By J. B. Priestley. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

"THEY" are two young lovers, innocent, helpless, penniless, caught, as the author says, "in the machinery of our wretched civilization" and as such are symbolic of the thousands who walk in the great cities of the Western World. Their adventures give Mr. Priestley an opportunity to comment, with genial irony, on the hypocrisy of our society, the insanity of political violence, the conflicts of class and the vulgarity of the public taste.

Fortunately for the story, this symbolism has not excluded individuality in the lovers, and the allegory is left in the lurch when their adventures become exciting. Rose Salter of Haliford, beautiful and simple but of a certain sturdy worth, piqued by the failure of her admirer, Edward Fielding, also simple, to keep an engagement, runs off to London to work in a cafe, and Edward, whose failure was due to accidental incarceration in a bathroom (a hideous English one described with the morbid genius of the English for plumbing portrayal) follows her there. Their reunion is not immediate, however, for Rose is fired from her cafe, and after they finally do meet they are continually being separated. Rose takes the blame for a department store theft by a girl with a dying brother, is injured in a Communist riot and held prisoner by a lady with a smooth face but experienced eyes. Then, as if society had not already sufficiently entangled her, it rolls a murdered man in her path, where he may still be, for all we know, because that's where the book ends.

This non-conclusion, representing a return to the symbolical and implying, presumably, that the difficulties of the young are infinite, is decidedly hard on the reader, who, having finally been roused in the last hundred pages from a purely cerebral to an emotional appreciation, is forced to accept what may be an artistic, but is most certainly an unsatisfactory, termination to a love story. The only consolation is that the end comes last and so can't spoil until afterwards the reader's enjoyment of the appealing, honestly drawn characters and the quicker passages of this jog-trotting novel.

How the Masses of the World Live

TWO WORLDS. By Lester Cohen. (Covici-Friede, New York.)

THE very tall, thin trees that fence the twilight at Havre; the lights and stores, hotels and theaters, eaters and drinkers of the Strand; Lenin's red granite tomb against the whitewashed Kremlin wall, soldiers on guard, night and day, with fixed bayonets; the Sphinx, looking less handsome than it does in the advertising art; sultry, tawdry, vicious, decayed Port Said; Shanghai's Bund along the waterfront and the gunboats of many nations—these sights and hundreds of other travelogue views are in Lester Cohen's book.

And yet in no sense is "Two Worlds" an ordinary report on a tour across Europe and Asia. The lunch the author of "Sweepings" and his wife, Eden, had from barrels in the musty delicatessens of old Rouen and the rain on the monsoon sea out of Ceylon are the incidents. The episodes are the demonstrations of the Popular Front in Paris, the executions in China, and the intimate relations with life as the author found it on every hand. Train companions, porters, strangers in parks, taxi drivers, a British army officer, a Hong Kong factory owner and countless others live through the good reporter Mr. Cohen is.

The two worlds he saw were the worlds of Capitalism and Communism. "The more we thought it over," he writes, "and the more we talked to people, the more we felt that the old lines were down, nations, peoples, philosophies, religions—all these were being geared one way or the other—it was as a man thinketh that made the difference—and some men thought to produce what was necessary, and distribute it amongst those who produced—and in all the world we had met no one man, but what he felt one way or the other—and we came to feel that all of us, in this time, were people of the two worlds."

The author's pace and style change frequently. Part of the time he is poetic. Other times he is deliberately anything but poetic. This unevenness goes with the assignment, for it is certainly not an even world that is passing before his eyes. It would be unfair to discuss the book in terms of such a work as Vincent Sheean's "Personal History," since the authors had different purposes. Lester Cohen's purpose was to find out how the masses of the world live. His book fulfills that purpose.

Told With Grace, Good for Chuckles

YOUNG LOVE. By John Erskine. (Bo Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

IF, from its title, one thinks th book treats of warm, young an let us say, robust love, and there fore lays it aside until a cooler d let the reviewer reassure him. is really light reading, and c enough. There are 15 short stor in the volume. Only the title st has a name. The rest are simp "variations on a theme," and t variations are not too marked.

A better title for the book seems, would have been "How Love—And Keep Cool; a Guide f the Young." Even the tempestu Don Juan, in Variation IV, is c as a cucumber. The young fell acts like a middle-aged lover. O wonders if he is ill. Of course, has been around.

Then there is the preposter tale, in Variation III, of the deli ful couple dwelling in unwedd bliss whose best friend sells th the idea of marriage. They beg with a justice of the peace a twice repeat the process in beauti European churches. It's a goo thing they learned of no more allu ing temples, or they might hav wasted a lot of time just goin about the world marrying eac other. Verily, here is vengeance— and a laugh.

The story of Priscilla Mullens, John Alden and Miles Standish re veals with what a gentle, iron hand Priscilla ruled her men. It seems the most satisfying tale in the book.

The story with the most explosive possibilities, that of the poetess whose mere husband eloped with a red-headed woman, demonstrates with what decorum one may participate in such a triangle and never ruffle a lock of one's head.

In Variation XIII, Pocahontas is the bland recipient of the innuendoes usually heaped upon the gleaming black head of that gorgeous copper siren. And yet, who will say that she wasn't the wisest woman in all Virginia? This tale has humor.

Says the jacket blurb: "Involved in no matter what other desires and impulses, moods or qualities mean or noble, love with its eager face may come to you now or in memory, you are likely to find in the range of this volume something that, quite pointedly, meets your case. The prudent doctor does not venture to prescribe. He detects and illumines the symptoms for you, or he presents and clears the dilemma." John Erskine, Doctor of Love! Well, perhaps.

These tales are narrated with grace and genuine wit, and are good for some chuckles. Just don't expect too much for the price.

Brilliant Short Novel

NO LETTERS FOR THE DEAD. By Gail Wilhelm. (Random House, New York.)

IN "No Letters for the Dead," Gail Wilhelm, author of "We Are Too Drifting," brings us another example of her mastery of a brilliantly concentrated short novel. The book can be read at one sitting, and it will take considerable restraint to lay it aside before it is finished.

This is not a morbid tale, as the title might suggest. It is the story of the great love of a woman and the strange circumstances into which she drifts.

Paula Strindler comes to Los Angeles to be near Koni Tillada, who, because of uncontrollable circumstances, is serving a term in San Quentin prison. Although Paula is a talented pianist and has considerable experience as a typist, she is unable to secure work. Her money is soon gone and she finds herself alone and without sustenance in a strange city. At last, in desperation, she drifts into prostitution.

In her letters to Koni she writes of a world of make-believe and pours out her love to him. In this way she keeps her spiritual integrity and the courage to go on living.

The book is written in a clear and effective style. Miss Wilhelm keeps the situations from becoming coarse by the same sense of delicacy with which she handled "We Are Too Drifting." It is with extraordinary understanding that she portrays the heart of a woman. If at times Paula may seem incredible, the book is worth while, nevertheless, if only as a piece of fine writing.

MURDER IN THIN AIR. A New Doctor Hailey Mystery by Anthony Wynne. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

CHRONIC readers of detective novels need not fear that the bloody tragedy of Spain, the growing antagonism between Germany and Russia, and their implications, will effect this year's crop of corpses found in dens, libraries, and deserted mews. Whimsical English sleuths, hard-boiled newspaper reporters, erudite doctors, twanging New Englanders will continue their adroit leaping of hurdles in ultimately successful pursuits of murderers.

There are definite indications that the detective novel will continue its ever increasing literary excellence. There has not yet appeared another Dorothy Sayer's "Gaudy Night," but the average competence in the matter of style and character analysis is much higher than it was, say, five years ago. A new Perry Mason story, "The Case of the Stuttering Bishop," an Asey Mayo adventure, "Out of Order," and Dr. Thorndyke's activities in "The Penrose Mystery," will more than fulfill the expectations of many a fan who has followed these detectives through numerous exciting investigations. Asey Mayo leaves Cape Cod but solves with his characteristic shrewdness and modesty a crime occurring in a town entertainly named Blight.

The effect of the G-men on detective writing has taken a curious development. J. Edgar Hoover's constant emphasis on the relation between crime and corrupt politics, and the racketeering in the parole system, have resulted in a fairly new type of adventure story. Private individuals, disgusted with the law enforcement agencies, become "Vigilantes" and declare their own warfare on the underworld. Ten or 15 deaths in the course of one novel are considered, by the author, no more than a good day's workout. "Mr. Strang" is a thriller of that type and a pretty good one, too. "The Falcon's Prey" contains a rapidly moving group of adventures, but, unfortunately, it has too many improbable escapes and hoaxes.

"The Communist's Corpse" gives a strictly 1920 description of Communists, with long hair, sloppy dress, and a sense of bitter insufficiency. "Murder in Thin Air" revolves about a world-wide Communist plot of Dr. Fu Manchu dimensions. However, these books are probably exceptions to the detective novel's usual rule of individual crimes of passion or crimes for gain. Readers may feel reasonably safe from stories motivated by economic or social theories. Detective novels afford an escape from mundane existence and a challenge to ingenuity. They are likely to be more successful when they avoid reminding the reader of that afternoon's newspaper headlines.

The risque, hard-talking novels of crime fathered by Dashiell Hammet are still in the minority. Maiden aunts who have a penchant for a good clean murder, committed because of good, clean motives, such as revenge, change in wills, theft, etc., uncomplicated by sex, may be given almost any of the new mystery novels with confidence. The number of detective stories which will be listed on the roster of Great American Masterpieces by the Boston Censorship Board will probably be small.

And the best news of all! Authors are playing fairer with their readers. There are fewer and fewer red herrings dragged across the trail, and may they ever diminish!

Apparently Still True

CROWDED HOUSE. By Katharine Ball Ripley. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

MAMA and Papa Robb had six children. These, with shortsighted earnestness, they reared according to their narrow and somewhat vague idea of what was proper for a "gentleman's family." "Crowded House" is the story of these children—especially of the four girls—of their resentment against family restrictions, of their selfish struggles, and of their indifferent success. Seldom do the piercing realities break through their tiresomely conventional lives, and then only in the least beautiful forms.

The first little sister goes to New York, after marrying the only available man to escape family imposition. The second little sister stays home and spends three times what her father can afford on being "popular." The third little sister wins a scholarship to Vassar and forthwith becomes a scrawny, yet "successful," old maid. The fourth little sister—could it possibly be otherwise—gives up her own true love because, alas, his mother runs a German bakery. Apparently it's still true—what they say about Dixie!

A dull, humorless family, the Robbs are, nevertheless, annoyingly true to life, and Mrs. Ripley, who writes rather well, can expect her book to find an honorable place in the photographic "Main Street" type of fiction.

Last of the Manchu Monarchs

THE LAST EMPRESS. By Daniele Vare. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Garden City, N. Y.)

THE story of the Empress Tzu-hsi, popularly known as Old Buddha, is that of China's transition from the old to the new. Tzu-hsi, last of the Manchu autocrats who occupied the throne from the middle of the seventeenth century to the early twentieth, represented the reactionary spirit. She it was who was responsible for the difficulties encountered by foreign diplomats and agents and for the exiling of Chinese reformers, notably Sun-yat-sen. Her country in the end suffered. The foreign "barbarians" finally entered China with the help of their armies, destroyed or stole many of the treasures of the ancient kingdom; and were destined to stay. Tzu-hsi was also partly responsible, through stubborn short-sightedness and extravagance, for the defeat of China in the Sino-Japanese war of the nineties, when Japan acquired Korea.

In spite of her mistakes, Tzu-hsi was considered wise. Her wisdom consisted in a clear understanding as to how to conduct the internal affairs of China and in a marked ability to control the people of the court, either through diplomacy or through a judicious display of autocratic power. It was her wisdom and her extreme beauty that raised her from the position of a minor concubine of the Emperor Hsien-feng in 1852, to chief concubine. The Empress, Tzu-an, came to be designated as Empress of the Eastern Palace, and Tzu-hsi as Empress of the Western Palace.

It was as Empress of the Western Palace that Tzu-hsi ruled three times as regent: first, during the minority of her son, Tung-chih, 1861 to 1872; second, during the minority of her nephew, Kuang-hsu, 1872 to 1889; third, during the imprisonment of Kuang-hsu, 1899 to 1908, and the minority of her grand-nephew, Pu-yi, 1908 to 1909. Pu-yi, known as the boy-emperor, was dethroned in 1912. Today he is ruler of Manchukuo, acting as a puppet of Japan.

Aside from her picturesquesness, her womanliness, and her unquestioned magnetism and charm, Tzu-hsi was not an admirable character if judged by Western standards. She was unscrupulous, ruthless and cruel. In addition to ordering the execution of scores of individuals who stood in her way, she is generally accounted responsible for the deaths of her son, her daughter-in-law, and the Empress of the Eastern Palace. Because of the secrecy surrounding Chinese rulers and their courts, it is difficult to ascertain the facts of these cases. She did imprison the reform Emperor, Kuang-hsu, and, it is believed, was slowly murdering him. The foreign diplomats, however, said he must not die, and the Emperor quickly recovered from his mysterious illness.

Tzu-hsi must, however, be judged by Eastern standards. In arranging for the impotence of certain people, she was only following the custom of her predecessors on the throne. The Chinese are not noted for sentimentality or concern over an individual life, whether one's own or another's.

Signore Vare, in writing the story of Tzu-hsi, has given a vivid picture of old China. He discusses court dress, the unique position of eunuchs, imperial audiences, ancestor worship, the use of suicide in political life, the seclusion of the Chinese ruler, and life in the Forbidden City, home of the imperial wives and concubines. His account of the Boxer Rebellion and its aftermath is detailed and graphic.

Although Signor Vare usually writes in Italian, "The Last Empress" was written in English.

Pleasant Small Talk

PEOPLE, PEOPLE EVERYWHERE. By R. H. (Bob) Davis. (Frederick A Stokes Co., New York.)

ONE is tempted to crib a wisecrack and say that R. H. Davis—who parenthesizes his name with a "Bob" to distinguish himself from the once celebrated Richard Harding Davis—is in his anecdotage; for "People, People Everywhere" is another of his volumes of small talk about odds and ends and people encountered in a wandering but busy life. His many friends attest his capacity for friendship, his books support their reports. The books have no continuity, no theme; the only common denominator is what a city editor would call "human interest." The newest of the series includes a rewrite job of the Flora MacDonald story of Scotland—she helped Bonnie Prince Charlie escape the redcoats; choice recipes; a smattering of ghost stories; interviews with the great, near-great and the lowly; travel sketches—all very readable and pleasant and forgettable, something like an evening's conversation.

THE STORY OF THE GEMS. By Herbert P. Whitlock. (Lee Furman, New York.)

THE author is curator of minerals and gems at the American Museum of Natural History and for many years has been custodian of the world-famous Morgan collection of gems. Here he offers a wealth of information regarding precious, semi-precious and ornamental stones, telling where they are found, how they are identified, by what methods and in what forms they are cut, discussing their ancient and modern uses, their rarity, color, variations, and the bases of their value. The volume is illustrated with a color plate and many half tones, showing gems in the Morgan collection, and contains a descriptive table, bibliography, and an index.

Indictment of New Deal Policies Which Bar Association Tabled

the Federal Government and the states, which is the basis of most of these important judgments against New Deal legislation, is hardly the problem to which the resolution of the Bar Association refers. It is true that the citizen is individually interested whether the laws which affect him are made by the Federal Congress or by the Legislature of his home state. That interest should become lively when the expansion of the Federal power threatens the continuance of real local government. His interest, however, is as one of the great body of citizens. His constitutional rights which this committee should consider are more personal. They define the relationship of government and citizens. That relationship is unique.

"The study of the constitutional rights of the individual citizen is fruitless and those rights themselves are unreal if he can appeal to no power to protect him in them. The basic constitutional right of the citizen is, therefore, the right to demand the protection of the courts against any legislative or administrative action which infringes the constitutional guaranties. Then only do those guaranties become vital.

"This has been the function of our courts from the beginning of our national life and it is the distinguishing feature of the American constitutional system. How unique is this policy was again emphasized by the surprised European comment when our Supreme Court upset so important a national experiment as the NRA.

Challenges American System.

"In recent years there has developed a school of thought among students of public affairs which challenges the American system. Inquiries directed by the committee to the deans of the law schools of the country brought responses showing a growing belief that the courts cannot continue to act as a buffer between the citizen and the Legislature in this age when extended Government intervention is inevitable. Many believed that the courts had already abdicated their function to such an extent that no one could assert with confidence that the American citizen today has any clear right which he can maintain against the legislative decree.

"These doubts have been emphatically dispelled by the Supreme Court of the United States. In unanimous decisions it has protected the citizen in his assertion of constitutional right against legislative enactment and has settled all questions both as to its willingness to continue that function and as to its own confidence in the ability to do so without imperiling its integrity.

"Perhaps equally important as the decisions themselves was the public reaction to them. It has been shown that those persons were mistaken who feared that the court would be destroyed if it undertook to thwart Congressional action. In one respect only is the public attitude disturbing. Too many citizens are misled by the criticism of divided opinions of the court. They do not realize that if we adopted some policy of requiring more than a majority of the court to invalidate a statute we would only be substituting a policy under which a minority of the justices could set aside a constitutional provision. The Constitution would no longer be the supreme law of the land.

"Great as has been its disappointment, the administration has acquiesced in the rules declared by the court to the extent of adjusting some of its policies and legislation. It must be hoped that it will go much further in that direction. One of the most disturbing features of administration policy in its first year was the studied effort to close to the citizen all opportunity to secure the declaration and vindication of his constitutional rights. This inclination is still being exhibited both in legislative proposals and in administrative action.

Need for Congress to Consider.

"There is no indication that the administration recognizes any obligation whatever to protect the individual citizen in his constitutional rights. For a time there was an unwillingness to expedite rather than to impede the cause of the citizen with money and courage enough to withstand official pressure and to ask the courts to determine his right. Professed regard for the Constitution and purpose to conform thereto were belied by attempts to forestall judgment of the constitutionality of radically new policies which, in the meantime, were aggressively enforced against citizens few of whom had any chance to do otherwise than to submit.

"The re-affirmation by the Supreme Court of its willingness and capacity to apply the Constitution to legislation does not by any means remove the necessity for the development of a higher sense of congressional responsibility. One who would preserve our constitutional system must deplore the action of President Roosevelt in recommending that members of Congress set aside any doubts they might have about the validity of proposed legislation. If, in this way, an increasing burden is cast upon the court our traditional policy is bound to collapse.

"Seldom in recent years has the course of legislation been interrupted by any serious debate in either of the Houses of Congress of the constitutional validity of proposed laws. Always the attitude has been that the courts would upset the legislation if it violated the Constitution and therefore there was no need for Congress to worry about that troublesome question. This denial of a share in the responsibility for preserving the frame-work of our constitutional system has been matched by a willingness to abdicate responsibility for substantive legislation itself and to delegate to the President this fundamental duty of Congress. The Supreme Court has been unable to place important limitations upon this practice. Not even the court can compel Congressmen and Senators to develop a responsibility to recognize and protect the Constitution.

Rights Personal to the Citizen.

"Among those constitutional guaranties of rights which are personal to the citizen and therefore fall within the scope of the injury ordered by the association are those which assure freedom of religion, of speech, of the press, of assembly and of petition. Excepting the guaranty of religious freedom, these establish the constitutional basis of political democracy and accordingly must be placed first in any study of specific constitutional rights.

"The Federal Constitution gives no direct, affirmative protection to the electoral franchise. The qualifications of suffrage are established in the state Constitutions and the national charter, in the matter of these qualifications, merely prohibits discrimination on the basis of color or sex.

"But political freedom requires protection of the citizen in activities more extended than the mere casting of his vote. Those advocating unorthodox national policies must be as free as the supporters of the regime to proclaim their views by speech and press, to meet with those of similar temper, to organize parties for political action and to present their proposals to public officials. Where it has been desired, in the dictatorships of modern Europe, to regiment public opinion these activities by citizens have been proscribed and thereby political democracy has been destroyed even while universal suffrage continues. The constitutional guaranties here under discussion are designed for the very purpose of preserving true political freedom in America.

Denounces Dictatorship Talk.

"The careless assertion that the policies and practices of the present national administration either challenge or infringe these political rights of the citizen has no justification. The wide delegation of power to the President beginning in March, 1933, is most frequently pointed to as an invasion of these constitutional guarantees and as the substitution of some kind of dictatorship for political democracy.

"This is a distorted view. Neither Congress nor the President considered this delegation of power as the end or as a limitation of our normal political processes. At no time did anyone suggest that Congress had lost its power to withdraw these extraordinary powers. No one believed in November, 1934, that the congressional election was a sham battle in the sense that the Congress then being elected could actually have no power to control national policies. No one asserts that the campaign of 1936 is futile because the people have been stripped of any part of their political power.

"The constitutional guaranties against ex-post facto laws, bills of attainder, unwarrantable search and seizure, double jeopardy and self incrimination and those requiring trial by jury, confrontation with witnesses and the collateral provisions relate to the methods by which society enforces its control of the citizen. Several important decisions of the Supreme Court during the prohibition era established these constitutional immunities upon a basis more assured than ever.

"We have commented upon the failure of our Government officials to recognize their duty to facilitate rather than to impede the effort of the citizen to secure the protection of the courts against the misuse of official power. In this respect it may be said that recent policies infringe this group of constitutional guaranties. On the other hand, isolated instances of the invasions of the rights of the individual by congressional committees and by Government bureaus are neither recent in origin nor the exemplification of any general policy.

Delegation of Power.

"But the interest of the citizen in the process of the making and enforcing of the social demand upon him extends to the matter of who is to make the law. This, the Constitution says, must be done by the legislative body. This limitation has been violated repeatedly in recent legislation by the delegation of legislative power to a horde of administrative officials whose processes of lawmaking have developed so many abuses that even the proponents of the general system of industrial control developed in the NRA felt relief when it was brought to a halt by the decisions of the Supreme Court in United States vs. Schechter.

"Our experiences with bureaucracy as exhibited in its most complete form in the NRA should be a lesson to be applied constantly as the inevitable proposals for various Government controls of the citizen come before Congress. They give abundant support to the opinion that Americans are peculiarly susceptible to the temptation to misuse official authority over which there is no adequate control. Inasmuch as this subject has been thoroughly studied by the Committee on Administrative Law, whose reports are commended to the attention of the members of the Association, our further comment is limited to a description of a single episode which illustrates the vices of this kind of bureaucracy.

Case of Idaho Baker.

"A baker in an Idaho village was told that an NRA code and the regulations thereunder would be violated if he did not increase the price of hs bread 1 cent per loaf, and he was threatened with prosecution if he failed to conform. He interested Senator Borah in the matter and the latter, after some study, advised the baker that he did not believe the order could be enforced, and he indirectly encouraged non-compliance therewith.

"After much newspaper publicity, in which there was considerable speculation whether the recovery administration would accept the challenge, it was announced from Washington that it was all a tempest in a teapot because those who had made the order had no authority to fix prices.

"There was a disposition in the recovery administration offices to look upon this as a good joke upon the Senator. Actually it demonstrated in striking fashion the inherent defects and dangers of this system of administrative orders. The men who made the order did not know they were without authority; the newspaper observers did not know it; an interested and capable Senator did not know it; and for several days the code authorities at Washington did not know it. Most important of all, the insignificant baker who was threatened with criminal prosecution by the Government of the United States not only did not know it, but never had a chance to know it. Here, in aggravated form, is government by men and not by law.

Control vs. Regulation.

"Among the important policies of the present administration those which have attracted the keenest interest of students and public alike have been the experiments in industrial control embodied in the NRA. The idea still lives. Following the decsion of the Supreme Court against the validity of the codes, a special statute was enacted to establish a similar control of the coal industry, which now has met the same fate. Broader plans of this character, it is frequently announced, will be presented to the next Congress. Although no enforceable legislation is at present carrying forward this policy, it has not been abandoned and must be considered in this report.

"Government control of industry, as distinguished from regulation, involves a distinct reversal of that theory of freedom of enterprise which has been an important characteristic of the American economic system and which all economists, whatever may be their own economic philosophy, identify as the feature of our capitalistic or competitive system which distihguishes it from others.

"In a system of free enterprise each citizen may enter such lawful business as he chooses, and in pursuing that business may select his own workers and determine his wage scales, his product, the volume of output, where he will sell it and at what price. American experience has led to many limitations upon this complete freedom of the businessman to determine his policies; but until the creation of the NRA it was true that the citizen had the right to engage at will in any manufacturing or distributing business and make his own decisions as to the volume and type of product and the place and price of sale.

"This right was seriously limited by the codes adopted under the NRA, which, upon approval by the President, were intended to have the force of law. In addition to determinng hours, wages and other conditions of employment, which was the principal purpose of the administration, these codes regulated such matters of business management as character and volume of output, prices and methods of competition and in numerous instances denied the right of the citizen to enlarge his plant or to enter a business without the approval of some official."

Criticism of NRA.

At this point, the majority report reviewed the procedure of NRA and pointed out certain of its functional and constitutional shortcomings. The real enforcement of the codes established for each of the 550 industries fell to "unrestrained local groups"—the local code authorities—over which the central official body, the NRA itself, had little control, the report said.

Describing the local code authorities as "small bodies of men actively engaged in business and therefore active competitors of those whose business practices they undertook to regulate, the report found the result was "exactly that kind of experience which has induced our society to try to prevent citizens from acting in any official capacity in any matter in which they are personally and financially interested."

With approval, the report quoted a recent observation of Justice Sutherland to the effect that "one person may not be entrusted with the power to regulate the business of another, and especially of a competitor. And a statute which attempts to confer such power, undertakes an intolerable and unconstitutonal interference with personal liberty and private property."

The report sharply criticised NRA's "expanding bureaucracy of inspectors and auditors," its levying of taxes "without the slightest warrant of law," and its threat of "fines" to secure compliance—"a practice which falls within the common law definition of blackmail." Also condemned was the attempt of NRA "to deny to the unfortunate business man every legal right with respect to the basic controversy by asserting that the courts could not control its discretion with respect to the use of the symbol of the Blue Eagle."

Injustices Under Codes.

The report then continued:

"Where legal proceedings for enforcement were instituted the practice immediately developed into that same sort of selective justice which exists whenever ordinary acts which everyone is doing are suddenly converted into crimes. The effort to enforce the prohibition laws against buyers and drinkers had to be abandoned because it was impossible to prosecute the whole body of citizens individually and it was clearly unjust to select, at random or in any other way, a few culprits and prosecute them as examples.

"This, however, is precisely what NRA enforcement became. The number of code violators was legion. The actions of the tiny number who could be haled into court in formal legal proceedings differed in no substantial manner from the actions of the multitude who were undisturbed. The very care used in repeated consideration of complaint charges by a series of reviewing officials before legal action was actually begun, only insured this result by making the legal process the more cumbersome.

"The National Industrial Recovery Act was described by its chief legislative sponsor, Senator Wagner, as the first step in economic planning. These were the experiences of American businessmen in the first national adventure of that character and they should be remembered if the business leaders of the country are again tempted to give their support to some similar scheme for softening the rigors of competition.

"For it must be noted that these industrial control features of the recovery act were not the product of the brain trust nor the plan of the administration. The aim of the administration was to head off the dangerous measure to limit labor in interstate industry to 30 hours per week, which had already passed the Senate, by substituting a more conservative and elastic measure for the regulation of labor conditions in single industries. Some of the most distinguished business leaders of the nation projected into this administration plan the additional proposal to permit business to 'stabilize' itself by suspending the anti-trust laws with respect to agreements made under codes of fair competition.

Quotes Tugwell's Views.

"We have the word of one of the leading American proponents of a planned economy, Prof. R. G. Tugwell, that any such compromise between individual business management and central governmental control is suicidal. In an important address before a professional audience in December, 1931, Prof. Tugwell declared that even the establishment of a national economic council with only advisory powers would be a momentous step beyond the expectation of the United States Chamber of Commerce and other business groups which were then advocating the creation of such a board.

"'The day on which it comes into existence will be a dangerous one for business,'" he said. "There may be a long and lingering death but it must be regarded as inevitable.'"

"The threat in economic planning is not limited to private business enterprise. Our political institutions would themselves collapse. Prof. Tugwell says we will seem almost to be dispensing with civilization itself, the changes will be so far-reaching. The most important result would be the destruction of political democracy. It is bound to disappear as it has disappeared in every country which has advanced far along the policy of an authoritarian economic system. No government which is subject to the impact of political pressures applied by groups with conflicting interests can plan; it can only compromise.

Economic Planning.

"If there is to be successful economic planning, the planners must be free from such pressures. This situation cannot be attained so long as the individual citizen possesses that political freedom which would permit him to join with his interested fellows in attempting to influence the government in their favor in making those decisions which will then be the most important actions of government.

"If these be the consequences, ultimately destructive of our political and industrial institutions, of such experiments in industrial control as were initiated in the NRA and are again in prospect, what may be said as to their constitutionality? The emphatic condemnation by the Supreme Court of the broad delegation of power which would ordinarily be involved in such a plan is a fairly effective bar, but in many important industries this obstacle may be surmounted by carefully drawn legislation. At the moment such Federal legislation is also blocked by the refusal of a majority of the court to extend the Federal jurisdiction to local manufacturing, but this majority is precarious.

"The important question is whether the due process provisions in the fifth and fourteenth amendments protect the freedom of enterprise of the citizen which is anathema to the economic planners. May the State legislatures or the Federal Congress, in its proper field, deny the right of the citizen to enter an industry and to make his own decisions as to the volume of his output, the price at which he will sell, and the fair competitive methods he will use?

"Here where the most important of all proposed changes in the relationship of government and citizen is involved we find only uncertainty as to the scope of the Constitution. It was not always so."

Old Guides Destroyed.

Here the report said that prior to 1933 it was the confident belief of lawyers and political scientists that constitutional rules under the fourteenth amendment were thoroughly established which would "prevent the states from controlling the business man in this manner and that the same effect would be given to the fifth amendment with respect to congressional legislation." Citing the so-called granger decisions of the Supreme Court in 1877, headed by that in Munn vs. Illinois, as the authority for price-fixing by government, the report said that subsequent actions by the Court limit this power.

The decision in the New York milk case in 1933 upholding the conviction of a grocer who sold a bottle of milk at a price lower (through giving a bonus in merchandise) than that fixed under the authority of a New York State law, was then characterized as a decision which would in all probability have to be qualified and limited in future decisions, just as the power, seemingly approved in Munn vs. Illinois, was qualified and limited in later decisions.

"Whatever may be the course of the Court in the future, however, no student may now be confident in defining the constitutional limitations upon the control of business enterprise by the states," the report said. "The old guides have been destroyed or displaced; the new ones have not appeared."

The report then continued:

"The history of America has been that of an enterprising people exploiting more successfully than any other the opportunities of economic freedom under the protection of constitutional guaranties. In the moment of the first serious assault by Government upon that freedom those guaranties have lost their vitality. Perhaps they have disappeared. If so, there is no insurmountable obstacle to the effort of a majority to commit the country to a precarious adventure in a planned economy.

Tax vs. Revenue Raising.

"It is increasingly clear that many of the constitutional guaranties, however potent they may appear to tbe in barring direct legislative invasion of rights of the citizen, fade away before a determined attack by a Congress which is unconcerned with the maintenance of our traditional institutions. Through the sophisticated exercise of the power to tax and of the power to spend public funds, it is possible for the national Government to engage in activities and to accomplish ends which are quite inconsistent with those institutions.

"In its recent decisions, which were themselves made over vigorous dissents which may easily become the view of a court with changed membership, the Supreme Court has gone as far as may be expected of it in placing limitations upon these two powers. If the tax is directly connected with the excursion into a field beyond the Federal jurisdiction the whole plan may be challenged in judicial proceedings; the tax is a direct burden upon the citizen and he has a standing in court which may look to the purpose of the congressional program.

"But if the tax is levied separately, in the guise of a simple revenue-raising measure, it is beyond attack; and a contemporaneous program for the expenditure of the funds thus raised, even in an activity which cannot be justified under the Constitution, is probably beyond judicial review because the individual citizen can seldom show any legal interest.

Extra-Constitutional Power.

"The wide range of extra-constitutional power which may be seized by Congress in this way cannot be over-emphasized. Its willingness to grasp that power has been clearly shown. The admonitions of the Supreme Court in the gold cases concerning the course dictated by national honor fell upon deaf ears; Congress hurried to enact legislation to plug every opening through which an attack could be launched upon the policy thus stigmatized.

"The solemn declaration by the Court that the Federal Government had no authority to control the production of agricultural crops was followed by the immediate enactment of substitute legislation to accomplish exactly that purpose by the use of Federal funds to be raised by a general revenue measure rather than by a tax directly connected with the control measure itself.

"When the political dictatorship of Soviet Russian decided to 'liquidate' the private business enterprise which had grown up under the New Economic Policy, one of its most effective methods was to open state shops alongside those privately operated and by simple competition crush the latter. Another was to impose ruinous taxation upon the private concerns. In a short time, private enterprise was eliminated and all business was socialized.

Federal Power Projects.

"No such program for America has been proposed by responsible officials, but through similar means a long step has been taken toward a radically different relationship of Government and citizen. Numerous Federal power projects are under construction which are designed to displace existing private enterprises or to impose upon them a control which the Federal Government has no power to impose directly and which would violate the constitutional guaranties if imposed by the States.

"Through grants-in-aid, eagerly sought by the States which are as careless of their status as is Congress, the Federal Government has gained a powerful voice in such purely local matters as highway construction and maintenance, education, and social legislation. The taxing power, it is now proposed, shall be used to enforce policies of corporate fiscal management which violate all business experience and which are no concern of the Federal Government under any power granted by the Constitution.

Only People Can Save Constitution.

"This tendency of Congress is not new; this expansion of Federal control and limitaton of the control of local affairs by the states themselves has been under way for many years. But the increased tempo of the movement now exhibited gives renewed emphasis of the need, if our constitutional system is to be preserved, of a more eager regard for that system by Congress itself. Only if the preservation of our American institutions is the earnest desire of the people themselves, can the courts give their assistance by blocking occasional legislative violations of the constitutional guaranties.

"If the people become indifferent and exhibit that indifference by the election of a national Government which seeks ways, not to observe, but to avoid limitations of the Constitution, these limitations will vanish. No court can then preserve the Constitution which the people themselves have deserted."

Minority Report.

The minority report, proposing the discharge of the committee and "no further study," was as follows:

"In 1934, at the time the resolution was passed to provide for the creation of this committee to study the effect of recent developments in national legislation and governmental policies as affecting the constitutional rights and liberties of American citizens, the constitutionality of little, if any of said legislation, had been passed upon by the court.

"Since said time the major portion of said legislation has come before the Supreme Court of the United States and the constitutional features thereof carefully reviewed and passed upon and the effects of said legislation upon the constitutional rights and liberties of the citizens has been carefully set forth in the many opinions of the Judges of said court, and the text of said opinions (both majority and minority opinions) have been published in full and given very wide circulation by most of the metropolitan press of the country.

"We are of the opinion that any further study of said questions by this committee would serve no useful purpose in giving the citizens any helpful light on said constitutional questions in addition to that already supplied by the opinions of the able jurists composing the Supreme Court of the United States, but would in the opinion of your committee (due to the fact that this is the year of a presidential election) result only in embroiling the American Bar Association, whether willingly or not, in bitter partisan political discussion, and internal dissentions.

"After giving due and careful consideration to all the foregoing, and all matters directly or indirectly involved therein, we recommend to the Executive Committee of the American Bar Association that no further study of said questions be made by said special committee."

Minority Member's Comment.

Kenneth Wynne, one of the minority, appended over his own signature the followng personal observation:

"If the purpose of the resolution creating the special committee was to get the opinion of the American Bar Association regarding legislative trends designed to meet changing economic conditions, the report is superficial. It does not deal with the problem, but concerns itself with a short-range attack on surface trivialities. The depth of the ocean cannot be measured by the spray that crests the waves."

WASHINGTON U. REGISTRATION WILL BEGIN ON SEPT. 21

Examinations Sept. 17 and 18; Evening Classes Start Oct. 1.

Registration for the fall semester at Washington University will be held at the university Sept. 21, 22 and 23, with classes beginning the next day. Entrance examinations are scheduled for Sept. 17 and 18.

Enrollment in University College, the night school division of the university, will be held Sept. 21 to 30, with daily registration from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and 7:15 p. m. to 9 p. m. The evening classes will begin Oct. 1, but students will be permitted to enroll for credit courses until Oct. 15. The university is offering 38 new evening courses.

Much repainting, redecorating and remodeling of buildings and classrooms has been going on during the summer. Work has been done in Brookings Hall, Cupples Hall No. 2 and in Lee Hall, the men's dormitory. The university bookstore, in the basement of Brookings Hall, also has been remodeled. In addition, campus roads were repaired and new parking fields were built north of the fraternity houses and east of Francis Field.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH
DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

Stage Begging For Comics but Won't Accept Any Unknowns

Casting of Musical Plays Is Real Problem as List of Top Stars Narrows Down.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.
By the Associated Press.

JUST this week Vinton Freedley, musical comedy manager, ran Jimmie Durante to earth on the Isle of Capri after a chase through several nations, and told the panting comedian he had a job for him. This is more than a Broadway casting note; it is illustrative of the mighty position the established funny men hold in the theater at the moment.

Durante was not Freedley's first choice for the comedy lead in his forthcoming musical piece, "Red, Hot and Blue." Freedley had wistful hopes Eddie Cantor would abandon his cinema and radio chores for it. Next Jack Haley had the satisfaction of turning it down for better emolument, and then Willie Howard was finally tethered to a contract.

But Howard, serving out an unfinished term in George White's touring "Scandals," regretfully had to surrender, too. "Scandals" ran into unexpected prosperity and White has an irreconcilable loathing of closing a hit and refunding money. The pursuit of Durante across Europe finally allowed Freedley to wind up with a comic.

The episode revealed anew the acute shortage of comedians. Other forming musical plays are peopled almost entirely with tried performers, repeating the procedure of a year ago. It will be remembered that last year Max Gordon went to Hollywood to recruit Mary Boland, June Knight and Melville Cooper for his "Jubilee." Billie Rose invaded radio and pictures to snare Durante, Donald Novis and Gloria Grafton for his "Jumbo." Newcomers were instructed, indirectly, to go get some experience but they have yet to learn where.

It once was a simple task to cast a musical show, notably revues. Ziegfeld, White, Carroll, Sam H. Harris and others merely haunted the vaudeville halls and came away with Bert Lahr, Bobby Clark, the Howard brothers, Eddie Cantor and all the top-ranking comics of the past two decades. Now there are no testing pastures, and the managers play safe by buying proven goods. It is perhaps a kind-to-the-public attitude, but a terrible hardship on those with ambitions to be comedy stars.

The incoming "White Horse Inn" has in its central role William Gaxton, the most steadily employed light comedian of the musical stage. The President Wintergreen of "Of Thee I Sing," Gaxton served its sequel, "Let 'Em Eat Cake," and for the past two years frolicked through "Anything Goes," with his Vice-President, Victor Moore, and Ethel Merman. Miss Merman is back with the same management in "Red, Hot and Blue," indicating that Freedley is no more willing to operate a school for comics than other managers.

Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr head the cast of "The Show Is On," which the Shuberts are bringing in bulging with players long familiar to the Broadway trade. The same Shuberts returned to town tonight with a refurbished "Follies," also laden with old friends, among them Bobby Clark and Fannie Brice.

The managers are no fonder of this necessity than are the dejected aspirants. They have no choice. Directly they disclose a comedian of even puny promise, he is forthwith whisked away to the leisure and security of Hollywood. Reginald Gardiner, who was so pleasant in "At Home Abroad" a year ago, has been abducted to the films. Ray Bolger, who achieved stardom in the current "On Your Toes," is also on his way to the lemon groves.

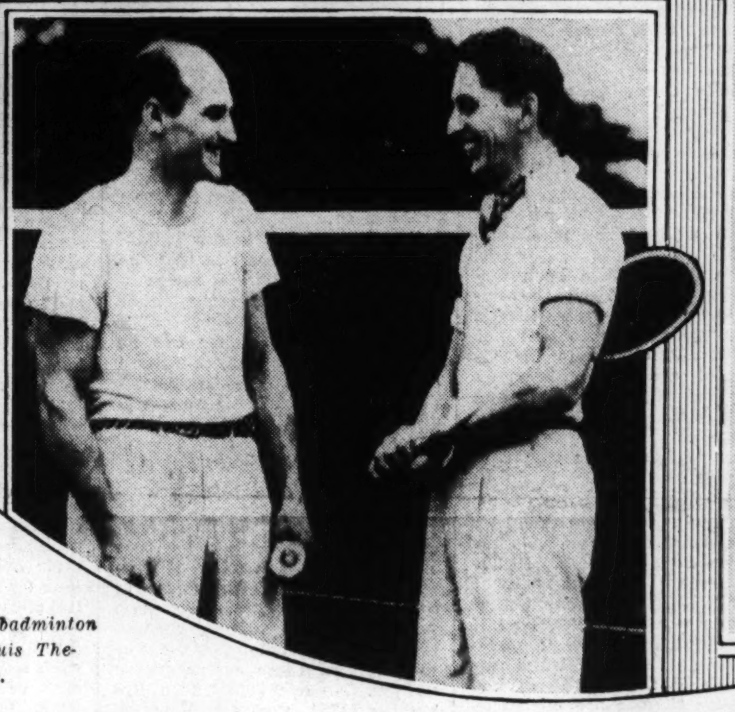
The more melancholy see in this condition the waning of musical pieces, but another faction holds, more cheerfully, it is bound to change. Even old favorites begin to pall, they insist, and in a season or two the stages will resound to the carolings and caperings of a new generation. Meantime, the old timers have got the jobs.

Mummers' Cast for "Squaring the Circle"

The cast for "Squaring the Circle," Valentin Katayev's comedy, with which the Mummers will open their season at the Wednesday Club the night of Saturday, Oct. 3, will be composed of Leland Brewer, Bernard Galvin, Mary Hohenberger, Lucille Williamson, Frank Novotny and Fred Birkicht. Laid in Moscow in 1928, at the height of a housing shortage, "Squaring the Circle" takes sly pokes at Communism. It tells of two young men, roommates, who are married at the same time and try to make their cubicle serve for two households.

Virginia Bruce, who plays a Follies vamp in "The Great Ziegfeld," at Loew's.

Co-starred in "Follow Your Heart," new musical at the Fox Theater, are Marion Talley, Kansas City's one-time gift to grand opera, and Michael Bartlett, former singing partner of Grace Moore in pictures. A scene from the film is below.



Willard and Hurley, badminton players in the St. Louis Theater stage show.

Bette Davis, the lady in "Satan Met a Lady," at the Missouri.

Air Adventures, Music, 'G-Men' In Week's Films

By Colvin McPherson.

FIVE brand new cans of cinema have been opened for this week's trade at the Fox, Missouri and St. Louis theaters, but in none of them is there indication that Hollywood has gone over to diversified thinking or intensive plotting.

"China Clipper," at the Fox, is another of those about-nobody-we-know films. A foreword warns us that the events about to be unreeled are "not historical" in any sense; and that the people aren't real. In other words, we had best overlook the dedication, which is to such unreal beings as the personnel of an air line, Government officials concerned with aviation and the designers of the Pacific air cruisers themselves. The story, by the same Frank Wead who wrote "Ceiling Zero," reviews the building up of the Caribbean air service and the extension of the lines into the Pacific. Pat O'Brien gives a monotone impersonation of the hard-boiled boss who never thanks anybody, nor takes the human element into account at all, as he carries on to the great vision. Interspersed with tedious scenes in which he and his wife, Beverly Roberts, cannot make up their minds, this material quickens no pulses among the spectators. There are thrills when the great day comes and the Pacific flights begin but the issue is never in doubt. In the first place, everybody knows there were no mishaps to the Clipper ships. And the author of the screen play has cooked up no melodramatic moments, with villains to smash the motors or steal the plans for the Government of Kleptomania. A heartening sight is the performance of Humphrey Bogart as one of the boys, but aside from that and the actual Pacific flying (if you'll look close, you'll see that they change ships in midair), the chief point of note is the failing health of the late Henry B. Walthall who played a designer. The role was his last and "China Clipper" is the screen's farewell to one of its best-beloved old timers.

"Follow Your Heart," the Fox's second film, stars Marion Talley, former girl sensation of the Metropolitan Opera, and Michael Bartlett, featured player of several previous films. This is not Miss Talley's first appearance in talking pictures. She shares in their history by having sung in one of the earliest short subjects, before talking features were made. She and Beniamino Gigli, if I remember correctly, clasped hands and went after grand opera with gusto. I must say that the future of opera on the screen looked pretty hopeless then. But time has been goose-stepping on and this week Marion sings several arias quite to the approval of the audience. When the singing stops, it is another matter. The young prima donna's speaking voice is unpleasantly nasal, her general gracefulness much to be questioned. "Follow Your Heart" has several suitable production numbers and Bartlett's singing is appreciated.

Counterfeit.

THE Missouri's main melodrama, "Counterfeit," is exciting enough, but is worth a few laughs also, in that it sends Lloyd Nolan and his band of currency-fakers to St. Louis County to conduct their nefarious operations. The first chuckle comes at the sight of a sign which says "St. Louis, 15 miles, St. Charles, 8 miles," or the other way around. Margot Grahame goes into town to pass some bills and figures in a holdup somewhere near Grand Boulevard, one of our police cars comes up, lettered properly, and there follows a wild chase to "Eads Bridge." These occurrences put Chester Morris, a "G-man," into action, but St. Louis is not forgotten. There is a fake killing on the steps of the Federal building, amid traffic signals of the type used in downtown Los Angeles, and talk of the hideout, somewhere south of Ferguson. As near as I can figure, the gang headquarters must be in one of the burying grounds along St. Charles road. And although the gangsters do not know it, they themselves are on their way to the last round-up. It comes in true "G-man" fashion, with the assistance of the Metropolitan Police, City of St. Louis.

The type of film in which suave lady and gentleman arch-criminals play chess with each other is carried to its infinite degree for the Missouri's other feature, "Satan Met a Lady." Never does the audience know the why or wherefor of this or that move, and I suspect the operator in the projection booth was a little amazed when he first ran the film, and wondered if they had sent him a batch of old trailers or if he had laced the reels up in wrong order. As I look back on it all now, I can see that Bette Davis was a jewel thief, Warren William a detective and that there was a famous medieval treasure both were after. Murders there were, plenty of them, and malicious destruction of propery fit for a king, or at least for a revolutionist. Finally all the crooks are rounded up and Mr. William goes on to another job. But the rest is hazy. And I have a horrible fear about the old girl who figured so prominently in the first reel. She was sunk without a trace.

"Two In a Crowd," at the St. Louis, is just a case of so much film to go with a stage show. Two halves of a thousand-dollar bill are used to get Joel McCrea and Joan Bennett acquainted (try it at your next party) and after that the show sort of ambles along to the day of the Big Race, when old Lightning, Faithful, or whatever his name is, comes in first. The stage show, with a badminton exhibition by a pair of champions, is quite a sporting event, while Jimmy Evans puts on a dazzling athletic act by himself, and calls it juggling.

Encouraged by the success they had in Labor day week, three attractions remain over. They are "The Great Ziegfeld," at Loew's, "My Man Godfrey" at the Ambassador and "Swing Time" at the Orpheum.

"The Great Ziegfeld," impressive for its sheer size and expensive cast, follows pretty well the life of the showman who gave the world a standard in girl shows. If it should fail to please some, it therein reveals that Ziegfeld himself would not please today, at least not with the brand of show he offered 10 or 15 years ago.

Followers of William Powell, who plays Ziegfeld, may see him in his own type of role as the butler in "My Man Godfrey." And as an example of how musicals are made today, "Swing Time" may serve. The latest Astaire-Rogers routine is one of their best.

First Symphony Concerts Oct. 30-31

THREE world-famous composers, eight instrumental and four vocal soloists will be assisting artists in the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's fifty-seventh season, which opens with all-orchestral concerts at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House on Friday afternoon, Oct. 30, and Saturday evening, Oct. 31, and closes next March 19 and 20.

Outstanding among the newcomers is Serge Prokofieff, distinguished Russian composer, who will appear in the triple role of composer, piano soloist and guest conductor at the concerts of Jan. 29 and 30, playing his Piano Concerto No. 3 and conducting the Suite from his opera, "The Love of Three Oranges." Prokofieff will be remembered for his "Symphonie Classique," which the orchestra played in the last season.

The other composers are Serge Rachmaninoff and Alexandre Tansman, both of whom have been with the St. Louis Symphony before. With Rachmaninoff as piano soloist on Nov. 27 and 28, the orchestra will present a program made up entirely of his works. Tansman, who was here during the 1932-33 season, has chosen one of his famous piano concertos for the programs of Dec. 18 and 19. A new orchestral work dedicated by him to the St. Louis Symphony will have its world premiere at the same time.

Ruth Slenczynski, phenomenal 12-year-old pianist, will make her bow to St. Louis audiences on the Christmas week program, for Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, Dec. 26 and 27. During the four years since she made her professional debut in New York, she has been guest artist with orchestras in New York, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis and San Francisco.

Other new soloists are Leon Zighera, French violinist, who comes to St. Louis for the concerts on March 12 and 13, Dalies Frantz, young American pianist, on Jan. 8 and 9, and Arthur Fear, English baritone, on March 5 and 6.

Jascha Heifetz, Russian violinist, will be the season's first guest artist, on Nov. 6 and 7, Gregor Piatigorsky, violoncellist, returns on Jan. 15 and 16, Vladimir Horowitz, pianist, on Feb. 26 and 27. Scipione Guidi, concertmaster of the orchestra, will be its violin soloist on Dec. 11 and 12, and Corinne Frederick, St. Louis pianist, on Feb. 5 and 6. Beside the opening and closing concerts, all-orchestral programs will be given on Nov. 13 and 14, Dec. 4 and 5 and Feb. 12 and 13.

Vladimir Golschmann, conductor of the orchestra for his sixth year, will return from a European vacation about Oct. 15, to begin rehearsals immediately. His programs for the coming year will be made up of standard repertory works, including many not heard in recent years, and a number of new compositions. The personnel of the orchestra, 87 players in all, will be virtually unchanged.

The St. Louis Symphony Chorus, under the direction of William B. Heyne, will begin rehearsals during the coming week. Its initial appearance is set for the concerts of Nov. 20 and 21, when Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" will be presented in complete form. With the 200 voices in the chorus will be three Metropolitan Opera stars as soloists. They are Rose Bampton, contralto who sang with the chorus last spring, in the role of Marguerita; Paul Althouse, Wagnerian tenor, who will be Faust, and Chase Baromeo, bass-baritone, as Mephistopheles. Baromeo was soloist with the chorus in 1935 and Althouse has made several appearances with the orchestra.

William Walton's short choral work, "Belshazzar's Feast," based on the biblical story, will be given for the first times in St. Louis on March 5 and 6. The choral work has been presented successfully at music festivals in Cincinnati and Ann Arbor and by Leopold Stokowski with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Only one soloist, in this case, Arthur Fear, is required. Fear will sing two "Hans Sachs" arias from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" on the same program.

Following a practice of recent seasons, the orchestra will again sponsor the local engagements of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, early in January. Season ticket sale for the regular concerts begins tomorrow at the Auditorium box office. Reservations may also be made at the offices of the Symphony Society on the fourth floor.

Ambassador Band To Be Featured in New Show Policy

THE Ambassador Theater's new entertainment policy, to be put into operation Friday, Oct. 2, will feature an orchestra of 20 local musicians, playing selections of popular music from the week's "Hit Parade" on the radio, and several specialty acts, all presented from the orchestra pit.

Paul Ash, who has been conductor and master of ceremonies at the Ambassador on previous occasions, will be conductor at the opening. Rehearsals of the orchestra, made up largely of young men, have already begun. When programs are finally worked out, the same orchestrations that are used on the air will be supplied to the band.

Touring "name" bands will be booked from time to time as they are available, with their numbers to be supplemented by members of the local unit. The specialty acts will be booked independently or with the traveling groups. All musical programs will run about 45 minutes, accompanying a single film feature and short subjects.

The idea is one that has been tried with considerable success at the Paramount Theater in New York.

Austrian Music Festival Is Field-Day for Italians

Toscanini, Verdi, and an American Singer, Take Honors at Famous Salzburg, Critic Finds, While Mozart, a Native Son, Loses Out.

BY THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

SALZBURG, Austria.

IN SALZBURG where "Alles ist Schoen" every natural and artificial condition is favorable to a festival that is supposed to center around the music of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. The little town, flanked by cloud-capped mountains and cut in two by the brawling Salzach, is so touching in its genial and unaffected loveliness, that the most hard-crusted visitor becomes immediately susceptible. Salzburg is the birthplace of Mozart. Moreover, it looks the part. The apple-cheeked natives, in their leather shorts and gray linen jackets, do not sing the airs of Cherubino and Massetto to each other as they pedal along the streets but if they did it would not seem inappropriate. The atmosphere is tender and lyrical.

In a place that has in itself so many of the qualities of music and at the same time commands the services of such devoted practitioners of the musical art as Arturo Toscanini and Bruno Walter one naturally expects to hear the True Word. The opera houses of Vienna, Paris, London and New York may be pardoned if they fall into routine performances for they are constantly battling against routine conditions. The Salzburg Festival, however, is presumably a special effort that comes as the result of thought and preparation that has extended over a whole year.

But whatever the thought and effort that went into this year's festival they were not enough. The performances of the Mozart operas, which are—or should be—the raison d'etre of the festival, were the least satisfactory of the whole program.

There were a number of reasons for this, some quite obvious, the others reached by inferences drawn from certain imponderables of the situation.

But before listing these disappointments and their causes it is only fair to say that three of the operas and two of the orchestral concerts fulfilled every expectation even though the musical resources involved were not the best that could have been commanded. These were the operas and concerts directed by Toscanini.

Of the several performances of Verdi's "Falstaff" I heard only one, but visitors who were in Salzburg during the whole season agreed that they were all on the same level. This means that a unique and brilliant score was realized in such a way that one had the sensation of being a part of that original creative impulse that brought the music into existence.

The freshness of Verdi's score was in no way compromised by his having decided at the age of 80 to fashion an opera in the style of Wagner. The vocal lines were subjected to the natural flow of the dialogue with the orchestra furnishing an unflagging commentary on both the musical and the dramatic material. Here indeed was "continuous melody," and none the less melodious for being written in short snatches that never violated the organic necessities of the whole text.

In the performance at the Festspielhaus these melodious snatches were tossed into the air like the gold and silver spray of an illuminated fountain. It was all movement and light, propelled as if by some unmeasured natural force. It was only in retrospect that one realized the extraordinary amount of artistic contrivance that had gone into the performance. Even a routine performance of "Falstaff" would require the correlating hand of an unfaltering expert. But under the almost Satanic eye of Toscanini every ponderous footfall of the obese Falstaff, even protesting gesture of the irascible Dr. Caius—even the impetuous kisses of the love-sick Fenton—were synchronized and rhythmical and at the same time vivid with the blush of spontaneity.

And it was only in retrospect that one had a full realization of the transparency of the ensemble. Every line whether in the orchestra or in the turbulent play of voices on the stage, could always be heard.

AS MIGHT have been expected, the singers in "Falstaff"—as in the other operas directed by Toscanini—were the best that the Festival afforded. The role of Falstaff was portrayed by Mariano Stabile, a veteran of the La Scala opera, and he managed to achieve a personal triumph without ever threatening the unity of the performance. Stabile did not reveal an extraordinary vocal quality, but his Falstaff had both a Shakespearean richness and a Latin wit. Another finely modeled interpretation was contributed by Franca Somigli, in the role of Mistress Ford. After the inadequate vocalizing of the Mozart operas one felt a burst of gratitude for this handsome woman who sang so intelligently and so flexibly and this gratitude was not diminished by the discovery that she was not Italian at all—as she looked—but American. Her name is Marian Clark and she comes from somewhere in New York State. The other singers all made proportionate contribution to the wit and charm of the production.

The two other operas directed by Toscanini—Wagner's "Meistersinger" and Beethoven's "Fidelio" had the same flowing movement and wealth of finely realized detail. The singers, however, were not quite as good and the music, for some reason not easily explained, did not seem as important. In comparison with the light-footed humor of "Falstaff" the texture of "Die Meistersinger" actually seemed thick and over-ripe. This is perhaps an unnatural and an unfair comparison since the sentiment and philosophy of the Wagner opera is so entirely different from that derived from the Shakespeare text. Even so there were times when one wished that Hans Sachs might have abbreviated some of his disquisitions on German art and the perverseness of humanity.

The best voice in "Die Meistersinger" was that of Hans Niessen, who undertook the role of Sachs. It was a really beautiful voice, with plenty of sonority and resonance and he gave full value to the beauties of the vocal line. Under Toscanini, Wagner is never barked—it is always sung. The psychological limits of Niessen's dramatic portrayal was a bit circumscribed. He was not very expansive.

Other and more disappointing phases of the Salzburg Festival will be discussed in an article to be published next Sunday.

Holmes Tracy To Be Bride of Dr. G. N. Haigler

Marriage to Take Place Sept. 22 — Prospective Bride's Family Long Identified With Veiled Prophet Association.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Virginia Holmes Tracy, daughter of Mrs. George W. Tracy, and Dr. Gilbert Neal Haigler of St. Louis, son of Mrs. George I. Haigler of Camden, S. C.

The wedding will take place at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, Sept. 22, in Mrs. Tracy's new apartment at 7470 Delmar boulevard, to which she will move soon from 29 North Court. The Rev. Rufus D. S. Putney, chaplain of St. Luke's Hospital, will perform the ceremony, at which the bride's uncle, Eugene M. Funsten, will give her in marriage.

After a wedding trip to Washington and Camden to visit his mother, who will be unable to come here for the wedding, Dr. Haigler and his bride will reside with Mrs. Tracy.

Miss Tracy was graduated in 1928 from Mary Institute, and later attended the St. Louis School of Fine Arts at Washington University. She has served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball. Her family has long been identified with the association which sponsors the annual visit of the Veiled Prophet. She is a granddaughter of the late William H. Thomson, former head of the Boatmen's Bank, who helped to found the order, and is a niece of Mrs. Alexander Bacon Coxe of Fort Bliss, Tex., and of the late Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins, both former queens. An uncle, William Hargadine Thomson Jr., lives in Dallas, Tex., and he, with Col. and Mrs. Coxe, is expected in St. Louis for the ceremony.

An aunt, Mrs. Eugene M. Funsten, gave a luncheon Friday afternoon at her home in Hampton Park in Miss Tracy's honor. Guests were Mrs. Alfred W. Brown, Mrs. William E. Glogau and Mrs. Henry Goodheart Hawkins Jr., all cousins; Mrs. Joseph Davie, Mrs. Barkley Cunningham, Mrs. Stanwood W. Haigler, sister-in-law of the bridegroom; Mrs. H. F. Richards, Miss Christine Hansley, Mrs. William Obear and Mrs. Tracy.

For two years Dr. Haigler attended the University of South Carolina, later graduating from Ohio State University. He is a member of Omega Tau Sigma.

W. K. Morrison III And Lenore Crowe To Wed Thursday

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES L. CROWE, St. Charles, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frances Lenore Crowe, and William Kenderdine Morrison III, son of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Morrison Jr., 4401 McPherson avenue.

The wedding, following closely after the engagement announcement will take place at 9 o'clock Thursday morning in the students' chapel of St. Louis University, the bridegroom's alma mater. The Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., a close friend of the bride and her family will officiate.

Miss Helen McGirl, the bride's roommate at Webster College, from which she was graduated with the class of 1934, will be her maid of honor. George Hirt Morrison will be his brother's best man.

After a wedding trip to Chicago, Mr. Morrison and his bride will occupy the home of his grandmother, Mrs. William K. Morrison, 4425 McPherson avenue, during her absence of several months abroad. She will leave St. Louis Sunday, her immediate objective India, where she will attend the ordination of her son, Father John Morrison, into the Jesuit order.

In addition to Father John Morrison, the bridegroom is a nephew of Father Bakewell Morrison of St. Louis. Mrs. Morrison Sr., was Miss Marguerite Bakewell, a sister of Paul Bakewell. His mother was Miss Leona Hirt, whose family now lives in Florida.

J. A. Jacobs to Wed Lilly Jane Samuels

MR. AND MRS. JULIAN G. SAMUELS, 6371 Waterman avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lilly Jane Samuels, and Jack A. Jacobs. The news was told informally last Sunday to a group of friends who called at the Samuels' home.

Miss Samuels is a graduate of Mary Institute, class of 1934, and for two years attended the Kingssmith School in Washington.

Mr. Jacobs is the son of Mrs. Jack Jacobs, 6031 Waterman avenue. He is an alumnus of St. Louis Country Day School, and belongs to the Westwood Country Club.

The wedding will take place after Christmas.

Miss Freda Birge To Become Bride Of W. H. Woodward

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR BLACKMORE BIRGE, 120 East Swon avenue, Webster Groves, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Freda Riddle Birge, and William Henry Woodward. Close friends learned of the betrothal last evening when they arrived for a buffet supper of Mexican dishes at the Birge home.

The prospective bride, granddaughter of Mrs. George T. Riddle and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Birge, attended Miss Eoff's School in St. Louis and Ward-Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn. An accomplished rider, she has participated for years in local and national horse shows, and has been riding counselor at Camp Cimarroncita, Ute Park, N. M., the last few summers.

The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mrs. Harold E. Woodward of the St. Regis apartments, and is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Woodward, 6223 Westminster place. He is a graduate of the St. Louis Country Day School.

Supper was served from colored Mexican pottery brought to St. Louis by Miss Birge after a recent trip, during which she acquired a knowledge of Mexican food and its preparation. Patio strings of gourds, split pepper pods and dried tropical flowers, all brightly painted, and chile peppers were used in the decorations.

Guests were Mrs. Woodward, mother of the bridegroom-to-be; Miss Edna and Miss Jane Birge, sisters of the prospective bride; Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hager, Miss Mildred Weller Vaughan, Miss Jane Blackmer, Dr. and Mrs. William Stude, Miss Jane Armistead, Miss Mary Morse, Dr. Robert Elliott, George Riddle Bradbury, John M. Bradley Jr., Edwin H. Dorothy Coleman Is Betrothed to G. S. Roudebush

Announcement Made at Tea Given by Miss Mary Bolland Taussig — Bride-Elect Debutante of 1932 and Member of Junior League.

THE betrothal of Miss Dorothy Jean Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bourland Coleman, 5042 Washington avenue, to George Shotwell Roudebush has been announced. The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Holt Roudebush, 6218 Washington avenue.

The news was told late yesterday afternoon at an informal tea which Miss Mary Bolland Taussig gave for Miss Coleman at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Fred J. Taussig, 50 Westmoreland place.

The bride-to-be prepared at Mary Insitute for Vassar College from which she was graduated in June, 1932. The following fall she was presented to society at a reception given for her by her parents at Bellerive Country Club and was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball. Later she became a member of the Junior League. Miss Coleman received a degree in journalism at the University of Missouri in the fall of 1934 and since that time has been on the staff of the Post-Dispatch.

Mr. Roudebush attended Webb School in Bell Buckle, Tenn., and received a degree at Princeton University in 1931. Three years later he was graduated from the Harvard Law School. Since returning to St. Louis Mr. Roudebush has become a member of the University Club. His maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. D'Arcy.

Miss Coleman recently returned after spending three weeks with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Langley Carleton Keyes, and their young son, Eben Wight Keyes II, at North Falmouth, Mass. The prospective bridegroom was a guest in the Keyes' summer home at the same time.

Among the guests at the party were Mrs. Roudebush, mother of the prospective bridegroom; Mrs. Coleman, the mother of the bride-to-be; Miss Jane D'Arcy Roudebush, sister of George Roudebush; his cousins, Miss Kate D'Arcy and Mrs. Charles S. Fox; Miss Delphine Polk, Mrs. George McDougall Weeks Jr., Mrs. Robert C. Corley, Mrs. Charles S. Lamy, Mrs. William H. Biggs, Miss Anne Thomson, Mrs. Donald O. Cramer, Miss Emily Lewis and Mrs. Robert Semple.

Helen Feuerbacher To Become Bride of J. M. Dilschneider

A GROUP of friends who responded to the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henry Feuerbacher, 32 Brentmoor Park, for tennis and a garden party at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, were told of the engagement of Miss Helen Ruth Feuerbacher, daughter of the host and hostess, and Joseph M. Dilschneider. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dilschneider, 6067 West Cabanne place.

Miss Feuerbacher, a debutante of the season of 1932, when she served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, attended Mary Institute and was graduated from Miss Evans' School. Later, for a year, she was a student at Pine Manor, Wellesley, Mass. She has traveled extensively. Her coming-out party was a reception, given at her parents' home for several hundred guests. She is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Orthwein. Her mother was Miss Ruth Orthwein before her marriage.

Miss Feuerbacher and her family recently returned from Manitowish, Wis., where they spent the summer.

Mr. Dilschneider attended St. Louis University and is a member of the Missouri Athletic Association.

Guests at the party included Miss Josephine Kuhn, Miss Marjorie Henger, Miss Virginia Koken, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Weatlake, Mr. and Mrs. Withnell Hager, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Feuerbacher Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Gissler, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bartley, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wilcox Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. George Clements, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lyle, Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Max Feuerbacher, Marquard Braun, Jack Phelan, Henry Dilschneider, brother of the prospective bridegroom; William Vollmer, Robert Stoltman, Richard Roberts and Thomas B. McDermott.

The wedding is expected to take place in the spring.

Wedding Plans Canceled.

Mrs. Albert O. Hagar of Cambridge, Mass., has recalled the invitations for the wedding Tuesday of her daughter, Miss Kathryn Elizabeth Hager, to Robert Sewell Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh C. Turner of the Embassy Apartments.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

MIDDLEBURG, VA., and thereabouts, is mourning the loss of a good neighbor and lover of horses in the recent death of Mrs. William F. Hitt, formerly Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of a former United States Senator from West Virginia.

To the rest of the world, Mrs. Hitt was the heroine of an international romance which was always associated with the mention of her name and that of the late Duke of the Abruzzi, a member of Italy's House of Savoy. But, to the countryside of Middleburg, Mrs. Hitt was known as an expert on horses.

Mrs. Hitt put aside a brilliant social career in Washington and was content to remain in Virginia and, with Mr. Hitt, to entertain a few friends now and then.

Her husband was William F. Hitt, whom she had known from childhood.

MRS. NATALIE SCHEFFER, Russian noblewoman, sits beneath the high studio windows in a secluded room in the Corcoran Gallery of Art and reinforces and repairs the rare Flemish sixteenth century tapestry recently bequeathed to the gallery and which had hung in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City for many years.

Mrs. Scheffer came to this country after the fall of the imperial Russian Government.

The tapestry she is working on at the present time is one of the largest of the series and is called "The Wedding Preparations of Cupid and Psyche," and measures 12 by 19 feet. For nine months, Mrs. Scheffer has been working on this tapestry and has put in literally millions of tiny stitches, taking extreme care to match the color and pattern of ancient tapestry-makers in her repairs.

The work is under the direction of Mrs. Emmy Sommer of Washington. The frame on which the tapestry is stretched is made from a drawing furnished by one of the greatest tapestry centers of Europe.

MR. AND MRS. ADOLPH CASPAR MILLER, cousins of Mrs. Roosevelt, have lent the Corcoran Gallery of Art a "Madonna and Child," by Lucas Cranach, the younger, which has an unusual glazed effect, and a portrait of a lady by Angelo Bronzino, a sixteenth century artist.

Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, widow of the eye specialist, has lent a portrait of her late husband, painted in 1931 by Frank O. Salisbury.

Visitors to the Corcoran Gallery may see the famous bronzes, "The Rising Sun" and "Descending Night," by Adolph Alexander Weinman.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.

NEARLY every nation of the world was represented at the parties given this week for members of the World Power Conference and the congress on large dams.

The reception which the Brazilian ambassador and Senhora de Aranha gave a few days ago celebrated Brazil's Independence day and also honored Joao Marques dos Reis, Minister of Communications and Public Works, who is head of the Brazilian delegation to the World Power Conference, his daughter, Senhorita Carmen Josephina dos Reis, and the other members of the delegation.

Senhora de Aranha, wearing a black satin gown, severely simple, greeted guests, presented them to Senhor dos Reis.

Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper were among the guests. Mrs. Roper wore a beige lace gown and a picture hat. Mrs. Cummings, wife of the Attorney-General, also attended, accompanied by her guest Miss Anna Callaghan, of New York.

With few exceptions every member of the diplomatic corps was present. The ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, were accompanied by their daughter Marie Therese, wearing a print gown on a white background, with Grecian capes of orange and white.

St. Louis Visitors Arrive in Paris

VISITORS to Paris are often unaware of the secluded and beautiful spots to be seen near the capital. Among several within an hour's journey from the city is l'Abbaye Royale du Lys. This magnificent property is owned by Comte Jehan de Noue, nephew of Comtesse de Noue, a former St. Louisan.

The Abbaye, now in ruins and classified as an historic monument by the French Government, was founded in 1248 by Blanche de Castille, Queen of France, mother of St. Louis. The Abbesses were always selected from the nobility and the ladies of the court spent many weeks there during the summer. It became one of the most important Cistercienne Abbayes in France.

It was not only a retreat for the queen and her attendants, but also played an important role in French history during several centuries. Among the rulers who made pilgrimages there were Saint Louis, Philippe III, Philippe IV, Philippe VI, Charles V, Anne of Austria, Christine of Sweden, Louis XIV. The Abbaye was besieged by the English and Burgundiens and was twice saved from destruction by Du Guesclin and Jeanne d'Arc. During the French Revolution it was burned down, its treasures sold and its relics scattered. Only the treasure chest of St. Louis remains and it is exhibited in the Louvre today. Although the heart of Blanche of Castille is known to have been deposited in the Abbaye, it has never been found and probably lies beneath the ruins.

The chateau, which is of more recent construction, is now maintained by Comte de Noue as a rest house for summer visitors. Benjamin Franklin lived there a while. His grandson once owned the place. It was later sold to the Gen. Marquis de Latour-Maubourg, Fair de France and Minister of War, and it is his descendant, the present de Noue who has restored the building and made it habitable.

Mrs. Harry Worman of St. Louis has returned to Paris from Salzburg, where she attended the music festival. She went to Cherbourg today to meet Mr. Worman, who is arriving on the Queen Mary. They will be in Paris at the Hotel George V for an indefinite period.

Mrs. J. D. Perry Francis is again at the Ritz in Paris with Miss Georgia Elliot and her mother, Mrs. Henry Elliot. They have been in Salzburg for the festival and visited in Germany before returning here. Mrs. Francis is going to London Thursday and will sail on the sixteenth for New York from England. Mrs. Elliot and her daughter will remain in Paris until the end of the month before returning home.

Miss Miriam Forbes has left the American Hospital in Paris after a five weeks' illness and is at the Hotel Richepanse until Thursday. She will go to the Italian Tyrol for several weeks before returning to Shanghai, China, by way of India. Miss Forbes is secretary to Harold Bixby of St. Louis, now director of Pan-American Airways in Shanghai.

Miss Zelina de Macklot Thompson is spending the month of September in Dinard and will then return to her apartment at the Hotel St. James and d'Albany in Paris. Miss Thompson spent the summer in England and attended the wedding in London of her niece, Miss Violet Stanhope.

Mrs. Rufus Lackland Taylor is convalescing at the American Hospital of Paris after a months' illness. Mrs. Taylor plans to return to St. Louis early in October. Her son, Edmond L. Taylor, is expected back Wednesday after six weeks in Spain.

Mrs. Louella Sayman and her daughter have returned to their Paris apartment after a month's visit in Brioni. Mrs. Sayman is leaving next month for a visit in America.

Mrs. Grace Tanzell has left for Florence by airplane. She will visit her aunt, Mrs. Gregory Smith, who has a villa there, and return to Paris to sail on the Aquitania Sept. 9 for New York.

Commodore and Mrs. Louis Beaumont gave a dinner and dance Sunday on the private beach of their estate, Eilenrocoat Cap d'Antibes. This was one of the outstanding social events of the Riviera season. After dinner the guests were entertained with a brilliant fireworks display. Among those who attended were; Prince Andrew of Greece, Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Boris of Russia, Princess de Broglie, Prince Georges Lotfallah, the Duchess of Westminster, Viscountess Castlerosse; Contesse de Maigret, French Ambassador and Madame Pila, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Arlen, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Allen of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. William Burton, Marquis and Marquise de Polignac, Mrs. Frank Jay Gould, Mrs. Charles A. Cartwright, Sir Oliver Duncan, Count and Countess Riccio, Capt. Arthur Evans, Miss Gordon Fellows, Mr. and Mrs. Martial Housez, Sir Duncan Orr-Lewis, Miss Elsa Maxwell, Sir Henry and Lady Norman, Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth Sherferee, Mr. and Mrs. Eris Loder, Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe Barnato, Mrs. Charles Chadwick, Capt. and Mrs. Grant Milne, Lady Peel (Beatrice Lillie), Princess Ghika, Mr. William Wessel, Sir Henry Lyons, Capt. D'Arcy Rutherford, Mr. Eric Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. D. Regnir and Capt. and Mrs. Leonard F. Plugge.

Stewart Fathman and Rachel Gillum to Wed

THE engagement of Miss Rachel Gillum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bankhead Gillum of Clarksville, Mo., and Stewart Fathman, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Fathman, 46 Lake Forest, was announced Thursday at a tea given at the home of the bride-elect.

Mr. Fathman lives on El Toro Farm at Clarksville, which he recently purchased. Prior to that, he lived in St. Louis. He is a graduate of Culver Military Academy at Culver, Ind. He attended Washington University, where he became a member of Sigma Chi fraternity. In 1926 he was graduated from Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.

Miss Gillum is a member of one of the old families of Pike County and a lineal descendant of Thomas Jefferson.

The wedding will take place in October.

Christine Fordyce Wed to C. A. Johnson

Raymond C. Johnson of Seattle served his brother as best man. Another brother, Arthur Johnson, was the groomsman. A small wedding breakfast followed the ceremony.

The bride received her education at Mary Institute, Miss Hall's School, Pittsfield, Mass., and the Finch School, New York. She was presented to society several seasons ago at a party at the St. Louis Country Club. She later became a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Johnson is the son of Mrs. Nels Johnson, Los Angeles, Cal., and is a graduate of the University of Washington. He and his bride will live in California after the wedding trip. She spent the summer with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Allan O. Fordyce, at Tepee Lodge, their Sheridan (Wyo.) ranch.

Gay Costume Ball At Wianno, Mass.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Wianno, Mass, Sept. 12.

THE Wianno Club was festive for the annual costume ball last Saturday night, when guests came representing their favorite moving picture star. Decorations of pine boughs and pictures of movie celebrities made an appropriate background for the party. Prizes were given for the cleverest and the most original costumes.

Mrs. C. M. Hinkle of Osterville and Boston, gave a dinner party before the ball. The members of Mrs. Hinkle's dinner party all won prizes for their costumes. Mrs. Hinkle's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Gaff Hinkle of Brookline, Mass., went as Popeye and Olive Oyl and were awarded the prize for the most original costumes. Mrs. James Gaff Hinkle was formerly Miss Mary Frances Dickson of St. Louis. Others among Mrs. Hinkle's guests went as Frank Buck and his retinue. Charles Anthony Hinkle represented Frank Buck; Henry J. Kaltenbach Jr. wore a monkey costume; Mrs. Kaltenbach and Robert White of Pelham N. Y. represented a tiger; Miss Jean Hinkle and Mrs. Charles Anthony Hinkle went as an elephant and Stewart Elliott, Mrs. Hinkle's nephew was a native brandishing a spear. They were awarded the prize for the best group.

Mrs. Leslie Dana had as her guests at her seaside summer home here last week end Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forsythe Young of Cambridge, Mass., formerly of St. Louis, and Mrs. Young's mother, Mrs. Douglas Robert. Mrs. Robert has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Young at their home and also another daughter, Mrs. John Andrews and Mr. Andrews at their home in East Dover, Vt.

Mrs. Dana has been in Mashapaug, Conn., visiting her daughter, Mrs. Channing MacGregory Wells Jr., and Mr. Wells and their young son, Leslie Dana Wells. Mrs. Dana expects to visit her other daughter, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, and Mr. Thorne at Westport, Conn.

Hyannisport, Mass.

MRS. HAROLD W. SIMPKINS departed Labor day from Stoneleigh Gables Inn for Boston, where she is at Hotel Puritan. Her daughter, Miss Natalie Simpkins, is attending a house party in Buffalo. She has been at Hyannisport with her mother for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. John Howard Holmes, who have been at Stoneleigh Gables, left Tuesday to motor with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Humphries, whom they visited in Pittsburgh on their way to St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Shea Horne and their daughters, Kathleen and Nancy left Tuesday for their home in Pittsburgh. They have been here at the summer home of Mrs. Horne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Sheldon, of St. Louis.

Mrs. Mary Wright Day and Mrs. David D. Metcalfe left Thursday by motor for Pittsburgh, where they visited Mrs. Philip Lantz on their way to St. Louis. Mrs. Lantz was the former Miss Frances Carroll of St. Louis. Mrs. Day has been a guest here at the summer home of Mrs. George Cutler of Boston, formerly of St. Louis. Mrs. Metcalfe has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cevedra D. Blake of St. Louis, at their summer home at Dennis, Mass.

List of Matrons Who Will Attend Veiled Prophet

MORE than a hundred St. Louis matrons have received special invitations to serve as ladies of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball to be held at the Municipal Auditorium Wednesday night, Oct. 7.

Among the matrons summoned to serve at the ball are women who in their debut year were commanded to attend the Veiled Prophet as maids of honor. While many of the ladies of honor are appearing for the first time as members of the Court of Love and Beauty, some have served at past balls. This will be their initial appearance in the Municipal Auditorium, as the Veiled Prophet ball for the last 26 years has been held in the Coliseum. The St. Louis matrons receiving this social distinction will assist in the reception of the maids of honor, the special maids of honor and the Veiled Prophet queen.

Immediately following the concert, which opens the ball, the ladies of honor will enter the ballroom on the east side, promenade in a circle to the west side, approach the throne and take alternate positions on each side of it. The entrance at the Auditorium is in reverse of that at the Coliseum. The throne this year will occupy the north end of the ballroom rather than the south. Following the ladies of honor will be the maids of honor, who on this night assist in the formal opening of the fall and winter social season.

The matrons of St. Louis summoned to serve the Veiled Prophet as ladies of honor will include: Mrs. Charles Claflin Allen Jr., Mrs. Richard Baldwin, Mrs. Jesse W. Barrett, Mrs. Oscar E. Berninghaus, Mrs. Lawrence Boogher, Mrs. Ingram F. Boyd Jr., Mrs. William J. Bramman, Mrs. Fred C. Breitt, Mrs. Robert F. Britton, Mrs. George M. Burbach, Mrs. Henry J. Butler, Mrs. David R. Many Parties Given Departing Guests In Cape Cod Area

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Woods Hole, Mass., Sept. 12

THRONGS of summer colonists visited Cape Cod and the Islands of Marthas Vineyard over Labor day. The weather was ideal and cruise ships dotted the harbors of Marthas Vineyard and Nantucket Sound. Many farewell parties were given.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyle O. Rodes gave a luncheon for Mr. and Mrs. Firmin Desloge, of Nantucket, at the Rodes cottage on Little Harbor in Woods Hole. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims. Mr. Rodes left for St. Louis Tuesday. Mrs. Rodes and their children will leave Sept. 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Ewing gave a farewell party last week at the "Spinaker," on Quissett road, which they have occupied all season. All the members of the summer colony in this vicinity from St. Louis were invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pettus gave a party Thursday for a group of St. Louisans. The guests enjoyed the sunset view from "Tree Tops," the Pettus' summer home. Mint juleps were served while the fishing catch of the Pettus family from the fresh water lake, a part of their estate, was the topic of conversation.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilson Gray of New York, formerly of St. Louis, gave a cocktail party for a large group of friends this week. They have leased the cottage they occupied this summer for another season.

One of the largest social affairs of the season was a musicale given Saturday night at Gladheim, the home of Dr. and Mrs. James Peter Warbasse. More than 200 guests heard Dr. and Mrs. Warbasse's son, Richard Warbasse play Viennese music arranged for piano and violin. Mrs. William DeWitt of New York, sang Viennese songs in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Warbasse's guest, Frau Helene Scheu-Riesz, novelist and playwright from Vienna.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant gave a sailing party in honor of Thomas G. Ratcliffe Jr., who spent a few days in Woods Hole following Labor day. The party sailed on the "Lilliana," down Vineyard Sound to Tarpaulin Cove, dropped anchor while the group went ashore for swimming and a picnic lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane aboard their boat, "Lightning," came over from Cuttyhunk, where they have a cottage for August and September, to visit Mrs. Murray Crane and Mr. and Mrs. Nims. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Long and their family who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nims have departed for their home in Hartford, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Beckman of New York, formerly of St. Louis, are spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Nims. Mr. and Mrs. Nims will have as their guests next week Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Nickerson, who will motor from their summer home in Maine to spend a short time in Woods Hole on their way to St. Louis.

An outstanding social affair of the season in Woods Hole was a garden party given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Janney of Philadelphia, Labor day, in their garden at Cansett, a part of Woods Hole. Sev-

Women Entering Fall Horse Show

MANY nationally know horsewomen will participate in the St. Louis Fall Horse Show to be given at the Arena, from Sept. 28 to Oct. 3. The first entry made for the St. Louis show was Mrs. Loula Long Combs, who will bring heavy harness horses, hackneys and ponies from her stock farm at Independence, Mo. Miss Mary K. Holt, Madison, Wis., who has one of the leading stables on the Western circuit, will be a newcomer at the St. Louis show this year. She will show heavy harness horses.

Another important stable to be represented will be that of Miss Jane Gordon Fletcher who has entered her string of saddle horses from Malvern, Pa. Her horses figured prominently in the 1935 St. Louis show.

Many St. Louis horsewomen have entered their horses, among them Mrs. Dorothy Hyland who will show her saddle horse, Why Worry Chief. This horse made his first appearance in the show ring this year at the Missouri State Fair, Sedalia. Harry Lathrop, Raymore, Mo., is training and riding Why Worry Chief for Mrs. Hyland. Mrs. Paul E. Winters will show her five-gait-eral hundred guests were present. After tea the guests were conducted through the gardens on the Janney estate.

Nantucket, Mass.

IT is wild aster time in Nantucket. Fifteen of the known varieties found in North America are now in blossom. They grow in profusion on the road to Sankaty Head Golf Club at Sia Sconsett. The closing social function of the summer, a dinner dance, was given at the club Friday night.

The largest crowd of the season attended the Yacht Club Labor day dance which was also the last to be held this year at the club.

Donaldson L. Lambert and Theodore Hess left Nantucket for New York Monday. Mr. Lambert will be joined in Philadelphia by his family next week. Mrs. Hess is also leaving Nantucket next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom and their family will remain in Nantucket until Sept. 20, when they will take the boat for New York, where they will visit for a few days before returning to St. Louis. Miss Jessie Ewing, daughter of William Ewing of Mount Cisco, N. Y., is the guest of Miss Mary Elizabeth and Miss Nancy Bascom. She will be with them until they leave for New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Lansden McCandless have closed their summer home on Nantucket and left Wednesday for St. Louis.

Yarmouthport, Mass.

AMONG recent guests at the Anchorage Tea House, Yarmouthport, were the following St. Louisans and former St. Louisans: Robert Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Haskell, who are summering at Bass River, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pettus and their family. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Ewing entertained Mr. and Mrs. Pettus and their family at luncheon. Mr. and Mrs. Ewing, who recently returned from Florence, Italy, will be at Hotel Chase, St. Louis, this winter. Miss Martha Pettus stopped at Yarmouthport on her way from Provincetown to Watch Hill.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Lingle of Davidson, N. C., were guests of Miss Edith Souther. They had just returned from a motor trip in Canada, including the Gaspee Peninsular. Mrs. Lingle is the former Miss Clara Souther. Mrs. Thomas C. Craig has been spending several weeks in Yarmouthport with her sister, Miss Souther. She will join a friend in a few days and after a visit to New York and Long Island will motor home, stopping en route in Chicago.

Social Affairs At Fish Creek, Wis.

Fish Creek, Wis., Sept. 12.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DEPARTURES, fall plans and final parties are the order of the day along Cottage Row. Mrs. Vilray P. Blair and Mrs. Kinney Smith of Chicago who is occupying the Blair guest house were hostesses at a Labor day party for about 60 Chicago and St. Louis friends. The guests were entertained at both houses and on the terrace. Dr. Blair will arrive for a short visit before he and Mrs. Blair leave for a motor trip to New York. Their son, Vilray Jr., will return soon to his medical studies in St. Louis, and John will return to Harvard.

Mrs. Festus J. Wade plans to go to St. Louis in about a week so that her children Libby and Johnny can start the fall school term. Mrs. Wade's mother, Mrs. Frank P. Crunden, will leave at the same time to visit her daughter, Mrs. Wallace Cole, in St. Paul. Mrs. Cole arrived home from a summer in Honolulu Thursday. Another daughter, Mrs. William Skinner, left Fish Creek earlier in the month with her children for their home in St. Paul. Her daughter Miss Betsy is entering Rollins College this fall.

Mrs. George Hoffman, her friend Miss Edith Nichols, and her granddaughter Miss Ellen Lee Brashear are ending another season in Fish Creek Wednesday of the coming week when they leave for their homes in St. Louis. Others who are returning in a few days include Miss Lillia and Miss Margaret Dyer, Mrs. Walter Fischel and her daughters, Miss Blanche and Miss Virginia. The latter will make her debut in St. Louis this fall. Miss Blanche will return for another year at Smith after spending last winter in St. Louis as a debutant. Mrs. William Elliott, Mrs. Fischel's mother will remain in Fish Creek until about Oct. 1.

Miss Laura Baumgarten, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Baumgarten, also a debutant of last season will resume her studies at Smith with Miss Fischel, while her brother Charles Speck will return to Harvard.

Archibald G. Douglass and his son John, motored to St. Louis Tuesday. They will be followed a little later in the month by Mrs. Douglass and Archibald Jr. The latter is another Cottage Row resident who will be returning to college in a few weeks.

Ephraim:

Another Ephraim season is closing this week with the departure of a majority of the summer residents. Among the St. Louisans who left within the past week were Miss Augusta Harvey and her nephew Julian Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Renard and their children, Mr. and Mrs. Wells L. Church and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Church. Wells Church Jr. motored home earlier in the month with Rene DuBois who was vacationing in Fish Creek. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Christie of Clayton expect to leave Monday.

Visitors to Be at Home.

Mrs. Hazel L. Solomon of the Fairmont Hotel has as her guests her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hartley L. Fullerton of Los Angeles, Cal. Mrs. Fullerton was, before her marriage in January, Miss Dorothy Solomon of St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Fullerton will be at home tonight from 8 to 10 o'clock at the residence of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Landauer, 5578 Pershing avenue.

Bradbury-Vaughan Wedding Oct. 3

MR. AND MRS. JOHN CLAY VAUGHAN, 7054 Washington boulevard, have sent out invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mildred Weller Vaughan, and George Riddle Bradbury, which will take place Saturday night, Oct. 3, at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The ceremony, to be performed by the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, will be followed by a reception at the Vaughan home.

Pre-nuptial parties for the bride-to-be started last week with a kitchen shower given by Miss Edna Birge at her home in Webster Groves. Yesterday Miss Marcia Grocock, 6223 Rosebury drive, entertained friends at luncheon and a handkerchief shower, and Wednesday a small luncheon will be given at the Park Plaza by Mrs. Ben Tilghman and Mrs. Fred Magoon. Luncheons will be given Friday and Saturday by Mrs. R. K. Withrow, 7320 Tulane avenue, and Mrs. David R. Parman, 7040 Tulane avenue, respectively.

Miss Vaughan has invited friends to see her trousseau Sept. 22 from 3 to 6 o'clock at a tea. The final luncheon will be given Wednesday, Sept. 23, by Miss Eloise Megginson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Megginson of Webster Groves, and Miss Jane Scholz will conclude the series with a buffet supper Thursday night, Sept. 24, at her home, 33 Maple avenue, Webster Groves.

College Sororities And Fraternities

Panhellenic

"IF you know a girl who is going to college for the first time this fall, don't send her a piece of lingerie. Send her 'Co-Ediquette.' It will save her both headaches and heartaches and be worth more to her in college life than all the finery she could possibly tuck away in her brand-new wardrobe trunk."

So reads one of the press notices for Elizabeth Eldridge's new book.

National president of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority and living now in San Antonio, Miss Eldridge says that the manuscript for this best-seller evolved slowly as she was doing sorority work, rushing, visiting other colleges, writing sorority letters. Its chapters are a composite picture of her own experiences at the University of Texas and her observations as an alumnae organizer.

There is a chapter on sororities, another entitled "Men, the Brutes" which gives the lowdown on college men and their lines, fraternity pin collecting, college engagements and marriages. One called "Home, Sweet Dormitory," tells of life in sorority houses, bathroom manners, hashers and housemothers. There are chapters on bull sessions, campus honoraries, on apple-polishing the professors,

Another critic calls "Co-Ediquette" "a hard-boiled, staccato book of advice to the coed-to-be, in which the outspoken authoress takes her hair down about collegiate problems—including how to get and hold your man and what to do with him after you've been dated. The 252 pages are easy reading because Miss Eldridge's words sparkle with wit and unaffected wisdom on campus problems. Many a fretting mama, more than a few fretful freshmen, breathless and not a little bewildered by the grown-upness of collegiate life, will sing hosannas to this tell-it-all book."

So this sorority president, in a tone which is not too flippant nor too pedantic has written "Co-Ediquette," to tell a freshman how to plan her courses, how to conduct herself both in classes and out, what clothes to select, how to date, what to do about sororities, campus sports and activities. "All she needs to know to sail the seas of college life with ease and self-assurance."

For the second week of rushing, the Women's Panhellenic Council of Washington University has announced the following schedule of parties: Tuesday afternoon, Pi Beta Phi and Zeta Tau Alpha; Tuesday evening, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Delta Delta Delta; Wednesday morning, Gamma Phi Beta and Phi Mu; Wednesday afternoon, Kappa Alpha Theta and Alpha Chi Omega; Wednesday evening, Delta Gamma and Alpha Xi Delta; Thursday evening, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Xi Delta, Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Mu; Friday evening, Gamma Phi Beta, Delta Gamma, Kappa Alpha Theta, Delta Delta Delta and Zeta Tau Alpha. Preferential bidding will be from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock Saturday evening.

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

ST. CHARLES, Mo., Sept. 12.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been received here of the marriage of Miss Mary Willot, daughter of Mrs. Emilie Willott, St. Peters, Mo., and Ensign Francis Othmer Iffrig, U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Iffrig of St. Peters, Mo., at Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 5. The ceremony took place in St. Vincent's Church at 10 a. m. Saturday, last week.

The bride wore a long white lace dress with long coat of white satin to which a train was attached. The veil, which trailed the floor, was caught at the head by a wreath of orange blossoms with a face veil also attached. Her wedding bouquet was composed of white roses and gardenias. She was attended by Mrs. Mary Minor, her cousin, who was gowned in blue lace combined with chiffon and wore a net hat and shoes of the same shade as her dress. Her flowers were deep yellow roses to carry out the navy colors, blue and gold. Others in the wedding party were Lieut. Charles Duncan, the best man; Paul Luther, formerly of St. Peters, who gave the bride away for her father; little Pauline Snider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Snider, who as flower girl was dressed in yellow taffeta and carried a basket of blue flowers, and six navy officers.

The wedding breakfast was held at the Royal Palms Hotel, following which the couple left for Bremerton, Wash., where the bridegroom will return to his ship, the U. S. S. Salt Lake City, Oct. 3. Mrs. Iffrig attended Central Wesleyan College and St. Louis University and was a teacher at the Spencer School near St. Peters. Goldsworthy-Johnson Wedding in Arkansas

MISS ANNA KATHERINE JOHNSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Johnson of Fayetteville, Ark., became the bride of Walter C. Goldsworthy of St. Louis Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the First Baptist Church of Fayetteville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Blake Smith.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin gown made on simple lines with a cowl neck and full sleeves to the elbow, tight fitting from the elbow to the wrist. The skirt ended in a long train in the back. Her illusion veil of tulle extended beyond the train. The veil was attached to a tulle cap and held in place by a row of orange blossoms. Her flowers were lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Irene Pearson was maid of honor. Miss Loraine Loving of Boonville, Mo., and Miss Irene Stubblefield of Harrison, Ark., were bridesmaids. They wore taffeta gowns fashioned on the same lines as the dress of the bride. Miss Pearson's dress was green, Miss Loving's yellow, and Miss Stubblefield's turquoise blue. They each carried an arm bouquet of asters and gladioli.

David Mills Finley Jr. of St. Louis was best man. The ushers were J. Monroe Johnson, brother of the bride, Ben Kirby of Harrison, Ark., Earl Williams and John Kane. Mr. Goldsworthy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Goldsworthy of Martock, Somerset, England.

An informal reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Goldsworthy will make their home at 6188 McPherson avenue.

New Thoroughfare Gives Cross-Sectional View of Fabric of Civic Existence

History and Progress Can Be Seen Along Widened Market Street, Express Highway, Clayton Road and Superhighway.

One of the most interesting thoroughfares of any American metropolitan district has been developed in the combination of widened Market street, the new express highway, Clayton road and the so-calledsuperhighway, which will be the new route of U. S. highway No. 40.

This has become a showplace of the community, mingling some of the old with much of the new. A drive along these city streets and suburban roads would interest almost any St. Louisan and would be a convenient way to give a visitor a cross-sectional glimpse of many of the things blended into thestructural fabric of civic existence.

From the beginning of the cut-off at Third and Walnut streets, leading to widened Market, to the junction of the old and new highways 40 at Wentzville, St. Charles County, the distance is 43 miles. Stopping at the Missouri River, as traffic must until a bridge is finished, the distance is 28 miles.

What a Reporter Noted.

A Post-Dispatch reporter has driven over the route, "to see what he could see," resulting in the following notes:

One starts in the heart of the original city, on the steep levee streets, in sight of the river that brought the founders here and in the center of the international fur trade begun by the earliest white inhabitants. Nearby are seen the dome of the historic Old Courthouse, the quaint facade of the Merchants' Exchange and the beauty of the century-old Church of St. Louis of France, once the Catholic Cathedral. Impressive in its interior ornamentation of white and gold, the edifice is interesting externally for its spire, its crumbling stone walls and its Latin and French inscriptions. . . .

The site of the famous Southern Hotel, at Fourth street, once a scene of splendor and gaiety, now a prosaic parking lot. Out Walnut street, a brief view of the French facade of City Hall. The little triangular park at Sixth street, ablaze with red cannas, where some one proposed to erect a statue of Woodrow Wilson. Beyond it, astriking view of the downtown skyline and beside it the rococo American Theater. . . .

Market street is in a transitional stage many of the old Hop Alley Chinese establishments were lost in the widening, giving way to parking areas, but on the opposite side saloons and flophouses persist. The depression seems to have eliminated many of the old labor agencies. At Tenth street, the curving corner of a modernistic new publishing plant stands out . . .

Civic Heart of St. Louis.

Now for the new civic heart of St. Louis. Civil Courts Building and its recently laid stone and brick terraces and shiny bronze flagpoles. Opinions differ on the architectural merit of this lofty structureX whose height is challenged by the adjoining Telephone Building. On the other side, the new Federal Building, a massive pile of stone, marked by fine entrance columns, aluminum doors, fat maroon and aluminum flagpoles.

Passing over an unseen pedestrian tunnel of the motor age, the car crosses the expanse of Twelfth boulevard—another splendid new artery—with a view of various municipal buildings, the towers of KSD on the Post-Dispatch Building, the Missouri Pacific Building and the Mart Building. Gen. Grant and Pierre Laclede maintain their vigil from stone pedestals beside City Hall and Municipal Courts Building.

Memorial Plaza, now a grassy open space with many transplanted trees, gives an idea already of what is in store when its development is completed. Beer and whisky signs nearby continue to spoil its effectiveness. Central Library, Christ Church Cathedral and the Shell Building, however, form a picturesque background, as does the stone bulk of Municipal Auditorium on the other side . . .

Link for Plaza.

For the next three blocks the roadway is six feet narrower (the result of a Post-Dispatch editorial suggestion), and the remains of trees planted along the curbs indicate how the city sought in this way to tie together Memorial and Aloe plazas. Sunshine Mission still does business at the old stand, near Sixteenth street; so do various pawnshops. The street widening brought about erection of modern fronts on a number of buildings, along Market.

The steel and concrete framework of the new Postoffice takes shape, showing how far the building will stand back of the street, and holding promise of another architectural contribution to the city . . .

Union Station, with its turrets in the best styel of the 90s and its great "balloon roof" over the trainshed, is an unfailing landmark. Opposite it is a new one—Aloe Plaza, colorful with red and yellow flowers and hovering friendly pigeons, but with a sad-looking collection of transplanted trees. . . .

Entering a Negro district; these are always happy looking people; on Sundays they don their finery and the street glows with gay color. They ahve their own good-sized office building at Jefferson avenue, facing a barren, neglected triangle. Some of their homes, on the side streets, reveal interesting bits of old-time design. Back of Vashon High School, for Negroes, is a wading pool; a popular palce through this long summer. Nearby, work on a new public community center is under way. . . .

Uptown Amusement Center.

The Pullman yards, west of Compton avenue. Here the scene is best at night, under the flodlights perched on olfty towers. . . . Grand boulevard and its sweeping iron suspension bridge. The skyline to north and south is worth a look; the Continental Building and its red beacon; the uptown amusement center; a medley of smokestacks and warehouses; the unique design of high Desloge Hospital; the round-topped tower in Reservoir Park. On the corner is the old armory of the 138th Infantry and a block beyond is the site of the new one to be erected by the city. . . . A busy brewery on one side; the seven-floor delivery and receiving station of a department store on the other; a noisy foundry at Spring avenue; the adjacent sidetrack and main line overhead bridges of the Wabash Railway. Around here, even if one doesn't see the packing plants, he will realize their presence, if the breeze is from the south. . . .

Between Vandeventer avenue and Kingshighway, after leaving Market street, the route cannot yet use the express highway, but the car weaves past it on one side or the other. For this mile stretch the highway is depressed, with easy rising and falling grades and graceful curves. The intersecting streets will use viaducts over the cut; some, in fact, are in use already, with the others spedily being finished. Building of pavement and retaining walls is going on. West Papin street will cross the cut on a country-style steel span, necessitated by the angle of intersection.

The express highway is entered in Forest Park, near Kingshighway. Close by is one of the nation's greatest medical centers, with its variety of red-roofed hospitals and schools spread over a number of blocks in serried outline. In the park are the new Jefferson Lake, frequently the scene of exciting races among model yachts of young skippers, and the site of another lake being built by the WPA.

The skyline changes—St. Louis University High School, the old Mounted Police Station on its hill, City Sanitarium and its prominent dome far to the south, Walsh Stadium (sometimes brilliantly illuminated for night events), the tall hotels and apartments of Kingshighway and Union boulevard, the modernistic framework of the new Jewel Box, or park greenhouse.

Zoo, Art Museum and Arena.

Over an equestrian tunnel the car presses westward, then under the various pedestrian and vehicular viaducts. Opposite the scenic railway of Forest Park Highlands is an underpass for walkers, tiled inside a sshiny as any dairy. Next the Arena, unique in design and bulk; new park tennis courts, and the traffic "cloverleaf" of the Hampton viaduct. Deaconess Hospital, the Zoo, thick woods still surviving in the park, the Art Museum on its hilltop, a tall apartment on Skinker boulevard.

Entering Clayton road, there are bright lights (by night), a glimpse of churches down the slope of Skinker, and the city limits are reached—a mythical line, of interest chiefly to politicians.

St. Mary's Hospital; frequently, in the evening, passersby see lights in its upper-floor operating rooms. Christian Brothers' College, the chimney of Concordia Seminary and adjoining towers of KFUO. This stretch of Clayton road, between Skinker and Big Bend, has been designated as bearing the heaviest traffic of the metropolitan area. Here is a group of "park and shop" food stores and eating places.

In strange contrast, at the busy crossing of Big Bend, are the grounds of two homes, secluded in a grove, quiet while the town drives by. Beyond are numerous pleasant subdivisions of varying pretension, but filled with hundreds of attractive, modern homes . . . Under the road, for some distance, runs the lifestream of the city—two five-foot water mains from the Missouri River.

Around North and South road is a center of amusements—golf driving tees (floodlighted by night), badminton courts, archery ranges, with their backstops of baled straw, shuffleboard courts and tenpin alleys. In the vicinity, one may find places to buy "hot dogs," or dine in leisure under the stars. To the north rise the dome of the county Courthouse and the buildings of County Hospital. . . .

Convent and Country Club.

The yellow-tiled building in a fenced park, is the Carmelite Convent, where nunts lead austere, secluded lives, inattentive to the throng of passing traffic. Beyond are fine estates, tucked away in the trees; the links of Bogey Golf Club, the Log Cabin Club and the St. Louis Country Club; the colonial town hall of Ladue and the crossing of a bridle trail. . . .

From Lindbergh boulevard to Bellefontaine, the new No. 40 remains to be built, but the sightseer may use the adjacent routs of Clayton and Clarkson roads or of Conway road, the former being paved. This is a district of pleasant, rolling land, with farms and country homes. One may turn south on Lindbergh for Memphis, new Orleans or Los Angeles, or north for Chicago or New York. . . .

The superhighway is a splendid, four-lane road from Bellefontaine to Chesterfield, dropping across the Rock Island Railroad and Bonhomme Creek on a slanting bridge. Down the Missouri valley is the high chimney of the Howard's Bend waterworks. From Chesterfield to the river there are three lanes of concrete; on the south is the rocky ridge followed by Wild Horse Creek road; Gumbo, now only a short drive from town, once was a long way out for chicken dinners. . .

Curving mroadly over the bottoms, in the realization of an engineer's dream, the highway reaches the Missouri, where steel work is well along on the State's new bridge. The bluffs and dykes and muddy swirl of the stream are always a picture. Across, in St. Charles County, is the old Daniel Boone country, where motor cars soon will speed in a fraction of the time once required acoss these steep hills by the pioneers' oxen. . . .

Beside a beacon and emergency field of the St. Louis-Kansas City airway, at Wentzville, the route ends. Westward the highway leads to San Francisco and the Golden Gate; northward to Duluth, Minn., and Fort William and Nipigon, Ont.

SOME SOVIET NOTES; FEW DOGS IN RUSSIA

Tovarish (Comrade) Becomes Most Overworked Word in the Language.

MOSCOW, Sept. 12. — The newcomer to Russia is struck by the almost total absence of dogs. The visitor can travel the streets of Moscow or Leningrad or any other center for a week without seeing a half dozen dogs.

Russians ascribe the small dog population to three things: Essentially Russians fear and dislike dogs, except in the rural regions, where they are trained to work; crowded living quarters leave little room for a dog; cost of feeding a dog is generally too much for the proletariat.

Tovarish (comrade) is the most overworked word in the Russian language, and the first Russian word the foreigner hears and learns because of its constant repetition.

Nearly everyone in Russia is tovarish to everyone else, including even Joseph Stalin, who however in deference to his position is generally referred to or addressed as beloved tovarish.

It might seem strange in another country to hear a person address the President and his house servant by the same title, but in Russia there is no class distinction, at least theoretically.

Tovarish has come virtually to supplant first names in Russia, which are still used only among intimates. The rare exceptions where the constant tovarish is not heard is in the courts, where deference is shown to the Judge and the prisoner is made to realize his status by the word grazhdanyn (citizen).

The suggestion that the hammer and sickle are archaic as the symbol of Soviet Russia and should be replaced by some more modern design was made in a discussion here of the new Constitution.

The critic, a woman, said the hammer and sickle were as misleading as they were old-fashioned in modern Russia and should be replaced by some twentieth century design. She suggested the tractor and dynamo.

All newspapers have opened their columns to a thorough discussion of the new charter, sometimes presenting several columns of readers' views daily.

A jewel map will tell the story of progress in the Soviet Union at next year's twentieth anniversary celebration of the October revolution.

Already artists and jewelers are at work cutting 22,000 precious and semi-precious stones which will be worked into a large map, depicting the Bolshevist accomplishments in industry, mining, agriculture, shipping, transportation and education.

The map will be displayed at the exhibition of Socialist industry to open next summer.

Seeking to find our why Victoria Sea in the Far North does not freeze over even in bitterest winter, the Soviet Government will set up the northernmost winter camp in the world.

This station will be established on Rudolph Island, in Franz Joseph Land, only a few hundred miles from the North Pole. Seventeen persons are preparing for the expendition in Leningrad.

ALGONQUIN CLUB TO INSTALL WATER SYSTEM FOR FAIRWAYS

Improvement to Cost $25,000; Other Organizations in County Considering Proposition.

A sprinkler system, to cost about $25,000, will be installed on the golf course of the Algonquin Golf Club within the next five weeks to provide protection against drouths, such as that which baked the fairways hard and brown this summer.

It was decided to install the system at a stockholders' meeting at the clubhouse on the Berry road Friday night, after the stockholders were told that the sprinkler system at the St. Louis Country Club, installed a year ago, had kept that club's fairways green all summer.

The system at Algonquin will consist of a water pipe running underground down the center of the fairways, with a nozzle below ground level every 100 feet, to which rotating sprinklers which throw water 190 feet can be attached. The maximum cost of operation per year has been estimated at $5000, Samuel W. Greenland, chairman of the committee in charge, said yesterday. Sunset, Glen Echo and Bellerive Country clubs were said to be considering similar systems.

$61,222 TAX LIEN AGAINST SPEAKES MANUFACTURING CO.

Government Says Amount Is Due for Excise Levy on Cosmetics.

A tax lien for $61,222 against the Speakes Manufacturing Co., 111 South Tenth street, cosmetics makers, was filed in Federal Court yesterday by Collector of Internal Revenue Thomas J. Sheehan.

The sum represents the Government's claim for excise taxes on manufactured products for 1932-35, inclusive. There has been a dispute over computation of the tax.

Amateur Golf Championships on Net This Week

BEGINNING tomorrow, KSD will carry daily stories and summaries of the play in the national amateur golf championship tournament at the Garden City Golf Club, New York, at 3:45 p. m. through Friday. Saturday, the NBC sports experts will cover the finals from 12 noon to 12:15, and will have a full hour some time between 12:15 and 4 o'clock to describe the finish of the tournament. George Hicks and Ben Grauer will head the announcing corps. A caddy will carry a 40-pound short wave transmitter around the course with them, and their play-by-play account will be broadcast by it to be picked up by short wave receiving sets for rebroadcasting over the network.

There will also be resumes of the play in this tournament at 11:05 daily tomorrow through Thursday on the WEAF network and KSD, and a half-hour play-by-play broadcast at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning on the WEAF network.

A description of the running of the Narragansett Special, greatest of New England's horse racing classics, will be broadcast from Pawtucket, Rhode Island, at 2:45 p. m. Wednesday on the CBS chain.

Two hours of description by Ted Husing of the Argentina-America polo matches at Westbury, Long Island, are scheduled at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon on the CBS net and WBBM.

From 2 to 3:30 this afternoon, the CBS net and WBBM (770 kc) will cover the play in the national tennis singles at Forest Hills.

Changes in Program Setup on CBS Net.

FROM 6 to 9 o'clock next Thursday night, the time on the CBS network and KMOX will be occupied by three new shows—Kate Smith's "Bandwagon," from 6 to 7 o'clock; Maj. Bowes' amateurs, from 7 to 8, and "Then and Now," from 8 to 9 o'clock.

Kate Smith and Babe Ruth will try their fortunes as a comedy team on the opening program in a skit written for them by Robert J. Ross, who has done nonsense for George White's "Scandals." If their debut is a success, they plan to continue on the program. Kate also will feature Jack Miller's orchestra, human interest stories, news of the day personalities and remote control news pick-ups.

Maj. Bowes' program will come from the CBS chain's new Broadway theater, whose stage is cushioned on sound-insulating material. It will continue to feature amateurs.

The "Then and Now" show, produced by Bess Johnson, the NBC Chicago actress, will highlight world events and personalities of the past half century with persons of prominence on the stage, and in the movies and in public life as the principals. For the program next Thursday evening, Constance Bennett, Fred Stone and Walter Hampden will play the roles in a drama based on the life of Thomas A. Edison, with Hampden as the inventor.

Fred Astaire To Open KSD Series Tuesday

Will Take Over Program at 7:30—"Story of Mary Marlin" and "Back Stage Wife" Serials Return.

WHEN Fred Astaire, just back from Europe, takes over his program on KSD at 7:30 Tuesday night, he will have among his "guests" Eddie Moran, the original "Moran" of "Moran and Mack," the Two Black Crows, now a Hollywood scenario writer. Astaire, for whom Jack Benny did the formal program opening last Tuesday night, will feature his own impersonation of Bill Robinson, the noted Negro dancer, as he does "Bohangles of Harlem," and will play the lead in a new sketch by Frank Sullivan, the humorist, entitled "The Captain's Dinner on the Brooklyn Ferry." He also will do "Pick Yourself Up" and "The Way You Look Tonight."

In addition, Astaire has billed three members of the Irish Abbey Players, Barty Fitzgerald, Una O'Connor and Joe Kerrigan, in a part of Sean O'Casey's "End of the Beginning."

Astaire has engaged as his permanent comic support Charles Butterworth, the "dead pan" movie and stage comedian. Butterworth, a graduate from the Notre Dame law school and later a newspaper reporter, went on the stage from a monologue act at a Press Club dinner in New York. He played in several Broadway musical comedies, among them "Sweet Adeline" and "Good Boy," and for the past few seasons has worked steadily before the movie cameras.

Kathryn Turney Garten To Have Special Program On KSD This Evening.

KATHRYN TURNEY GARTEN, noted book reviewer, will have the period on KSD from 8 to 8:45 o'clock tonight. She will review Samuel Hopkins Adams' "The Gorgeous Hussy." Miss Garten's dramatic book reviews have aroused widespread interest when broadcast on previous occasions by KSD. She also will broadcast at the same time next Sunday night.

Miss Garten's program will be followed by 15 minutes featuring Allan Clarke, baritone.

Don Ameche and Barbara Luddy will play a romantic comedy, "Peggy Takes the Count," in KSD's First Nighter period Friday night. Ameche will be cast as "Nikki," a light-hearted French nobleman, who gives his secretary most unusual assignments.

KSD is again scheduling Claudine MacDonald's Woman's Radio Review at 2 p. m. Mondays and Fridays.

A salon orchestra led by Julian Krane will play on KSD and the WEAF chain at 12:30 noon Fridays.

Edna Lee Booker, the newspaper writer, will tell, on the Leo Reismann program on KSD Tuesday night, how she pretended to be dead to get an interview with one of the Chinese overlords during an uprising.

Four Serials Added by KSD.

WHEN "The Story of Mary Marlin" serial is resumed, at 10:15 tomorrow morning on KSD, listeners will meet the same characters formerly in the serial and will take up the story where it left off for the summer. The program will be carried by KSD at the same time Monday through Friday.

The period from 8 to 8:30 mornings on KSD Monday through Friday will be occupied by two serials —"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," based on Alice Hegan Rice's book, and "John's Other Wife," built around a triangular conflict involving a department store executive, his comely designer and his wife.

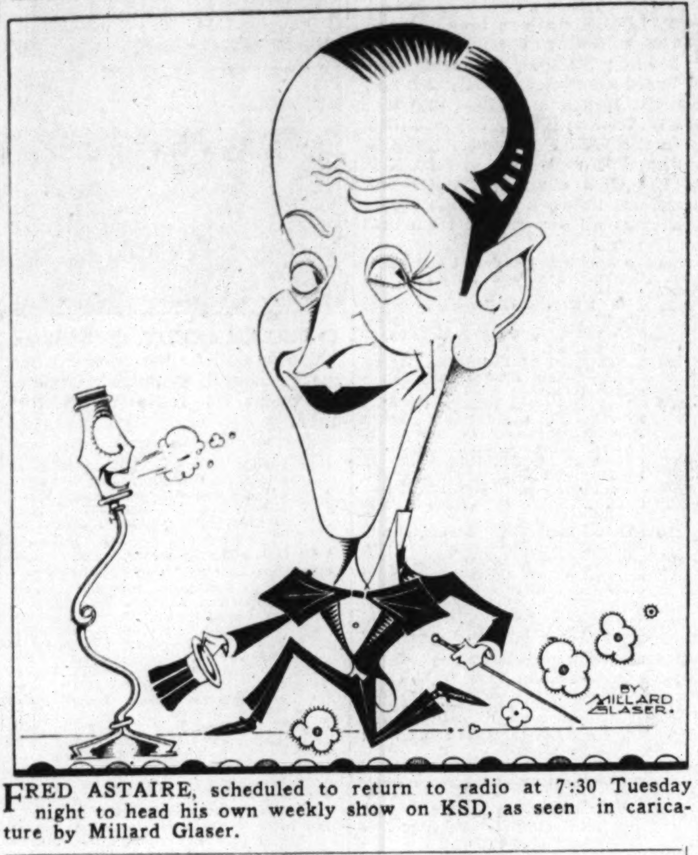
"Backstage Wife," a serial in which Vivian Fridell, one of the leading NBC Chicago studio actors, plays the principal role, will be carried by KSD at 9:15 a. m. Monday through Friday, beginning tomorrow. Miss Fridell, who is only 23 years old, is cast in the serial as "Mary Noble." She has been busy in radio ever since her first year in college when she had her own program on the University of Wisconsin's station. She is unmarried, five feet six inches tall and has golden brown hair.

Harry Sosnick and his orchestra have succeeded Carl Hoff and his band on the program at 8 o'clock Wednesday nights on KSD and KWK. Edith Dick, and Buddy Clark, the singers; the Songsmiths Quartet and Ben Grauer, the announcer, continue on the program.

Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, physician to the Dionne quintuplets, and Ruth Lyon, the soprano, will take part in Morgan L. Eastman's program tomorrow night on KSD.

Rachel Carlay, the French singer starred Sundays on KSD's Manhattan Merry-Go-Round programs, will sing "The Man I Love" in both French and English tonight. She will also sing "My Kingdom for a Kiss" with Pierre Le Kneeun, the tenor. The Men About Town trio and Andy Sanella's orchestra are also regulars on this lively, varied program.

Heads Elaborate KSD Show



BY MILLARD GLASER.

FRED ASTAIRE, scheduled to return to radio at 7:30 Tuesday night to head his own weekly show on KSD, as seen in caricature by Millard Glaser.

Gossip From the Studios

TALBOT MUNDY, who is writing the script for the Jack Armstrong serial, is the author of 34 novels of adventure and numerous short stories. He walked through much of Africa, from north to south and west to east, during the seven years he spent on that continent. For two of the seven years he was a British district commissioner with wide administrative powers and latitude as a Government executive, especially as regarded the natives. Born in England, Mundy is now a citizen of this country, and resides in Maine. He scored his first real writing success with his novel of the India-Afghanistan border, "King of the Khyber Rifles." His most pretentious work is his long series of stories of "Tros," the Samothracean adventurer in the British Isles and Rome in the time of Julius Caesar and in the Mediterranean and Egypt as the frequently unwilling friend of Cleopatra. He has back of him a wealth of experiences hunting tigers in India, fighting in Africa, with King Feisal in the World War and roaming in most of the more savage regions. . . .

Talbot Mundy.

Shirley Temple's mother is said to have refused very determinedly offers to star the little movie actress in a radio series. . . . A detective serial, entitled "Thatcher Colt Mysteries" and based on a fiction character of short stories, novels, newspaper serials and the movies, has been scheduled for KSD at 12:30 noon Sundays, starting Sept. 27. Hanley Stafford, a Pacific Coast movie and radio actor, will play the title role. . . . Don Mario, the tenor, well known to KSD listeners, is being groomed as an orchestra leader for a network program. . . . Clark Gable probably will be a guest on several Rupert Hughes programs. Reports in New York are that before long Harry Richman will succeed Hughes when the latter's 13-week contract expires. . . . Ray Noble, studio gossip has it, has a full year's radio contract and will take over one of the featured programs around the first of the year. . . "The Gumps' serial" will be back on the air on the CBS net Oct. 5.

"Cheerio," for years a morning broadcaster, is to be shifted to an afternoon period starting Sept. 29. . . . Speculation as to Ethel Barrymore's retirement from the stage includes hints that she may head a network show. . . . Shep Fields and his orchestra have been signed for a new program, and talk has it that he may succeed Paul Whiteman. . . . The Flying Red Horse Tavern is expected to drop off the CBS net and KMOX after the broadcast of Sept. 25. . . . The sponsor who bank-rolled Myrt and Marge is considering a "Peggy and Joe" serial by William Hazlitt Upson, author of the "Earthworm Tractors" magazine stories, for its new CBS network schedule planned to start Sept. 28. . . .

Carlton Kadell, the Pacific Coast announcer who has succeeded Bill Hays with Amos 'n' Andy, turns out to have had musical comedy experience, and may become a singing master of ceremonies on a new network commercial. . . . Ray Perkins expects to conclude his mutual network series with his broadcast Sept. 23. . . Henry Weber, musical director for WGN, Chicago, and leader of some of its concerts and musical shows, has been engaged to conduct 10 performances of the Chicago City Opera company. . . . A musical show with dramatic skits has been spotted at 10:30 a. m. on the WEAF net and KSD Nov. 1. . . Stories that the Hollywood Hotel program will go off the air Oct. 1 are countered by statements from the agency handling the show that the cast will remain on the program according to their three-year contracts, which have a year to go. George Burns and Gracie Allen are billed for this show Sept. 25.

KAY THOMPSON, the former St. Louisan who has made her mark on broadcasting with her own singing and piano playing and her Rhythm Girls chorus.

When Kay Thompson, formerly of St. Louis, who is starred with her Rhythm Singers with Andre Kostelanetz, took her idea of a girls' choir to New York a little over a year ago, she tried it successfully with Fred Waring. Then she experimented with it still further with Lennie Hayton. Now she has it worked out until it is accepted as one of the radio features.

She says it is almost the same thing she used to do in church, and that each of her 12 girl singers is a graduate from a church choir in her home community. Jean Norman is from Birmingham, Elizabeth Newburger from Columbus, O.; Marjorie Ballard from Atlanta, Ga.; Marion Jernigan from Augusta, Ga., the three Vass sisters from Charleston, S. C.; Jessie Mahr from Washington, D. C.; the Freeland sisters and Helen Jackson from Bristow, Ok. Only one, Beatrice Wain, is from New York.

Miss Thompson styles all the songs, makes the arrangements, rehearses them, really creates her own effects. Withal, she keeps up her vocal solo work, for she is a blues singer par excellence, and on each program also plays a piano interlude. She was trained to be a concert pianist, but as she says, she graduated from Brahms to blues. . . .

When his Thursday night variety hour is being broadcast over KSD and the WEAF chain, Rudy Vallee's orchestra has two conductors. One is Vallee. The other is a member of his staff. Vallee has to spend so much time walking back and forth between microphones, introducing performers and interviewing, that a second musician has to help him to lead the band. When he isn't busy at the microphones, he leads the orchestra, often taking it over in the middle of a piece. At rehearsals, he does all the conducting.

"Show Boat Is Coming," one of the two new theme songs for KSD's Thursday night program, is the work of two members of the show's staff. Bernie Dougall, script writer, wrote the words and Harold Spina, the music. Jimmy McHugh, a Hollywood writer, wrote the words for the other theme song, "Dream Boat," and Al Goodman, the orchestra leader, the music.

Rapee Starts His Concerts This Evening

Time Division to Prevent KSD Broadcasting Series —Pittsburgh Orchestra Plays at Noon Today.

TODAY'S noteworthy music features are the return of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra at 12 noon and of the symphony orchestra conducted by Erno Rapee at 8 o'clock tonight. Antonio Modarelli will conduct the Pittsburgh orchestra and will have as his soloist Reed Kennedy, the baritone, who sang with marked success in the organization's previous radio series.

Because of time division, KSD will be unable to broadcast the Rapee concerts this fall and winter. Listeners should be able to tune them in on WMAQ (670), WHO (1000), WDA (610), WOW (590), or WEAF (660), the New York key station.

For tonight's Rapee concert, which will be played in Carnegie Hall, New York, as will the others in this series, the soloists will be Albert Spalding, the violinist, and Harold Bauer, the pianist. Spalding will play the second movement from the Mendelssohn Concerto in E-minor, and Bauer the third movement of the Beethoven Concerto, No. 4, in C-major. They will play together the fourth movement of the Cesar Franck Sonata for violin and piano in A-major. The purely orchestra pieces will be the Introduction to the Third Act of "Lohengrin, "Debussy's "Fetes," the third movement of Tschaikowsky's "Symphony Pathetique" and Enesco's "Roumanian Rhapsody."

Alexander Semmler, the pianist, back from a summer in Germany, will resume his Beethoven sonata series at 8:35 this morning over KMOX, playing two movements from the Sonata in B-flat Major. He will play five more Sunday Beethoven programs to complete the cycle of 32 Beethoven works in this classification. Then he will play two recitals of Beethoven music requested by listeners, and then begin a Chopin cycle.

There will be a symphony concert at 7 p. m. today on KMOX.

Walter Damrosch's Music Appreciation Hour concerts will be broadcast by KSD weekly, from 1 to 2 o'clock Friday afternoons, beginning Oct. 2.

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony is programmed for a broadcast from Sweden, at 1:09 p. m. next Sunday, of the opening concert of the fall season in Stockholm. Eugene Ormandy, who will succeed Leopold Stokowski as conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony, will conduct.

With Fritz Reiner as conductor and John Charles Thomas, the baritone, as soloist, the big Sunday night concerts on the CBS net and KMOX will be resumed at 7 o'clock Sept. 20. Reiner will conduct the first five of these concerts. Other conductors will be Alexander Smallens, Eugene Ormandy, Jose Iturbi and Victor Kolar, who conducted the 1934-1935 and 1935-1936 seasons. Kolar will direct eight of the concerts. Soloists already engaged include Mischa Elman, violinist; Josephine Antoine, coloratura soprano; Kirsten Flagstad, the great Metropolitan Opera soprano; Gladys Swarthout, mezzo-soprano; Jose Iturbi, pianist; Richard Crooks, the tenor; Jascha Heifetz, the violinist; Lily Pons of the Metropolitan Opera; Vladimir Horowitz, the pianist, and Nelson Eddy, the baritone.

Preaching Mission Radio Inaugural Today

INAUGURATING the National Preaching Mission, a project designed to bring about a spiritual awakening in this country, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the evangelist, will be interviewed by Dr. Charles L. Goodell of the Sabbath Reveries broadcasts, at 8 o'clock this morning on the WEAF network.

Two hundred ministers, including many of note, will serve in the Mission for three months, visiting in groups 25 major cities for four days and using every available channel to make "a combined spiritual impact upon the community." Dr. Jones has returned from India to work in the campaign.

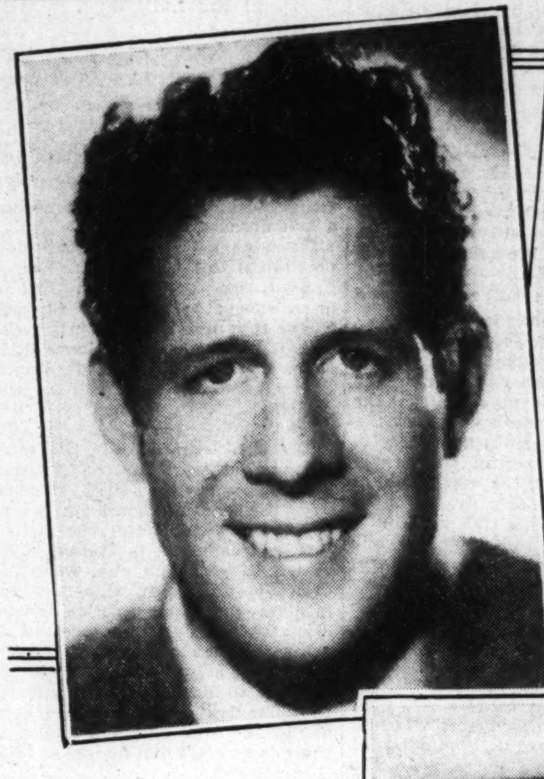
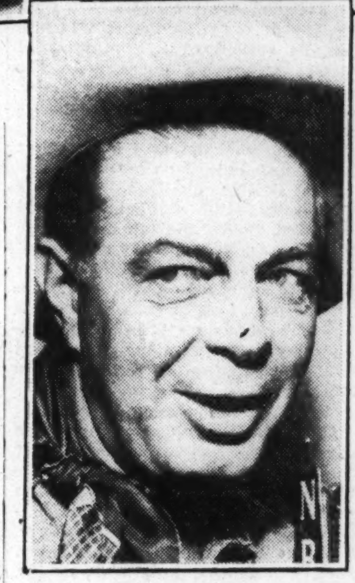
In KSD's Big Three-Hour Thursday Night Bill



RUDY VALLEE, who brings to KSD's audience an all-star show from 6 to 7 o'clock every Thursday night. He has lined up another group of stars for this week's broadcast.

LANNY ROSS, tenor and producer of KSD's Show Boat at 7 o'clock Thursday nights, whose all-star cast includes Helen Jepson, the Metropolitan Opera singer; Sam Schleppermann, the comedian, in a character part as "Horace Nimble"; Ross Graham, the baritone; Molasses 'n January; Honey Dean, and Al Goodman's orchestra.



HOOT GIBSON, the cowboy movie star, who will be featured by Bob Burns with Jackie Coogan, Betty Grable, Guy Kibbe, character actor, and Mischa Levitzki, the pianist from 8 to 9 o'clock Thursday night.

Here and There On the Air

BY J. L. S.

NEXT Sunday night, from 6 to 7 o'clock, KSD will broadcast for the first time a program which has been tremendously popular in the East—the Good Will Court. It is conducted by A. L. Alexander as a free radio tribunal to which anyone who has a legal problem of universal appeal may go to state his case before a microphone and be counseled by two of the New York City Magistrates. The entire proceedings are broadcast. This program will replace that of Maj. Bowes on KSD and the WEAF network.

Hoot Gibson in Bob Burns' Period.

HOOT GIBSON, the cowboy movie star, will be featured by Bob Burns on KSD Thursday night.

Dick Merrill, the aviator who made the trans-Atlantic flight with Harry Richman, will be interviewed on Richard Himber's program at 7:30 tomorrow night on KSD if he returns to New York in time. Himber plans to resume his guest star policy beginning this week.

KSD's Today's Children serial, scheduled at 8:45 a. m. daily except Saturday and Sunday, last Friday began its fourth year of network broadcasting. It is written by Irna Phillips, and revolves around "Mother Moran" and her children.

Eddie Dooley's bi-weekly football forecasts and scores of football games will begin this week. It is set for 4:30 p. m. Thursdays and Saturdays on the CBS net and KMOX. Dooley, formerly an All-American quarterback at Dartmouth College, is widely known as a sports writer.

Students just entering college will be interviewed on their plans, in a broadcast from the campus of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., at 12:45 noon Thursday on the CBS net.

Constitution day will be observed on the CBS net with an address by Glenn Frank, president of Wisconsin University, at 1:30 p. m., and a dramatization, at 3:30 p. m., of happenings in the Constitutional Convention.

Glenn Warner, now football coach at Temple University, will be interviewed on the News of Youth program at 4:15 p. m. Thursday on the CBS net.

Broadcast From Stratford-on-Avon Today

A PROGRAM in connection with the Harvard University Tercentenary celebration will be broadcast from Harvard House at Stratford-on-Avon, England, at 11:45 this morning on KMOX.

Carleton Smith, the music critic who already has broadcast from the Salzburg Festival in Austria and from Moscow, will speak from Helssinski, Finland, at 2:15 p. m. Wednesday on the WJZ network.

Frank Moulan, the comedian, and Nancy McCord, lead player in "May Wine," are billed with Ted Hammerstein Tuesday night, and Ramona, singing pianist of Paul Whiteman's troupe, with Ben Bernie.

Another detective story program is set for 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays on WLW.

Vivian della Chiesa, the soprano, is singing with an orchestra led by Walter Blaufuss at 5:45 p. m. Tuesdays on the WJZ chain.

Clark Dennis, tenor, now has the 8:30 p. m. Monday spot on WMAQ (670).

KSD has scheduled the WEAF network's Moorish Tales, based on Washington Irving's stories and broadcast with a musical background at 4:45 p. m. Fridays.

Charles Sears, the tenor, has a spot on KSD at 5:45 p. m. Mondays and Fridays.

The new Romances of '76, based on episodes in the Revolutionary War, is scheduled on KWK at 6:30 p. m. Sundays. KWK is carrying the Union Station sketches, relating incidents occurring in a typical railroad station, at 7 p. m. Thursdays.

Message by Pope On Networks at 4 A. M. Tomorrow

A RADIO message from Pope Pius XI to the sufferers and refugees from the civil war raging in Spain will be broadcast at 4 o'clock tomorrow morning on the WEAF and WJZ networks.

No details as to the message were obtainable, but Vatican officials said that it would be "important."

This will be the first broadcast by Pope Pius since May 31, last, when he spoke on his seventy-ninth birthday. His message will be delivered in Latin and will be followed immediately by a translation into English. It will be broadcast by HVJ, the Vatican short wave station, and will be picked up by powerful receivers on Long Island for rebroadcasting by the two networks.

HOTEL ASSOCIATION MEETS WEDNESDAY

Final Arrangements for National Session to Be Made at Meeting Today.

Final arrangements for the annual convention of the American Hotel Association, which will open Wednesday at Hotel Statler, will be made this morning by the executive committee of the St. Louis hotel group, meeting at Hotel Jefferson.

The annual meeting of the association, the first to be held in St. Louis, will continue through Saturday with business sessions and programs of entertainment at the Statler and other hotels in the city. More than 500 delegates are expected to attend.

Among the speakers for the business sessions are H. B. Meek, instructor in hotel management courses at Cornell University; Leo Dolan, member of the Canadian Department of Railways and Canals, and E. H. McReynolds, director of publicity and advertising for the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Andrew J. Kavanaugh, Chief of Police of Miami, Fla., has been invited to speak before the protective committee of the association.

Delegates will register at Hotel Statler during the morning of the opening day, followed by a business session there at 2:30 p. m. Senator Bennett Clark is scheduled to welcome the members and Thomas D. Green, president of the association, will preside. At the evening session Frank H. Randolph, head of the department of engineering, Cornell University, will speak on "Air-Conditioning."

Business sessions of the convention will be held at Hotel Jefferson on Thursday, the meetings beginning at 9:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. A dinner dance will be held that evening at Hotel Chase. On Friday the sessions will be held at Hotel Statler, with the annual banquet of the association in the evening at Hotel Jefferson. Dr. William Stanley Sims, New York, will be the principal speaker and Thomas N. Dysart, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, will preside.

The association's annual golf tournament will be held Saturday morning at Sunset Hill Country Club, followed by a luncheon there. During the afternoon the delegates will be taken to Bridlespur Hunt Club for a fox hunt and barbecue.

A special program for women has been ararnged under the direction of Mrs. Nelson Cunliff, manager of the Forest Park Hotel. A bridge tournament and a luncheon will be held for them Thursday at Glen Echo Country Club, and the next day they will tour the city and attend a luncheon at the Park Plaza.

The fifty-sixth annual meeting of the Hotel Men's Mutual Benefit Association will be held Wednesday, beginning at 5 p. m., at Hotel Statler.

TRIBUTE TODAY TO FOUNDER OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Meetings in 68 Churches in Honor of Birthday of Late Dr. F. E. Clark.

Special meetings and services will be held by Christian Endeavor societies in 68 local churches of six denominations today as part of the international celebration of the birthday of Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Christian Endeavor organization, who died in 1927. The organization now has nearly 5,000,000 members among 88 denominations in more than 100 countries. The first society was established in 1881 in Portland, Me.

A new society will be organized at the Trinity Evangelical Church, Grand boulevard and Itaska street, following a banquet tonight. Al Schoenbeck, president of the local union of societies, will speak on "The Challenge of Francis Clark's Life."

The celebrations will culminate in a city-wide rally at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday evening at Winnebago Presbyterian Church, 3436 Winnebago avenue. Dr. G. W. Ray, explorer and missionary, will be the principal speaker.

MERAMEC GUARDS SAVED 20 FROM DROWNING THIS SUMMER

Gave Aid to 27 Others in Danger in River, Red Cross Reports.

Twenty persons were rescued from drowning and aid was given to 27 others who were in danger by the Red Cross Meramec River Patrol this summer, it was announced yesterday.

Since the patrol was organized in 1927 its members have rescued 225 persons. Equally important to rescue work, it was pointed out, is the work of the organization in keeping constant check on the stream and placing warning placards at dangerous spots. The 46 members volunteer to work at least 16 hours a month on Sundays and holidays along the river.

The St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross conducted 24 classes in life saving in the municipal pools during the summer. The enrollment totaled 110, and 24 swimmers received Red Cross certificates in life saving.

HEADS CHARITY FUND DRIVE

B. A. Hoffman to Direct Solicitation in November.

Briggs A. Hoffman will head the general subscriptions division of the United Charities in the fifth annual campaign for funds, to be conducted from Nov. 9 to Nov. 25 to raise funds for 84 charitable and welfare agencies. He will direct 3000 volunteer workers who are to carry on a city-wide solicitation.

LENINGRAD BEST PROTECTED CITY IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Few Minutes by Plane From Finland, It Is Expected to Be Focal Point in Case of Nazi Attack.

SHAM AIR RAIDS FREQUENTLY MADE

Defended by Airdromes, Underground Concentration Rooms, Civilian Gas and Rifle Corps.

By the Associated Press.

LENINGRAD, Sept. 12.—Old St. Petersburg—cradle of the revolution and most vulnerable of the Soviet Union's large cities—stands far to the fore in preparations for the war the Government regards as inevitable.

Gas attacks and drills were instituted here more than a year ago. Complete plans for the protection and care of the civilian population have been formulated.

Civilian preparations, however, are a mere incident in the preparations for war so evident in and around the former Russian capital.

Inasmuch as the Soviet Government strongly suspects neighboring Finland of Fascist and pro-German sympathies, Leningrad is expected to be a focal point of attack in case of war. It lies only a few minutes away from Finland by air, and scarcely an hour distant from Estonia and other Baltic states.

City Ringed by Airdromes.

The Soviets, therefore, have ringed the city with military airdromes basing planes to beat off the first attack in case of invasion. Although no foreigner ever knowingly is let in on the secrets of Russia's defense plans, there is reason to believe the Government has concentrated nearly 1000 airplanes in the greater Leningrad area.

In the May 1, 1935, concentration of air strength that impressed foreign general staffs, 350 planes flew over Leningrad, a number second only to the 800 maneuvering over Moscow itself.

Thousands of mechanized and well-equipped soldiers are likewise concentrated about Leningrad.

In sham air attacks smoke bombs are frequently used. Recent announcements said that 10,000 persons already had been trained in the gas brigades, and that 512,000 persons had passed examination qualifying them as ready to join in the chemical defense of the country.

Underground Concentration.

All over the great city on the Neva, gas chambers and underground concentration rooms are being constructed. Films instructing the populace what to do in case of aerial attacks are a regular feature at the moving picture houses, and a widespread poster campaign of instruction has been launched.

"The glorious city of Lenin is standing like an invincible fortress near our frontier," the Moscow Pravda recently stated. "The Leningrad inhabitants—faithful sons of the Soviet fatherland—show the example of how necessary it is to prepare for gas defense."

Today there are in excess of 200,000 Voroshilov marksmen in Leningrad. These are the civilians, who with deadly seriousness, have qualified as marksmen qualified to defend the country. Admission to the organization requires a score of not less than 84 per cent of hits at a distance of 50 meters (170 feet), shooting from a small-bore rifle.

Civilian Air Clubs an Aid.

The civilian air organizations which form a ready framework for expansion into military service, likewise have provided Leningrad with further means for defense. Recent announcement said the civilian air club had turned out 530 qualified pilots in the last year, together with 5400 persons competent to handle gliders aloft.

The Bolshevists have a practical purpose in preparing a strong defense for Leningrad. Its loss in wartime would paralyze the whole transportation and industrial system of Northern European Russia. In addition to closing the Baltic seaport, one of the very few sea "eyes" the Russians have, failure to hold Leningrad would seriously jeopardize Soviet ports in the White Sea and Arctic Ocean, which connect with Central Russia through or near Leningrad.

There also is a tremendous sentimental value in repelling the invader from the birthplace of the revolution. More by luck than force of arms, the Soviets held the Czarist capital in the turbulent, uncertain days of 1917 and 1918.

COUNTY WELFARE ASSOCIATION TO ASK FOR BUDGET INCREASE

Says $67,00 From Community Fund for 1936 Was Inadequate; Seeks $30,000 More.

The St. Louis County Welfare Association will ask for a $30,000 increase in its budget for 1937 from the Community Fund, it was announced yesterday.

The budget of $67,000 granted the agency for 1936 is inadequate, it was said.

The agency gives service and advice to families on such problems as those caused by illness, misunderstandings between husband and wife, difficulties with children and alcoholism.

Child Asleep During Legal Proceedings

PATRICIA BUDD

FOUR years old, napping in the chambers of Judge Leon Edelman at Chicago, Friday. The Judge ordered the girl returned to her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Packet, of Evanston. The Packets had told the Judge how they had paid the girl's father $100 when they legally adopted the girl and how more money was demanded of them after they had let the girl visit her father. The Judge condemned the adoption "racket."

CONSTITUTION ATTAINS 149TH ANNIVERSARY

Arguments Over Federal and State Questions Lasted All Summer When Written.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Nurtured in controversy amidst doubts whether it would endure, the Constitution reaches its 149th anniversary next Thursday, a subject of fundamental dispute.

Sept. 17 fell on a Monday that year of the beginning, 1787. On the preceding Saturday, in order to wind up the labors that had held them in closed convention in Philadelphia since May, the delegates stayed in session until almost dark.

Their original purpose had been merely to revise the articles of confederation. Argument led to argument throughout the hot summer months, creditor and debtor interests clashed in ways not unlike today, advocates of a strong Federal Government met determined resistance from believers in dominant power for the states.

Bitter Enders Compromise.

Slowly the "bitter-end" spirits gave way to compromise, until finally the question could be put on the charter. "All the states voted Ay.—The Constitution was then ordered to be engrossed," wrote James Madison later.

A week-end of rest, and the delegates reassembled in that chamber where the Declaration of Independence had been signed. The new document rested on a table in front of the Southern gentleman who presided, George Washington. Two uncontested alterations were made; 39 signatures affixed; and — as Washington's diary recites—the "members adjourned to the city tavern, dined together and took cor dial leave of each other."

Within a year, on Sept. 13, 1788, ratifications by the states made it possible for Congress to proclaim the Constitution in force. The first 10 "bill of rights" amendments followed in quick order; and 11 more have been added since in the almost perennial conflict of opinion about just what was or was not intended in the first place.

Its Place in Campaign.

Although to a less extent than was predicted a year ago, the constitutional discussion has its place in the presidential campaign. The Republican platform imputed usurpation of states and popular rights to the New Deal, and advocated states laws and interstate compacts to achieve wage and hour guarantees for women "within the Constitution as it now standes."

The Supreme Court invalidation of the New York wage and hour law had focussed that question. Gov. Landon stepped out ahead of the platform before he was nominated, favoring a wage and hour constitutional amendment if the New York decision holds fast.

The Democratic platform pledges that, unless problems like natural disasters, wage, hour and working conditions, and unfair business practices can be solved within the Constitution as it stands, amendment will be sought.

Many Go to See Document.

While back and forth go the arguments, some of them reminiscent of differences in the constitutional convention itself, each passing day brings its clusters of visitors to the Library of Congress to look down on the venerated parchment. Some words have faded in the passing of years; now a yellowish screen serves as protection from the light rays.

Whether the document will be moved to a new display case, in the Archives Building, is a question yet to be decided. A place has been reserved there in an impressive marble setting, beneath a location for a mural depicting Madison submitting the Constitution to Washington and the convention.

Constitution day first was observed in 1887, the centenary of the signing. Congress has voted funds for a sesquicentennial observance next year.

CORNERSTONE LAYING FOR NEW POSTOFFICE

Ceremony to Be Held Saturday at Seventeenth and Market Streets.

The cornerstone of the new Postoffice building at Seventeenth and Market streets will be laid next Saturday afternoon about 1 o'clock. Principal speakers will be Smith W. Putnam, fourth assistant Postmaster General, and W. Englebert Reynolds, assistant director of the procurement division, public building branch, United States Treasury.

Preceding the ceremony there will be a parade of more than 2700 Postoffice employes. The parade will start at noon from Twelfth boulevard and Locust streets and will pass the old Federal building at Ninth and Olive streets, which contained the main Postoffice from 1884 to 1912, and the old Custom House at Third and Olive, which contained the Postoffice from 1859 to 1884. From Third and Market streets the parade will proceed west to Eighteenth street, past the reviewing stand at Seventeenth.

Other speakers at the cornerstone ceremony will be Congressmen John J. Cochran and Thomas C. Hennings Jr. United States Senator Bennett C. Clark will be chairman.

After the ceremony a bronze marker, provided by the Service Relations Council of the St. Louis Postoffice, will be dedicated on the site, at Third and Elm streets, where St. Louis' first Postoffice was opened in 1804.

A dinner for Postoffice officials will be given at Hotel Statler at 7 p. m. Among the speakers will be Postmaster William H. McCarthy of San Francisco.

MRS. ELIZABETH M'CLURKIN ESTATE WILLED TO HOSPITAL

Holdings Inventoried at $36,000; $200 Bequest for Masses for Hersself and Husband.

The estate of Mrs. Elizabeth McClurkin, who died July 17, is valued a t$36,957 in an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday. Her will bequeathed her whole estate, with the exception of $200 for masses, to St. Ann's Maternity Hospital and Widows' Home, 5301 Page boulevard, where she lived at the time of her death.

Mrs. McClurkin was the widow of John McClurkin, a mail carrier. The bequest for masses is to St. Mark's Church, the masses to be said for herself and her husband. Her will provided that St. Ann's institution was to take care of her sister, Miss Mary Kirby, for the rest of her life. Vincent McShane, attorney for the estate, said he had been unable to locate Miss Kirby but said he understood she is alive.

Assets of the estate include $25,466 in bonds, real estate valued at $6000, cash $5466, and jewelry $24. The realty is at 5085 Wells avenue and 4735 Newcum place. The Rev. John T. Sesnon, pastor of St. Mark's Church, was appointed executor under the will.

GOODWILL NURSERY YEAR

34 Babies Enrolled During Day Beginning New Period.

Forty-three babies were enrolled at the Goodwill Day Nursery, 1910 North Thirteenth street, for the new fiscal year which began last week.

The children are left at the nursery during the day by women working downtown who have nobody to care for the children.

Some of the land now for sale and advertised in the Real Estate Pages of the Post-Dispatch daily and Sunday may offer investment possibilities.

GENERAL PERSHING 76 YEARS OLD TODAY

"Black Jack" Still Erect and Sprightly—Often in His Washington Office.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Active military days have been over for Gen. John J. Pershing for 12 years now, but his interest in the army he commanded throughout the World War remains the same. He will be 76 years old tomorrow.

Erect and sprightly yet, he spends much of his time when here in the company of men he saw grow up in the service and who now run the War Department. His blue-gray eyes and square chin are as of old beneath hair that has turned gray.

"Black Jack"—as so many knew him—carries his numerous honors as becomingly as he does his years. One of the latest is membership in the Academy of Morals and Sciences in the Institute of France, recently bestowed.

He finds real pleasure, too, in looking back to the beginning of his military career, when he entered West Point in 1882 at the age of 22.

Familiar Figure in Paris.

The General is a familiar figure also in Paris where he has spent at least three or four months each year since he was "over there." He is chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission.

To the General's personal interest is due largely the beautiful memorials on French and other battlefields commemorating the services of the American forces in Europe during the World War. Congress created the commission, which the General heads, to prepare plans and erect suitable memorials. It has functioned actively and has about completed its work.

Just now the General is in Paris where he went in June this year. His duties probably will keep him in Europe until the beginning of November. Then he will return to Washington to continue his work here.

In a large, airy room in the War Department, overlooking the White House and formerly occupied by the Secretary of the Navy, Gen. Pershing makes his headquarters. Over the door is a modest sign reading: "General of the Armies." That is a permanent rank bestowed upon him by act of Congress.

Usually Walks to Work.

Making his home in a hotel three or four blocks from the White House and the War Department, Gen. Pershing usually walks to work. His duties are sufficient to keep him moderately busy while he is in Washington but he often finds time to canter through the parks on his favorite saddle horse.

Gen. Pershing has traveled considerably since he retired. His health keeps pretty good, but the army doctors have confined him a number of times to the Army Medical Center here for rest and observation. During the winters he usually makes a brief visit to Tucson, Ariz.

The eldest of nine children, Gen. Pershing was born in Linn County, Missouri, in 1860, and was named "John Joseph."

U. S. ENVOY QUITS PEIPING BUT KEEPS STAFF THERE

Moves to Nanking But Avoids Yielding Rights to Maintain Troops in Old Chinese Capital.

By the Associated Press.

PIEPING, Sept. 12. — Nelson T. Johnson of Oklahoma, United States Ambassador to China, has moved to the new American Embassy at Nanking, seat of the Chinese National Government. He is among the last of the Ambassadors of the major powers to leave Peiping.

Johnson, who has seen 25 years of diplomatic service in China, will keep a reduced consular and diplomatic staff here to keep in touch with Chinese-Japanese political and military developments and to deal with American passport and trade matters, as well as other interests of Uncle Sam.

In view of the increasingly dangerous situation in North China, due to Japan's apparent intention of gaining control over that area, the United States will continue to maintain, here and at Tientsin, about 1200 American marines to guard American lives and interests in North China in the event of war.

These are the main reasons why the American Embassy cannot withdraw altogether from Peiping to the new capital. If the Embassy were to move altogether, the American Government undoubtedly would lose the right, under the Boxer protocol of 1900, to maintain garrisons at the ancient capital and at Tientsin, Peiping's exit to the sea. Peiping would then revert to the status of an ordinary Chinese city, and it is thought many Americans resident here would move.

CHICAGO RIVER IN REVERSE

Heavy Rain Sends Stream Into Lake First Time in Years.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—The Chicago River reversed its flow last night during a heavy rain and poured into Lake Michigan.

Years ago the flow, originally into the lake, was changed to provide water for the sanitary district and the Illinois waterways, but one and one-half inches of rain, coupled with low barometric pressure over Lake Michigan, reversed the course for about two hours. Engineers ordered the gates at the Lockport control plant opened wide, sending the river back to normal within a short time.

Text of Baltimore Sun Editorial Telling Why It Will Not Support Roosevelt in November

President Turned Away From Letter and Spirit of Platform and His First Acts, Newspaper Says.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 12.—Following is the text of the editorial in the Baltimore Sun, which yesterday declared it could not support President Roosevelt for reelection:

"Within 60 days the people must make their choice in the presidential election. It is, therefore, incumbent upon those who undertake to address themselves to public opinion to give expression to their views. The Sun now states that in this campaign it is unable to advocate the reelection of President Roosevelt.

This statement is made with regret. We remember Mr. Roosevelt's courage in the black days of March, 1933. We respect his devotion to the cause of the unfortunate. We believe he has created in many citizens a new sense of civic duty. We admire him for the enemies he has made among pirates of high finance. Standing at the cross roads and looking back over three years, memories of gallantry arise in the mind and they make criticism an unpleasant task. But we cannot close our eyes to what we conceive to have been fundamental errors in Mr. Roosevelt's policies.

In April, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt began to turn away from the spirit, and to a large extent the letter, of his platform and from the spirit of his first acts as President. He inaugurated the New Deal and he based it upon vaguely formed and superficially considered ideas of planned economy. These ideas were directed toward Nationalistic limitation of economic life and toward overriding Federal control of economic life within this nation. The Sun was definitely opposed to the concept and to the details.

Roosevelt's Gold Policy.

We opposed the President's gold policy, which was a part of the concept, and we think his later caution proved the wisdom of opposition. We opposed the silver policy. We opposed the price-fixing, production-controlling national recovery act. We opposed AAA and its plowing under of food products. We protested the truculent message with which Mr. Roosevelt in July, 1933, wrecked the world economic conference.

Moreover, in those special undertakings in which Mr. Roosevelt has been right in purpose, it has been necessary to criticise practice. Relief, CWA and WPA have been extravagant. Unemployment insurance and old-age pensions, which are necessary and long overdue, have been badly organized. TVA has passed beyond the status of a power yardstick at Muscle Shoals and threatens to become a Government octopus. In legislating to regulate security markets and holding companies, the innocents were jeopardized in pursuit of the guilty.

In short, there has been little of an economic character in the administration that the Sun has been able whole-heartedly to support save the work of the step-child of the administration Cordell Hull.

Stand on "Hooverism."

But opposition to Mr. Roosevelt does not mean support of Hooverism or of old guardism. In 1933, some of our readers seemed to be unable to understand how we could oppose Mr. Roosevelt's hastily contrived schemes of planned economy without indorsing the course of the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover regime. They were wrong then in thinking there was no other alternative, and they will be wrong now if they think there is no alternative. We think this can be shown.

The Sun stands for competitive capitalism. It is the system which most effectively uproots the unfit, the unworthy, the lazy. It is the system which gives place to the vigorous, the competent, the purposeful. It is the system which constantly provides room for originality and thereby constantly enlarges achievement. It is the system which carries technological advance to its rational conclusion of lower prices and increased mass consumption. Even as distorted in recent periods it has produced in this country a degree of well-being which has never been equaled, and in that well-being all classes of men have shared. In the worst of depressions, our store of resources has been such that we have been able to extend relief on a scale probably without precedent.

This system is not inconsistent with social responsibility. On the contrary, we have set the pace for the world in public education and in philanthropy. Within this system modern instruments for the relief of the unfortunate and the handicapped have been established and can be expended. Within this system labor may organize and exercise its rights to bargain collectively. Progressively wise distribution of wealth need not be an insoluble problem, if we but persist in the policy which produces an abundant store of wealth to distribute among the people.

Political Liberty.

This system of competition is, moreover, the protection of political liberty. It is the best protection for the ordinary citizen, the working man. In 1933 the Sun contended that planned economy could not be effectual without such control over individuals as would negative liberty. It was not long before NRA made that fact apparent. Further proof is piled up each day in the planned economies of the Right and of the Left in Europe. When government controls one's property, government controls one's vote. It is the economic freedom of competition which guards political freedom. It is the economic freedom of competition which gives the ordinary man his best defense against coercion.

Holding these views, it is no more possible for the Sun to give its support to Hooverism or to Old Guardism than to give support to Rooseveltism. The period between 1920 and 1932 as a period in which private restraint upon competition became the rule and was fostered by the government. Private control of production and private fixing of prices spread with scarcely a gesture of disapproval by the government. On the contrary, tariff policies, debt policies, credit policies and law-enforcement policies supported the manipulators.

There is truth in the statement made by Newton D. Baker, Lewis W. Douglas and Leo Wolman that Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to regulate industry were but an extension of the policies of the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover regime. The latter fostered monopolies at the expense of competitive capitalism, even while professing to be the guardian angel of capitalism. Mr. Roosevelt, instead of attacking the conditions he found, as his platform directed, accepted them, and attempted to regulate them from Washington behind the alluring facade of planned economy.

Where Does Landon Stand?

This question new presents itself: Where does Gov. Landon stand? Does he propose merely to take over what is left of the New Deal and to administer it more economically? Does he propose to revert to Hooverism? Or does he stand for genuinely free competition?

It can be argued, with some effectiveness, that if he stands merely for economical administration of the New Deal, something would be gained by his election. If we are to go on with a program in which Cordell Hull, who understands and serves the competitive system, is to be treated as a lonely step child, while the administration plays with schemes for direct or indirect control of our daily affairs and pays subsidies in all directions, then it would be something to have a frugal, careful man in the White House. But we should recognize that his frugalities would be in pennies, not in dollars. The paternalistic bounty system feeds upon itself as the farm bounties have shown.

There is, in brief, little ground for enthusiasm over a merely frugal Roosevelt. For acceptance of such an alternative means acceptance of the essential fact of Rooseveltism and limits debate to shades of emphasis and administration. No effectual steps could be looked for to break down restraints on trade. Enterprise would be undermined with consequent undermining of employment, as at present, and relief charges would continue to be a burden and a danger, as at present. Meantime, groups would continue to appear with demands for subsidy in compensation for disadvantages under which they labor because of restraints on trade practiced by other groups with the Federal Government's connivance.

Does Gov. Landon believe any of this? And does he believe that the fundamental policy to which the Government should commit itself is a genuine competitive system, with such liberal adjustments in lower tariff policies, in debt policies, in credit policies, in currency stabilization policies, in law enforcement policies and in labor policies as will promote the kind of competition that is healthy and real?

"Confession of Faith."

In The Sun's opinion there is reason to believe that he does. His brief confession of faith at his birthplace pointed in that direction and there have been hints and indications in other speeches, as in certain of his acts before he became a candidate. But the fact remains that he has not taken a position in terms that commit him or his party. He has not taken a position in terms that would form the public support he will need if, being elected, he attempted to reverse the whole system of restraints on trade—as practiced by Hoover or as practiced by Roosevelt—and sought to release the constructive energies of the free competitive system at home and abroad. Gov. Landon has not spoken in terms that bind him. It is still possible for him to be another Roosevelt or another Hoover and to eat very few of his words.

And, in failure thus far to speak in unequivocal terms in favor of a return to economic liberalism, he not only has failed to give the leadership that is required in domestic affairs. He also has failed to give the leadership that is required in our foreign relations. The accumulating threats of general war in Europe are a menace to our well-being. General war in Europe will create a vast popular demand for economic withdrawal to assure safety against military involvement. The cost of economic withdrawal would be staggering. Therefore, it is the part of self-interest to help restore order in Europe.

But preaching will not help. Only by liberal economic policies, the freeing of trade and of finance and the relieving of economic tensions, can we help Europe and guard ourselves.

Shall we have social responsibility? An emphatic yes. Shall we have old-age pensions? Yes. Shall we have unemployment insurance? Yes. Shall we guard the helpless, the unfortunate, the handicapped? Yes. But, as the sure foundation of it all, let us restore and preserve the system which produces in abundance the wealth with which we support both the fortunate and the unfortunate.

If Gov. Landon speaks in clear and bold terms, facing specific problems and taking his stand unequivocally on the side of this true economic liberalism, the Sun will support him, no matter what his prospects may be. If he does not speak in clear terms, the Sun intends to continue to fight for ideas that it believes to be sound and in the interest of the people and will make the best of a situation in which it cannot advocate the election of either candidate.

HUMAN HEADS IN MAIL

Postmaster at Rangoon Objects to Frequent Practice.

RANGOON, Burma, Sept. 11.—A baffled but irate Postmaster has asked the home city natives of North Burma to "please discontinue the practice" of sending human heads through the mail.

"I admit," he wrote to one such sender, "that there is no specific reference to this in the regulations. I am aware, of course, that Bil Khwal was killed in action and that some trophy belonging to his enemy might properly be sent to his relatives. Nevertheless, the dispatch by registered parcel post of human heads is open to grave objections, and I must insist that the practice be discontinued at once."

In the HOLLYWOOD WHIRL

by
Margaret Post Niemeyer
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 12.

WELL, all of us, the stars, the smaller fry and the rest, got back to work after the holidays with only two casualties. A studio publicity man was badly injured in an automobile wreck on his way home and the usually quiet and untemperamental Loretta Young flew into a huff with her bosses out at 20th Century-Fox and failed to show up for work in the picture, "Lloyds of London," last Tuesday morning. Instead of going to Arrowhead for a two-day vacation the lovely Loretta hopped on a boat and sailed off for Honolulu. She had complained that she just didn't care for the part, which was the lead in the film but everyone thought she would play it anyway.

LORETTA YOUNG

Now it is rumored that she will remain on the island until Director Eddie Sutherland can follow her there in a few weeks so that they can be married while ukuleles strum the Wedding March. It will, incidently be the fifth time that Eddie has marched to that tune. Miss Young has married only once before. But if Miss Young didn't think the lead in "Lloyds of London" was worthy of her talents it was different with Anita Louise. Fox promptly borrowed her from Warners and when I saw Anita at lunch yesterday she told me the part was a grand one and that she was tickled to death to get it.

—o—o—

Yesterday, too, I ran into Jean Muir on a studio set, languishing in the arms of handsome Donald Wood under a battery of hot kleig lights making "stills" for "Once a Doctor," in which they were co-starring. It was a hot day, too, even here in Hollywood, and neither of them being dressed in particularly cool clothing they were evidently glad when the camera man finished with his work and they could leave the set. Love is like that in Hollywood. You turn on the lights and you turn on love; off go the lights and the ardent lovers part with scarcely a word, each going his own particular way, and this time they each started for their dressing room.

—o—o—

● JEAN, SEEING ME, took me in her dressing room and we visited for almost an hour, discussing fall clothes. I finally had to leave, for I had a date to meet Olivia de Haviland and Beverely Roberts for lunch in the studio cafe. I found them there at a table and I am sure you would never have recognized Olivia. As a matter of fact I didn't myself at first for the heroine of Anthony Adverse had her head bound up in an ordinary tea towel and looked much more like an extraordinarily good-looking parlor maid on dusting day than a movie star. But it developed that Perce Westmore was evolving something new for her in the way of a hair-do and as the lunch hour had arrived before it was completed the work was just covered up and left for finishing later.

—o—o—

And Beverely was feeling pretty miserable, having just come from a dentist's chair. But she was looking very smart, just the same, in a culotte outfit in pottery colors, the skirt being a sort of henna and the blouse a soft blue. Just as we were finishing lunch we were joined by Jane Wyman, one of the newest of the young players who hails, she told me, from St. Joseph, Mo. She had often visited in St. Louis, she said, when her older brother, who has since died, was studying medicine there.

—o—o—

● JANE HERSELF is quite a singer and told us that at a recent style show she attended she sang and afterwards she was given two lovely dresses which she went on to describe. But I can't remember the least detail of them because I was so bewildered by the costume she was wearing right then. First there was a green wool one-piece frock which fastened with huge buttons of polished wood and two wooden bracelets were on one of her wrists. But I could scarcely believe my eyes when I looked at her hat and saw that its crown was fashioned from a small square of the same polished wood. The rest of the hat, or rather beret I suppose you would call it, was of crocheted beige wool, edged in green. Her short, black curls turned up saucily all around it. She said she had found the novel outfit down at Laguna Beach where she spent the holidays. Evidently Laguna is getting smart-clothes conscious, too.

—o—o—

Elissa Landi, who tells me she is gathering material for another new novel, but which will have to be sidetracked at least until she finishes her work on "The White Dragon," was looking very attractive at the Trocadero a night or so ago in a gown of beige chiffon and with her hair piled high on her head in little curls and fastened in place by jeweled combs.

At the same place I glimpsed Virginia Bruce just as she was leaving so did not see what she was wearing under her wrap. But who cares when the wrap itself was such a truly regal affair, being a reversible cape of Russian sables and ermine.

—o—o—

I RAN ACROSS Alice Brady, who gives a magnificent performance in the latest hit picture, "My Man Godfrey," the other day as she was coming from the meeting of "The Tail Waggers' Association." As you might guess this is an organization devoted to the canine families of Hollywood and Miss Brady is much interested because she has a number of blue-blooded wire-haired terriers of her own. She told me that just a few nights previously she had attended a preview and was feeling very elegant indeed in her latest extravagance, a wrap of very rare and very expensive black chinchilla. As she left the theater she overheard the conversation of two little girl autograph collectors. Said the first, "I just got Jean Harlow's autograph and she had on the swellest coat, all white, ermine I guess." The second child was not so enthusiastic. "I got Alice Brady," she

FROM TENEMENTS To GRAND OPERA

Success Story Of BODANSKAYA

Girl From New York's East Side Will Sing 19 Roles During Metropolitan's Coming Season.

By DOROTHY COLEMAN

Miss Bodanskaya walking a tight rope as Esmeralda in "The Bartered Bride."

Glancing at a book of music in the New York penthouse apartment where she is now living.

. . . Practice . . . practice . . . practice . . . and she can play her own accompaniment.

FROM the jungles of New York's lower East Side . . . clanging street cars, rumbling "L" trains, squalling children, fruit vendors, rowdy street gamins . . . from this section where too much humanity lives and moves and has its being came Natalie Bodanskaya, 23-year-old daughter of Russian-born parents, to sing her way into 19 roles during the coming Metropolitan Grand Opera season.

Miss Bodanskaya was a part of that life, she told me recently in New York, a life now far removed, and all because of her lovely lyric soprano voice. It gained her fame, and a promise of fortune, when she made her debut in the spring season of the Met.

"Oh yes, two or three of the boys I used to play ball with have ended in the electric chair," she said in mentioning the tough district in which she was reared. Learning that "he who slaps first gets to first base," as she put it, made a tomboy out of "Tillie," and now, at 23, she is still one, with self-reliance in her chin, and green eyes capable of flashing a danger signal.

"I used to be a pretty little girl in pink and blue organdies and white slippers until Mom—there was a separation—had to move us three kids to the East Side. The first day we were there I think a big bully must have pushed me in the face, because right away my six-year-old mind caught on that I would have to get out of organdies and into trousers if I was going to punch back."

She still prefers to dress for comfort. The morning I called on her she was in blue polka-dot shorts and shirt, and brown sandals, not fancy ones with a French name. Just sandals, the kind with holes in the toe like apple pie and buckles that always used to pinch over bare feet. She's not exactly pretty, but after you recover from the shock of finding her very brunette instead of blonde like her pictures in costume, you begin to realize that the green eyes and the large mouth possess great vivacity.

It was 11 o'clock in the morning, but Miss Bodanskaya was just up. She was staying at the penthouse apartment of her lawyer and his wife up on West Eighty-first street, supposedly taking it easy after a recent operation for chronic appendicitis. "All I ask of life is a chance to get my hair washed," she moaned like every other woman lately released from the hospital.

But she discovered it would take more than a shampoo and a finger wave to complete her recovery, when she tried to sprint to the telephone to answer a call from "Bill." She and Bill are going to be married when his career as professor of medieval philosophy at the University of Chicago and hers at the Metropolitan will give them a spare moment.

It doesn't look as if that would be this season, for Miss Bodanskaya has, as told, 19 grand opera roles ahead of her, 12 of which, at least, she is expected to have under her belt before the opening.

When Edward Johnson gave the youngster her contract he was fulfilling the promises he made when he succeeded Gatti-Casazza last fall as manager of the Met. For years Gatti-Casazza had played up foreign singers. Without lowering the standard of performances, Johnson intended to give American-born singers a break, and initiated the spring season of opera for that very purpose.

Undoubtedly Bodanskaya will sing again this fall the lyric soprano role of Micaela in "Carmen," which rocketed her into fame in the spring. And probably she will repeat the part of the circus acrobat, Esmeralda, in "The Bartered Bride," which added to her popularity later in the season. She is one of the few prima donnas who could be taught to walk the tight rope (in reality, a narrow plank) with a parasol for balance.

—o-o—

"BALANCHINE, choreographer of the American ballet, and director of the dancing in 'The Bartered Eride,' refuses to believe I was Bodanskaya when I reported for my first lesson," the singer recalled with candor, "because he was used to teaching the polka to divans with a tonnage like the Queen Mary. And when he found I knew the positions of classical ballet—well, he was speechless. I remembered just enough of what I had learned at an East Side settlement house a few years before to give some authenticity to the part.

Miss Bodanskaya—it's easy the way she says it with the accent on the second syllable—owes a good deal to that settlement house. "I literally lived there, when I didn't have to be home minding my kid brother and sister while Mother was working at the shirt factory, or when I wasn't supplementing the family income by wrapping packages in a department store or keeping neighborhood kids out of trouble at two cents a head."

It was Mrs. Janet Schenck, head of the Union Settlement House, and later founder of the Neighborhood Music School, who first recognized quality in the voice of this tomboy girl. Mrs. Schenck persuaded Tillie to save the voice for something a little better than yelling at other children, and encouraged her visits to a music dealer on Third avenue, who let her listen to records of Caruso.

"One day when I was there going through the catalogues, I came upon a picture of a buxom singer in an hourglass costume, the worst kind of operatic get-up you can imagine. The name under the picture was Marcella Sembrich. That didn't mean anything to me. I was just a 16-year-old kid who'd as soon have sung in the alleys if being an opera singer made you look like that. Neither did it mean anything to me when Mrs. Schenck said she was going to take me to sing for a famous teacher. But when I found out it was for that woman in the record catalogue, I balked. They almost had to drag me to her studio. And then I promptly fell in love with her. When the teacher said to me, 'Bodanskaya, yah? Your family—do they speak Roosian?' I replied, 'No, they are too busy learning English.' She rather liked that."

That summer, the summer of 1929, Mme. Sembrich took Natalie Bodanskaya with her to her home on Lake George, where more than one young Metropolitan singer has had

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.

THE gayest and gaudiest of the town's mantraps, the French Casino, still dominates the field of midnight entertainment and stages a floor show that makes any other brightlight rowdy-dow small chips by comparison. Old-timers who knew Broadway in that wistful time when—in the days of Bustanoby's Reisenweber's and a cab rank of electric broughams outside the Beaux Arts Restaurant—say that none of the fabled floor shows of the era had half the Casino's cachet of authentic sparkle and freshness.

Clifford Fischer, who stages the show, has wit in addition to a flair for imaginative costume and girls who will drive you out of what you call with a titter your mind, a combination of assets which are probably causing the late Mr. Ziegfeld, who had all the humor of a bank auditor, simply to whisk over and over in his grave. There is no impropriety in comparing Mr. Fischer to Ziggy, unless Mr. Fischer should happen to object to the association, and some idea of the appreciation his floor shows are getting may be gained from the fact that the Ritz Carlton has retained him to arrange a series of Sunday night divertissements in that poshest of restaurants.

The other assets of the Casino are its spacious gangways, promenades and stairways, all of them advantageous settings to parade smart evening gowns, and the meticulous precision of its service. The way the captains have their staff in hand could show things to the maitres of a number of the town's more pretentious resorts. Waiters don't get between patrons and the show, and drinks from the service bar arrive almost before they're commanded. If the proprietors of the Casino are up to their necks in profits, as legend has it in Longacre Square, it is only because they give their patrons more excitement and better goods for their money than any place else in their field.

NONE of the recurrent manifestations of the Manhattan glitter scene so closely approaches farce as the descent on the metropolis of film folk full of high purpose and determination to show the world what to do with finger bowls. Fresh from the champagne and liverwurst civilization of Hollywood and coked to the eyebrows on fan mail, they arrive, hankies in the hand and prepared to blow kisses to the thousands assembled to welcome them.

Sometimes a press agent has rented half a dozen fly-blown mourners from the nearest undertaking parlor to make dismal hurrah for the occasion, or a photographer from a puff sheet is there, but generally a screen actress rates about the attention in Manhattan of a post-Ederle channel swimmer.

Fairly awash with airs and graces and rigged out in costumes that would give Mrs. S. Stanwood Mencken the vapors, they then set out to conquer the beau monde and mostly contrive to attract attention to themselves by tripping on their trains and burping out loud at first nights.

Last week's arrival in the mad urban midst was a honey. She showed up here and there at a first night, the Stork Club or a not-too-private restaurant, and wanted it known that there was to be no demonstration, just have a few extra police to keep the crowds back and a spotlight or two, in case the photographers really insisted, but, please, please, nothing to attract any attention.

Modesty prevented her from parading the length of the Empire lobby more than 15 or 20 times during intermission and the desire to escape notice posed her in the front of the "royal box" at a night club some 10 minutes, acknowledging imagined salutations. Having whisked around New York for a week, especially wherever there might be a photographer or a newspaper paragrapher on tap, she began to attract attention. The word got around that she was really some important film actress in disguise.

—o-o—

THE PALM FOR the neatest trick of the week in the way of promotion goes to Town Casino Club, a nearby neighbor of Leon and Eddie's, Jack and Charlie's and the other Fifty-second street mantraps. Sensing the public's predilection for obtruding itself into the background whenever a photographer trains a lens on a celebrity, the club's management rented a battery of floodlights, mounted an ancient motion picture camera in its front areaway and turned its precincts and the adjacent sidewalk into a gaudily illuminated setting suggestive of big doings and visiting firemen of headline proportions.

Recalling that quite a number of otherwise anonymous folk had achieved a sort of fame when a newsreel filmed the interior of "21"

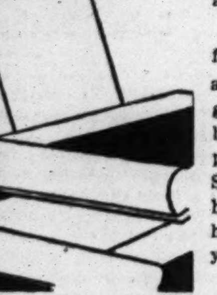
MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

MY PROBLEM is this: I have been going with a young lady for several years and we were really in love. Recently she took a trip and met someone else whom she also learned to like very much. Now she cannot make up her mind whom to choose.



She has been very decent about the whole affair and I appreciate that very much. Therefore I want to be as gentlemanly about it as possible.

My unknown rival is a great distance from here and I just do not know how to attack my problem. I could be the aggressor and again sweep her off her feet, but would that be fair when the other person is not here to defend himself? Should I just be silent and let her make her own decision? What is the most honorable position to take? Respectfully yours, I. L. J.

You should be rejoicing, young man, that you are here and your rival miles away from the scene of action, for geography plays an important role in courtships.

The chances are that the young lady has merely had a summer infatuation, which she will forget in as short a time as it developed. I cannot see, however, why it is necessary for her to make any decision in the matter, unless you and he have proposed matrimony in the near future.

In that case, any gentlemanly arguments you can use, including dignified gifts, would be perfectly fair. Avoid the subject of the rival until she brings it up. If you pretend to ignore him, she may, too, in time.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM AT THE END of my wits. I have an inferiority complex which is destroying my personality. I feel as though everyone is laughing at me.

My leisure time is not the best. It seems as though it is spent in doing nothing but gazing into space. I am told that I am very self-conscious. This is beginning to worry me, because I know I am shy and ill at ease most of the time. I do not know whether I am bordering on a nervous breakdown or not. Perhaps I should see a nerve specialist. My mother and I are constantly getting in arguments. When I say I am depressed, she does not try to help me but merely condemns, saying I have nothing to be depressed about. I am corresponding with a friend in another city but even this does not seem worthwhile. Yours truly, M. T. B.

You have made a move in the right direction by starting correspondence with a friend away from the city. The more interests outside yourself—and the farther removed the better—you can develop, the sooner you will overcome your feeling of inferiority. Have you a hobby? If so, ride it hard. Have you tried active participation in sports? What about books, and music, and friends. Cultivate a few with real vitality and an enthusiasm for what they are doing.

If you cannot snap out of your melancholia with such self-administered treatment, then I should by all means consult an able psychiatrist.

—o-o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A GIRL 18 years old, and had been going with a man, 35, with whom I was very much in love. I still care for him. We had intentions of marriage until I started "dating" other boys. He found it out and broke the engagement. It has been three months since we broke up but he still drops by once a week.

Mrs. Carr, I have found that I care for him more than ever. Is there any way at all I could make him have faith in me again?

BROKEN-HEARTED.

Are you quite sure you would be willing to go through a marriage now, with a man almost twice your age? It would mean giving up forever dates with younger men, even though you found them really more congenial. If you are ready to quit running around, the only way you can make your former suitor realize it, is to stop seeing other young men.

He may realize that the disparity in your ages, which is obviously at the bottom of your present difficulties, would prevent a happy marriage. If this is the reason he broke the engagement, the time may come when you will be grateful that he did.

—o-o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WILL YOU PLEASE give me some advice? I have been married a little over two years, and have a year-old baby. Until about four months ago we had been living with my husband's folks, but it never works for two families to live together, so we rented a place and bought our furniture. My mother gave us the money for this, as in the two years with my in-laws, on a farm, my husband did not make a cent.

Dear Mrs. Ca
Will you please

Now, two weeks ago, my husband's father died, and he feels it is his duty to go back to the farm. His mother received about $8000 insurance besides all the other money he had. They own their place and there are two girls at home, aged 21 and 34, to take care of their mother. My husband says if we don't go along he is going anyway, and my baby and I will have to get along the best we can.

Now, Mrs. Carr, I feel that after living there two years and not getting along, there is no use going back. But more important, I think, is the fact that when a man gets married he should make a home for his family, and not expect them to live with his folks forever. He is now taking up a trade, which in six months would enable him to make a good salary. So it is not a question of being unable to take care of us. If we went to the farm we would get nothing but our room and board.

I feel that a man's wife and son should come before his folks and any man that would put them first does not love his son and wife. Please advise me, Mrs. Carr. A READER.

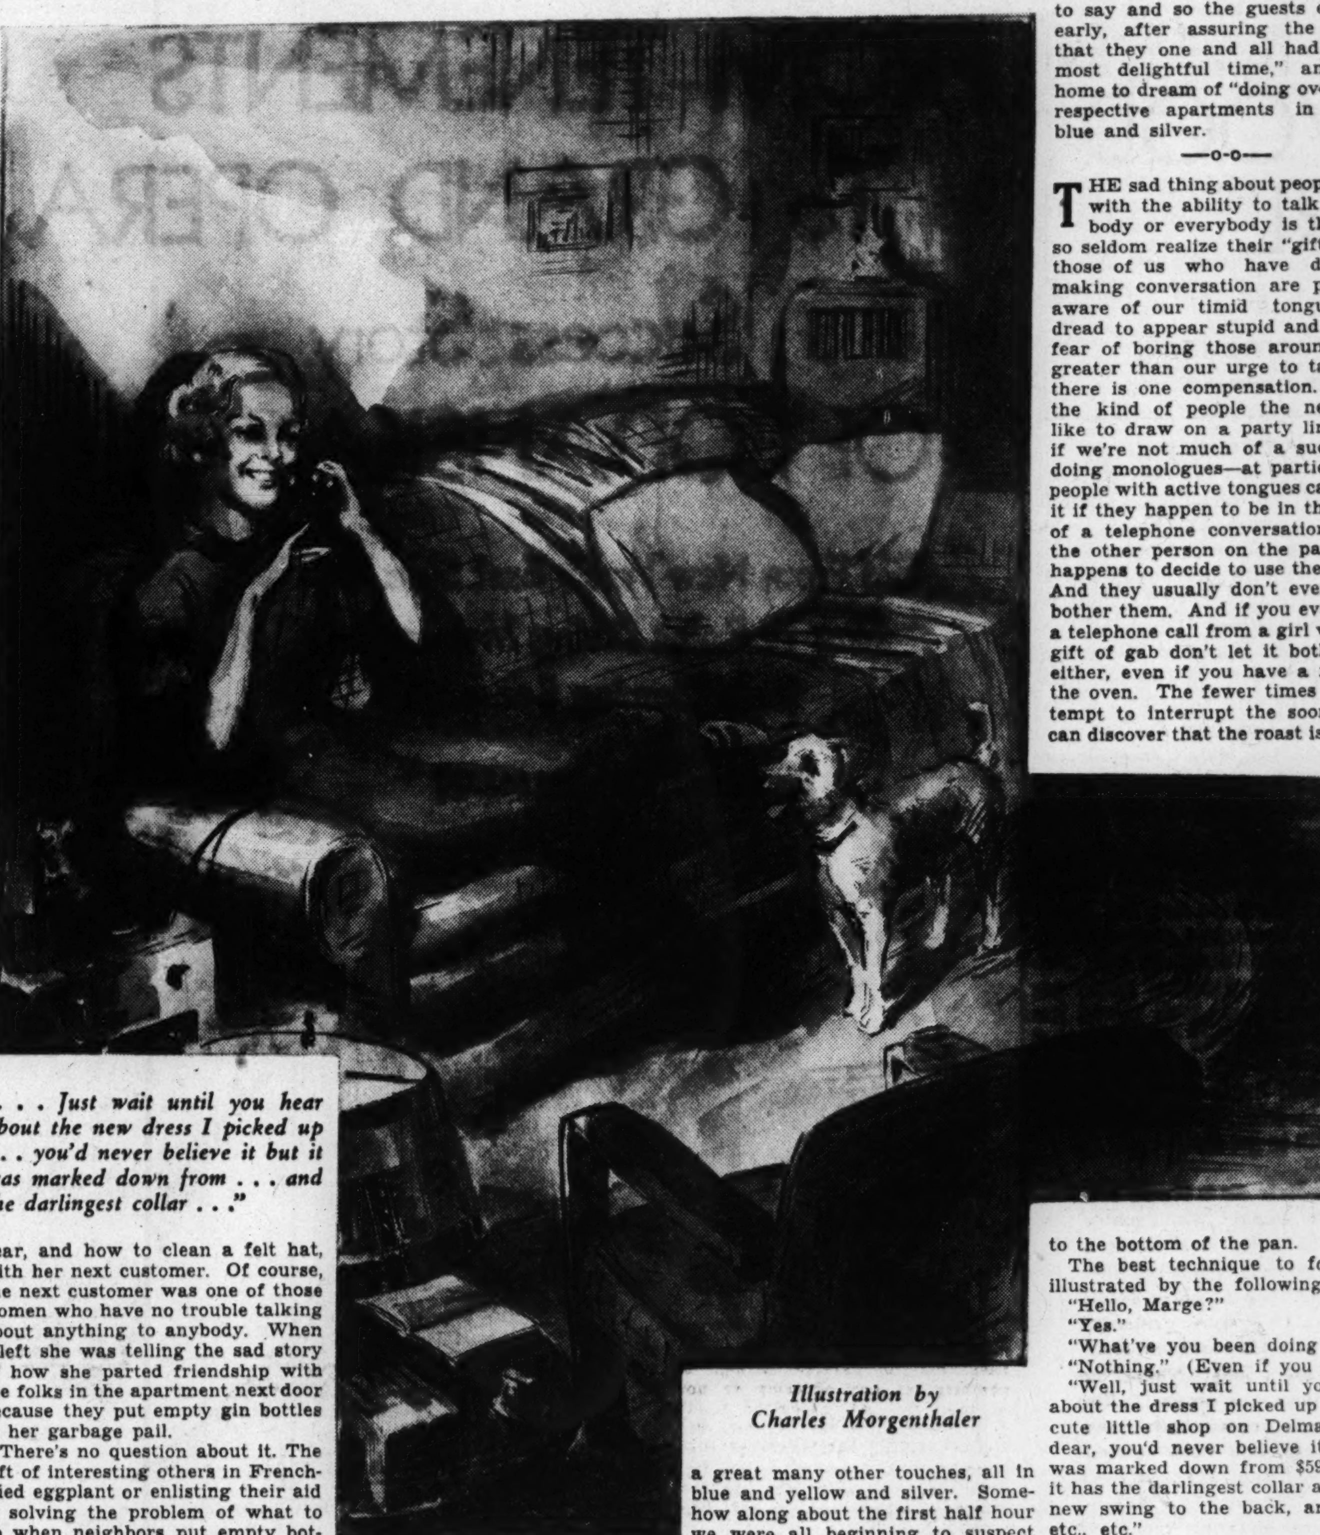
It seems to me you have to decide between the alternatives your husband offers, unreasonable as they may appear to you. He might also argue, you know, that if you cared enough for him you would not mind how you had to live so long as you could be together. If you are convinced that he wants to return to the farm not out of loyalty to his mother, but because there he can shirk the responsibility of supporting his wife and child, then the sooner you are independent of him, the better, for you and your baby. Perhaps if you did stay behind when he goes home, he might sooner realize where his duty lies.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

TO THE GIRL who TALKS YOUR ARM OFF

She May Bore Other Women Silly, but Her Tactics Seem to Make a Hit With Men at a Party

By Virginia Irwin



"... Just wait until you hear about the new dress I picked up ... you'd never believe it but it was marked down from ... and the darlingest collar ..."

Illustration by Charles Morgenthaler

HAVE you ever known—and envied—a woman who could talk to anybody and everybody without the slightest difficulty and who wouldn't be awed into folding up even if she happened to draw Franklin Delano Roosevelt as a dinner partner? You know the type—she has absolutely no trouble finding something to talk about to the garage man, to the girl who washes her hair, or to the minister when he comes to call. She never stops at "Pleased to meet ya," but goes right on through that awful pause that nearly always follows introductions like the Queen Mary under full steam.

While you and I agonize over deciding whether to bring up the subject of what the drouth is going to do to next year's potato crop or whether you really get bargains on dollar day, the gal with the gift of gab is already having a delightful conversational romp with the most attractive man on the party. You catch little remnants of the conversation like, "Oh, do you really like eggplant? French fried eggplant? Oh, how extraordinary and I thought I was the only person in the world who liked eggplant." Of course the law of averages, (I think that's the law that covers this case) makes her idea that she is the only one in the world who likes eggplant a silly notion, but you realize that while you're worrying over such things as the law of averages, the gal with the self-starting tongue has already reached the chummy point with the man to whom she's talking. She has him on the subject of food. And you know what that means—he'll, in all probability, ask her to dinner in the next 10 seconds. But you do wonder how she did it. After all, a gal can't just walk up to a man and say "How do you do, and do you like French-fried eggplant?"

—o-o—

THE little matter of what to say to the girl who does my hair is another case in point. After our usual discussion on the relative merits of a lemon or vinegar rinse, the conversation dies on the vine. The weather is sometimes kind enough to provide food for a few sentences, but by and large the young lady who gives me my shampoo has to depend on a fellow operator or the customer in the next booth for diversion during the operation. I've often thought that if she would only suggest—as I've heard her do to other customers — that my making an appointment a day early this week must mean that I've a "heavy date" for the evening, I would keep the conversation going by inventing a budding romance for myself. But no, after I've decided on a vinegar rinse, she seems to consider there is no occasion for further talk. And yet she has no trouble with her other customers, I know, because yesterday while I was under the drier she discussed kitchen linoleum, whether or not Four o'clocks are hardy or have to be planted every year, and how to clean a felt hat, with her next customer. Of course, the next customer was one of those women who have no trouble talking about anything to anybody. When I left she was telling the sad story of how she parted friendship with the folks in the apartment next door because they put empty gin bottles in her garbage pail.

There's no question about it. The gift of interesting others in French-fried eggplant or enlisting their aid in solving the problem of what to do when neighbors put empty bottles in your garbage pail is not given to all of us. And so we must be forever the listeners while less timid tongued folks bask in the attention that is the reward of the entertainer.

—o-o—

AT A RECENT mixed party—mixed in the point of sexes, ages and occupations—a young matron "entertained" the entire gathering for exactly two hours and 40 minutes with a description of how she was "doing over" her apartment. It was to be "done" in yellow, blue and silver. The venetian blinds were to be yellow—"So warm don't you think?" The walls in blue—"So restful, dont' you think?" The ceiling in silver—"Silver, with stars, will give a feeling of space, don't you think?" Then the rug was to be blue with maybe a few yellow throw rugs to relieve any tendency toward monotony. And there would be a great deal of chromium about to carry out the silver effect. And there would be a great many other touches, all in blue and yellow and silver. Somehow along about the first half hour we were all beginning to suspect that there might be a little blue, yellow and silver about the apartment. At the end of two hours, we were sure of it.

We were also sure that the lady who was going to "do over" her apartment was gifted with the ability to do monologues and that the rest of us weren't. She was very noble about yielding the floor to whomever wanted it after she had finished her skit, too, because she had absolutely nothing to say on any other subject. But neither did anybody else have anything much to say and so the guests departed early, after assuring the hostess that they one and all had "had a most delightful time," and went home to dream of "doing over" their respective apartments in yellow, blue and silver.

—o-o—

THE sad thing about people gifted with the ability to talk to anybody or everybody is that they so seldom realize their "gift," while those of us who have difficulty making conversation are painfully aware of our timid tongue. We dread to appear stupid and yet the fear of boring those around us is greater than our urge to talk. But there is one compensation. We're the kind of people the neighbors like to draw on a party line, even if we're not much of a success at doing monologues—at parties. But people with active tongues can't help it if they happen to be in the midst of a telephone conversation when the other person on the party line happens to decide to use the 'phone. And they usually don't even let it bother them. And if you ever draw a telephone call from a girl with the gift of gab don't let it bother you either, even if you have a roast in the oven. The fewer times you attempt to interrupt the sooner you can discover that the roast is burned to the bottom of the pan.

The best technique to follow is illustrated by the following:

"Hello, Marge?"

"Yes."

"What've you been doing?"

"Nothing." (Even if you have.)

"Well, just wait until you hear about the dress I picked up at that cute little shop on Delmar. My dear, you'd never believe it but it was marked down from $59.75 and it has the darlingest collar and that new swing to the back, and, etc., etc., etc."

One-half hour later you say:

"Why Dottie I just can't wait to see it."

"That's why I called, Marge. Thought maybe I'd slip it on and drop over."

To which you reply: "Oh, Dottie, I'm sorry. I'm meeting Jack for dinner downtown and I'll just have to wait to see it until some other time."

With that you take the roast out of the oven, put it carefully in the icebox and go to a movie where people don't do monologues.

some years ago, happy nobodies soon filled the bar to overflowing and extra help was playing fortissimo scores on the cash register. The fact that nobody was immortalized in celluloid didn't bother the clientele, who jammed the premises and consumed lashings of whisky in a lights-and-camera midst of dither and hurrah.

THIS department has suggested from time to time that some pretty gala copy could be had from the elderly Evander Berry Wall, who cut such a figure in the New York of half a century ago, and at the moment it appears that at least two magazine editors and a major film producer are making expansive overtures in the direction of the Meurice in Paris, where he maintains himself in accustomed elegance despite the times.

From the old days of the Calumet Club down to the present, Berry has been a conspicuous figure in the parade of the world's glamour folk, and his memoirs, properly arranged and edited, ought to have such ingenious stuff as Mrs. Harry Lehr's souvenirs of the Newport era lashed to the mast.

In the '90s the papers each morning chronicled what Berry had worn to the opera the night before as punctiliously as they recorded the weather and stock transactions, and a later generation knew him as the racetrack aficionado who never missed a meeting of consequence in England or on the Continent, the intimate of Kings and the dapperest dandy to survive into a careless or at best meretricious age.

There have been a couple of imitations of his celebrated long mustaches and enormous stock collars in the films (one was the screen version of Jack Thomas' "Dry Martini," the entire theme of which was woven around the Paris Ritz bar), but Berry to the life, accompanied by his inevitable chow, should be a grand self-characterization.

her first serious training. Natalie didn't like it at all at first. "I thought I would never get used to sleeping in a room by myself. And it was so terribly quiet up there in the woods! I missed the roar of the Third and Second street 'L' trains."

Through Madame's good offices, Bodanskaya was admitted to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, where she had to take a stiff course in English, foreign languages, history and art, in addition to her music. She found time, however, for such extra-curricular activities as making good friends,, especially among the players of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. A few minutes before her concert with the orchestra this summer at the Dells, the first 'cellist turned to her and said, "Listen, kid, you better make the most of this. You'll never have such accompaniment again. You've got 110 men rooting for you tonight."

But that was after she had made headlines as Micaela, and after Rudy Vallee had invited her back a second time as guest artist on his radio program. The going was pretty hard before that. Not that Bodanskaya bears the world a grudge for not recognizing her talents sooner. But she held a bit of rancor for Broadway managers. She chuckles with satisfaction over the way she got even with one of them.

"For three weeks after I left Curtis Institute in 1934 I sat in the outermost office of that man, praying for a chance to see his umpteenth secretary, and finally gave up. Well, it wasn't long after I sang at the Met, before the umpteenth secretary was ordered to reach me by telephone with an offer. I put him off for three weeks. Then I answered the call, and in my chilliest voice, said, 'I'm sorry, but I don't handle any of my own affairs. My lawyer looks after them.'"

—o-o—

SHE understands herself pretty thoroughly. She knows she wastes precious time talking with anyone who interests her. She knows, too, that she wastes a lot of nervous energy getting needlessly excited about things. But she can't help it because she is naturally explosive and emotional. That's what makes her more than a voice on the opera stage. She also realizes that she isn't the type to get away with long earrings, a Pekingese lap dog, or any other of the usual operatic affections. "In fact," she laughed, "one of my friends despairs of my ever becoming a great opera singer because I have too much sense of humor about myself. Why, if I tried to enter a ballroom dramatically I would probably trip on my train and do a belly-flop!"

She may not have to go in for earhoops and lap dogs, but Bodenskaya is beginning to find out that there are other hallmarks, beside dignity, which the Met expects its singers to develop as quickly as possible. One of them is a fashionable street address.

"I suppose I've got to take a swanky Park avenue apartment for the season," she said. "Mother will come live with me. Sister? Oh, she just married. And I'm sending my young brother through the University of Chicago. But this swanky apartment business leaves me cold. I don't give a darn about where I live, or what I wear."

What Bodanskaya does care about is becoming a great singer. Grand opera has been her goal since she coolly wrote in reply to the question on the admission blank at Curtis: "I want to stay here a few years and then go to the Metropolitan."

And when she got there how did she feel? Absolutely unconscious. "I was overawed at the thought that it was Little Me on that stage which creaked with traditions. Little Me who used to be in seventh heaven if I could just get in to stand behind the last row of seats to hear a performance, even if I couldn't see much of it."

It's a long way this girl has traveled in 23 years—from the jungles of New York's lower East Side . . . clanging street cars, rumbling "L" trains, squalling children, fruit vendors, rowdy street gamins . . . to the center of the spotlight on the great stage of the Metropolitan, where the eyes of the music world will be upon her during the coming season. But she had it in her to make the journey. She's a lititle girl with big stuff!

Fur Trimmings For Fall Outfits

LUCKY is the woman who has an extra fur scarf of two in her store of treasures. Real treasures they are this year because yards and yards of fur are being used to adorn new costumes.

It doesn't seem to matter what sort of fur one selects, just so there is plenty of it. Narrow bands have their place on some of the fall outfits, while wide bands and inserts are equally important. The simplest sort of street frock is enhanced by a tiny fur collar, pockets, cuffs and belt. More elaborate daytime frocks have swirls of fox or lynx outlining the hems of tunics or the bottom of a very flaring skirt.

Suits have entire sleeves of flat fur to give them distinction or employ yokes and vestees by way of luxurious contrast with the fabric. Coats have no set rule of elaboration, but few of them escape without their gorgeous fur trimmings.

Once you select a suit, coat or frock which has its touch of fur, the next step is to add more fur to your hat. This may be only a tailored bow or it may be an entire crown—depending upon the size of your pocketbook and your flair for striking millinery.

Beads

Your autumn wardrobe won't be complete without one or two strings of beads. Pearls come first in the choice of the multitude and are to be worn from morning through the evening hours. They are considered as smart with sweaters and tweeds as they are with velvet dinner frocks.

Next in importance to pearls are gold beads—the same sort of school girl ornaments which mother was wearing 20 years or more ago. The choker length is flattering with the highly draped necklines while the two-strand beads of longer length are equally as attractive. Copper, silver and jet beads are other oldtimers which are returning to popularity.

A Woman's New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.

NO longer need we Manhattanettes cast envious eyes at such glorious institutions as St. Louis' superb open-air municipal opera (which saved my life and reason one summer I toiled there, not knowing a soul), and Philly's Willow Grove, and Chicago's Ravinia Park. In scope and variety our outdoor entertainment probably topped the world during the summer now paying off, and everybody did very nicely, thank you, including the customers. What price Salzburg? Plenty!

Think of the things we've had on our doorsteps! Out at the incomparable Jones Beach, Fortune Gallo and the Freres Shubert served elegant operetta to 10,000 people nightly at a dollar top. The Municipal Stadium, new, on Randall's Island, also peddled historic tune shows under the same auspices. The Goldman Band played to two million people in Central Park, for free, and twice weekly 3000 young couples fox-trotted and Lindy-hopped on the Park Mall, also gratis. For 10 weeks the Philharmonic sawed and tooted at Lewisohn Stadium, under the dim fakes we are forced to call stars, with Iturbi and other aces waving the little stick, and such soloists as George Gershwin and Al Spalding helping out.

New Yorkers have always screamed and moaned about the dearth of outdoor entertainment here. And all of a sudden everything busts loose at once. Not even we small-towners can squawk about the burg of our adoption!

ONE NOTABLE fact about the mighty port of New York is that the Fleet's always in! Broadway and its narrow tributaries are forever filled with various sorts of Jacks Ashore, bending pleased and often inviting eyes upon the pretty little girls who flutter by.

For more than a week we have played host to 1600 Japanese sailors from the two venerable training cruisers which have lain in the lordly Hudson off Grant's Tomb. The day they arrived, cannon afloat and ashore banged away for hours rendering the conventional courtesies, and the little yellow men flocked ashore to eye the wonders of the Western world. Luncheons, dinners and sightseeing tours filled every day of their visit.

Just before they turned up, we said good-by to 1200 handsome, tanned middies from our own battle-wagons just back from their European cruise. They wandered about town rather disconsolately in twos and fours for a couple of days. Just before that we had a large bevy of German naval cadets, escorted by an enormous detachment of the town constables.

I always feel that our own sailors have the thinnest time of any of the gobs that visit us. We lay ourselves out to show visiting foreigners a hot time in the old town every night, but the American gobs seem to just sort of rattle around on their own. There used to be a Navy Club here on Murray Hill for the enlisted men, with dancing and cards always on tap, but the depression locked its doors. CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

BRIGHT ACCESSORIES With FALL OUTFITS

Clothes Designers Have Blended the Colors in Order to Attain the Perfect Ensemble

By SYLVIA STILES

WHEN you start the search for the perfect fall bonnet to wear over your new autumn curls you might as well make up your mind that the treasure hunt won't end until you've been to the glove counter, the bag counter and perhaps the shoe shop as well.

All of those bright ribbons, gay skyscraping feathers, vivid poises and twisted strands of beautifully shaded velvet which make the new hats so arresting aren't merely color brainstorms of the millinery designers but part of the co-operative scheme of the accessory artists to make even a color-blind person see the possibility of combining tones of the costume to attain the perfect ensemble.

The smartest partners in the fashion world this season are the hats and gloves but they are not so selfish that a bag or a belt or a scarf or a shoe can't be included now and then in a well-planned style rendevous. You don't see one without the other which, in other words, means that their color and often their fabric blending is so perfect that one impresses equally with the other.

There's no mistaking the complete affinity between the covering for our heads and our hands. You discover it as soon as you've set foot in the shopping district because the windows are filled with clever interpretations of the mode. All of the accessory displays likewise have reminders that there's a hat or a hat trimming to match the gayest gloves, while the millinery saleswoman can't talk of a chapeau without mentioning and often showing, it relationship to the gloves.

Two widely different versions of the tie-up between hats and accessories are apparent in the collections in St. Louis shops. There is the alliance of interesting leather or fabric which includes both gloves and bags as well as hat and is featured more extensively in black or dark autumn tones than it is in the vivid hues. The other consists of a dark hat with bright trimmings which call for certain bright accessories as accents of a dark costume.

—o-o—

THE first theme usually suggests a dressy costume because it is presented most forcefully with antelope or velvet. The second these may be carried through ensembles for any occasion or hour of the day. An exception to the first trend, however, is discovered in the striking hats made of suede leather in the new shades of light brown and beige, which are perfectly matched with gloves, bags, footwear and belts.

Several examples of the complete matching of hats and accessories have been illustrated. At upper left in the illustration is shown a stunning black antelope hat which has bag and gloves made of the same soft leather. The hat has a flair for the unsual, carrying the high crowned theme to an extreme. The rolling brim sweeps toward the front in a becoming line, while the crown employes several yards of the antelope to give it that shirred and peaked effect. Incidentally, there is a bit of stiffening underneath the top of the crown so there is no danger of its steeple tumbling down. The long pheasant quill which is placed uypright at the front soars to a new high that may prove a danger to its tip when a low doorway is entered. The bag of the same antelope is quite large, squashy and pleated in cartridge folds at the center. The gloves are of the slip-on type with graduated tucks adorning their backs.

Illustrated at the center are accessories of velvet that are most impressive when made of gleaming black unrelieved by color. The hat presents a new version of the bowler with its softly rolling brim turned up rather abruptly at the sides. The crown is high and concentrates upon front interest achieved by having two peaked folds of the velvet protruding in a cockscomb manner. The bag has a frame covered with a stitched band that has a quilted appearance and the gloves carry out this same idea with a decorated cuff.

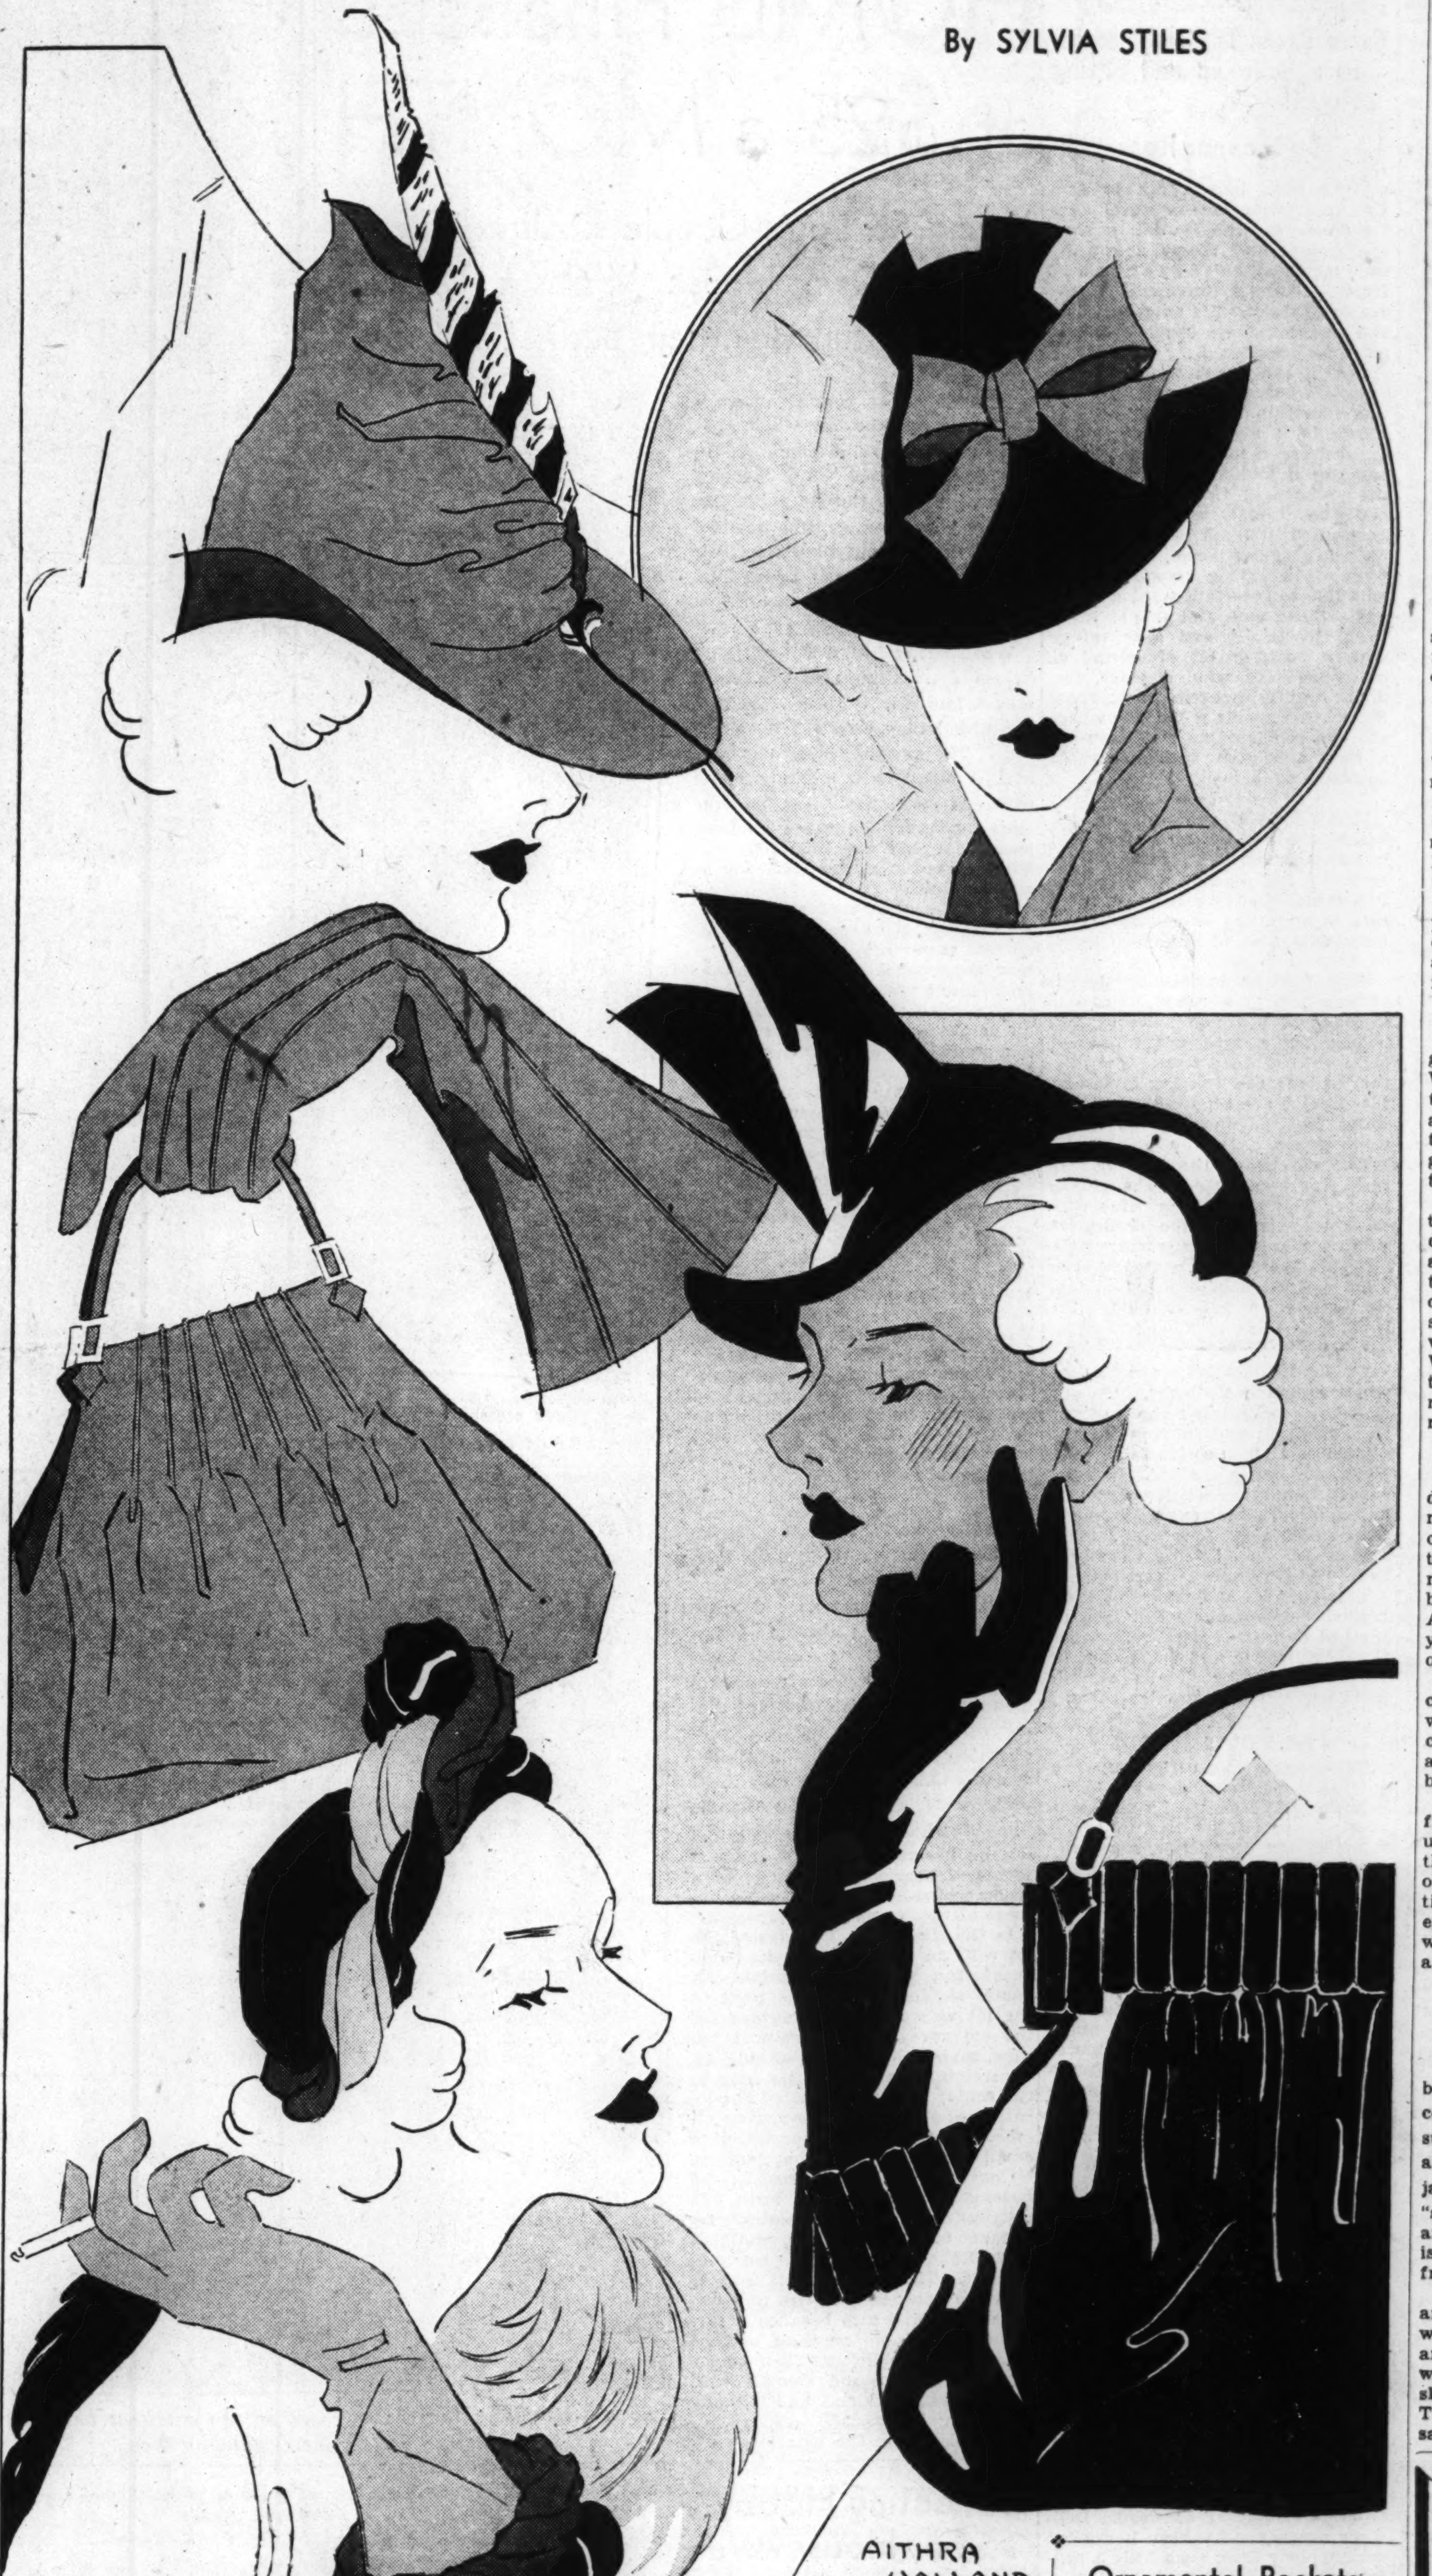
THE lower illustration is one which has a dressmaker interest in that the combination of colors and the tie-up with the gloves depends upon the2ingenuity of an artist with the needle. To be most successful the ensemble should be made to order, using your favorite color scheme. It is more formal than any of the others and will be most impressive to complement a dinner costume. This particular hat happens to be made of very dark green velvet, but black velvet or felt would be equally as charming a background for the twisted halo of velvet. The halo combines two shades—rust and beige with the green, while the same tri-color theme is repeated in the shade of the gloves. A black hat and black gloves with rolls of two-tone velvet could be duplicated with stunning results.

The hat illustrated in the circle demonstrates the vogue of black with a high shade. It is of black felt, employing width of brim to balance height of crown. The crown has a series of darts near the top to make it smaller than at the base and adds an interesting cuff. The flat bow is of bright colored suede, which calls for gloves of the same tone and leather. Any one of at least a dozen shades could be used on a black or brown hat, and be duplicated in suede gloves. The gamut of shades includes several different tones of green and blue, wine, purple, violet, cayenne, chaudron, oxblood, capucine, rust and others.

Some dark hats use two tones of trimming, such as rose and blue or beige and rust, so that a choice of glove and bag shades is possible. Ribbons are employed in the same manner as the leathers and call for the glace kid gloves rather than suede or for the fabrics which are so well styled this season.

One thing to remember in planning an autumn color scheme and allying a hat with accessories is that the real danger is in carrying the vogue too far. A black outfit, for example, looks most impressive when the black hat has a bow of the new bright blue and perhaps a belt or bag of the same. If gloves are blue, then bag and other accessories should be black. A flash of any other color on a hat stands out more if shoes and bag repeat the dark tone and only gloves match it in brightness. That new tone of violet supplies the distinctive note to a black untrimmed coat when it appears as a wide suede belt, but a pair of gloves or a suede hat bow in the same tone are all the harmony that can be tolerated without it becoming dowdy.

Just as too much seasoning spoils the broth occasionally, so does too much seasoning in the form of bright accessories ruin a perfect costume.



Here's a simple method for mending large holes in the kiddies' or husband's stockings. Cut a piece of net larger than the hole in the stocking and then stitch it neatly on the wrong side of the stocking under the hole. Darn in the usual way. This will give extra support to the stocking and will make the task much easier and the darn neater.

Ornamental Pockets

Pockets will do a lot for you this fall. We're not referring this time to the full pockets which are the shopper's best friend, but to the ornamental pockets which will go through the day with you and into the night on your new Fall clothes. Enormous pockets of velvet or fur on the peplums of daytime suits and dresses are a device to make these peplums stand out uncompromisingly. A little patch pocket of white fur appears on the skirt of a black velvet dinner gown. Slit pockets on the blouse of your daytime dresses afford opportunity to use the lines of color that contrast with dark frocks.

When pickling red cabbage, add a few slices of cooked beetroot. This will improve the flavor of the pickle and also give it a better color.

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

TO the beauty class this day, teacher must give both praise and censure. Make-up is improving, but it isn't all that it should be. The grand army of beauty-seekers is marching all right, but some of the soldiers are out of step. Look around you, where the girls gather. One woman among five has her facial decorations as they should be, deftly applied. Perhaps two or three others make the grade. The rest fall down.

The trouble is in trying to patch up the design. It can't be done. The girl who is always sneaking out her rouge pad and lip pencil, twisting her head about to get a decent squint at the purse mirror, touching up the highlights, usually makes a mess of it. To put on a new face requires time; also a strong light, intelligence and experience, not to mention a happy choice of cosmetics in colors that are becoming.

You've got to get down to first principles. The skin must be clean. The clean skin glows. The epedermis must not be rough. If it is, it fights everything that comes along, especially powder. Won't make up with any kind of make-up. Hence the need of nightly lubrication, willy-nilly, without a miss.

On a too-oily skin, powder goes patchy; on a dry one, it doesn't go on at all. Or, if it does, it gets mad and flies away with the first passing breeze.

—o-o—

NO NEED of using soap suds to get a clean skin. Use a cleanser. Wipe it away with tissues, lave the complexion with witch hazel, a good astringent or a tonic lotion that, containing a little alcohol, gives the skin a good color by intoxicating the capillaries.

Whether or not you use a foundation cream which anchors the powder, depends upon your pleasure and ideas. Some women handle them cleverly. They must be spread on in a thin film, worked into the skin until they disappear. Few women need them in the daytime. When one wants to present an extra handsome face during the evening festivity, they are just about necessary.

—o-o—

FOUNDATION creams come in different shades. The complexion must be matched exactly, or one can go a bit lower on the color tone. The best way of finding the right shade is to go to a cosmetic bar and get your face matched up. Another person can see better than you can. Few women know the color of their skins, anyhow.

Cream rouge sticks better than compact, but it is harder to put on well. It sinks into the foundation cosmetic agreeably, and the two are friendly. The application must be blended perfectly.

Don't throw on the powder too freely. Begin on the neck, work upward with little pats. Fluff off the surplus with a bit of cotton or a powder brush. Put brilliantine on a small brush, groom the eyebrows and lashes. Then on with the lipstick, carefully, making a clear-cut outline.

Suit Jackets

The suit which has a flaring basque type of jacket is a newcomer which promises to attain success. Several different versions are included in collections. One jacket has a cut-away front and a "swallow-tail" type of black, while another has a gored peplum which is longer at the back than the front.

Velvet, ottoman and broadcloth are three popular materials of which these suits are made. There are both daytime and evening types which are accompanied by narrow skirts and bright colored blouses. The blouses are made of crepe, satin or metallic fabrics.

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

"KNOCK, KNOCK." No, we haven't a new one. Those words are merely being used to represent the sound of hammering that is going on all over town. For St. Louis, as well as other cities all over the country, is in the throes of a building boom and there is scarcely a street that does not boast one or more new houses.

Indeed, it seems hardly an exaggeration to say that whole new districts seem to have sprung up over night or rather over the summer. Possibly all the new buildings are more noticeable in the fall when people return to the city or come out of their summer hiding away from the heat, but there is no doubt that more building has been going on than for several years past.

This building boom may be attributed to several factors. Unquestionably, a most decisive one is the fact that, due to the FHA, mortgage money is easier to get than it has ever been before and people may now buy or build much as they rented property in the past. Then, too, there is no doubt that due to the lack of building recently there is a definite shortage of houses. And finally, there seem to be two classes of people who are acquiring homes—those who feel more of a sense of security than they have for some time and those who feel that they don't know what's going to happen anyway so they might as well have their home.

So, for those who are contemplating building or buying in the near future, a brief review of the trends in housing might prove helpful.

—o-o—

Houses based on the early architecture of America are still by all odds the most popular. The New England type, especially the Cape Cod variety, is probably the most favored but there seems to be a swing toward the Southern Colonial, particularly of the Mount Vernon genre. However, these new houses are no slavish copies of the homes of our ancestors; they are, rather, a modern interpretation of the architecture of our forebears. The classic Georgian house, too, is increasingly popular with some of the newest houses being patterned after the late Georgian or Regency style. And, of course, a sprinkling of modern houses but not enough, as yet, to be hailed as a definite trend.

—o-o—

● IT IS GRATFYING to notice that most of the new houses, whether built by the owners or speculatively, are of good design and sound construction. The quaint, the "cute," the picturesque, and the jerry-built house today are very much in the minority. Now, most people want an "honest" house, honestly constructed. The trend toward better house design is unquestionably due to the fact that people now realize it is wise to go to an architect for building just as they go to a doctor for their ills and a lawyer for their legal troubles. Even speculative houses today are built under the supervision of an architect.

—o-o—

IN REGARD TO the construction of these new houses, clapboard and brick seem to be the two most popular building materials at the moment. In the brick house there seems a decided tendency to use whitewash to obtain a clean-cut, modern effect. Occasionally brick veneer is substituted for brick and in the modern houses concrete or composition is being used. Roofs are usually of either wood shingle or slate, with one color or subtly shaded effects used in preference to the varigated colors used in the past. Windows are much more apt to be of the double hung than the casement type, possibly because they are so much easier to drape effectively.

—o-o—

As has been stated, the trend is away from the picturesque and so there is much less tendency to combine different materials in the construction of a house. Where, at one time, it was common to see several materials, such as brick, siding, and half timbering, all used on one house, now most houses are simply constructed of one material. There are, however, some very attractive houses that combine brick or stone with wood shingles or siding.

—o-o—

● HAVING DONE AWAY with tricky details, there is now a tendency to make houses more individual by interesting color schemes on the exterior. Possibly the trend toward white houses has been the cause of this, as it is more possible to use color against this neutral background. Shutters and doors are now being given added interest by being painted in such tones as pinky-red, deep bright blue and even plum. I know of a house that is going up at the present time that is to have walls of gray painted brick and shutters and trim in yellow. This sounds like an exciting color scheme.

—o-o—

FINALLY, there are various innovations in the interior plans of these new houses. One of the most intelligent changes introduced in many of the new houses is that of putting the service elements on the street side of the house, leaving the garden side for the living-rooms. Kitchens and servants' rooms are now being placed at the front of the house so that the main rooms of the house may be away from the noise of the street and may look out upon the garden.

Basement game-rooms are being eliminated in favor of studies or recreation rooms on the first floor wherever possible, and, in fact, basements themselves are giving place to laundries and heating rooms on the ground floor. And sundecks, for modern worshippers of ultra-violet rays, are even being incorporated in houses of the most traditional design.

Helpful Idea Disclosed in Model Home

Extra Room Is Combined Into a Bedroom and Sitting Room.

By Eleanor Ross

IT IS rare, indeed, not to find an interesting idea or novelty expressed in the model houses, apartments and rooms shown by the metropolitan department stores. Usually the model rooms are designed for the average home and budget, where space and cost must be considered.

One of the cleverest notions we have discovered in quite a while was found in a model house just shown by a big department store. It answers a problem that must have been troubling many of us, the problem of the extra room, and what to make of it when space is limited. Shall the room be playroom, guest room, extra bedroom or a sitting room? Those who like to entertain want a room, while those who aim to get away from the family and seek refuge with a book or bit of sewing or correspondence want a place, too. Sister wants an extra guest room but mother wants a hideout where she can repair of an afternoon for a nap, a session with household accounts or a book.

—o-o—

THAT'S THE problem, and it has been solved not by a room that is bedroom by night and sitting room by day, but by a room that is a real bed-sitting room—a room that is an honest-to-goodness bedroom with part of the space treated as a real sitting room.

Now for the interesting details of this gem of a room. There is a complete bedroom suite of mahogany in a free adaptation of eighteenth century style. The mirrors of both the dressing table and the dresser are separate and are hung just an inch or so above those pieces.

One corner of the 12 by 15 room is given over to the sitting room. This corner has three windows to carry out the decorative scheme that a sitting room needs. Beneath the windows are window seats cushioned in beige plaid fabric with little pillows along the back.

—o-o—

THE CURTAINS are crisp, white organdie tie-backs. To one side is a comfortable chair of the boudoir style, and in front of the window seat is a coffee table complete with coffee serving. In a far corner is another small easy chair and a table with trough for magazines and books. Lamps and other accessories are all white. The beds have deep-valanced spreads of white organdie and white organdie ruffled pillow cases which are on the bed over the spreads. Sprigged floral wallpaper and beige chenille carpet are other details of this most useful and attractive room.

The Boy's Room

Take your boy seriously when you plan his room. Let his tastes prevail and be guided by his activities. After all, he has to spend much of his time there, especially if you haven't a basement or a top floor playroom. He doesn't want fussiness and he doesn't want flowers or pastel colors on his walls. He's working harder now at "being a man" than he ever will in later years, so lend him a hand.

Let your boy have a comfortable work, or play, table and as much room as you can give him. One of the best space savers for a room occupied by two boys is the double-decked bed. It is sturdy and masculine and boys can "take turns" in the upper berth.

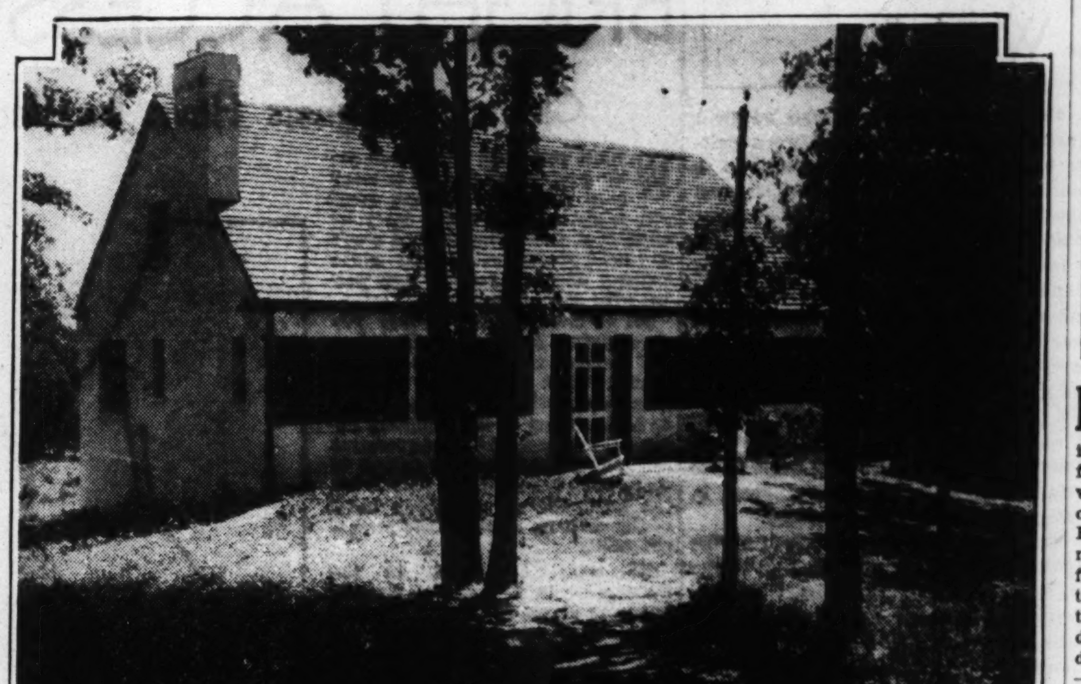
Asparagus Beds

The amateur asparagus beds today have not, as a rule, developed asparagus as satisfactorily large as those tended by our fathers, which may be partly because of a change of customs. The beds were then made all of 10-feet deep, and stone chips were laid 12 inches thick at the bottom of this depth. Then the beds were filled in with a rich soil and manure combination which was further enriched each year by generous top dressings of manure. The depth of the bed was to prevent the naturally perverse asparagus roots from branching downward. Delicious asparagus has been harvested continuously from such beds a century old.

Dry spots in the garden where the hose won't reach can be verdantly green and gayly colorful next year. Plant sedums, sempervivum, flea bane, saxifrage, butterfly weed, gaillardia, or Mexican sun flower. They will take lots of water this fall and a winter mulch.

NEW HOME Financed at $25 a MONTH

Young St. Louis Couple Realized Dream for Own House Without Disturbing Their Budget



This "Cape Cod" cottage was built by the owner himself on evenings, week-ends and holidays over a period of 11 months.

MOST young couples have a home in mind, for which they are working and planning, but unfortunately they also have a budget. This is the story of just such a young couple who realized their dream without disturbing their budget, and they have been kind enough to outline the details of just how this was accomplished.

When Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mikkelson started married life they moved into a little three-room flat, for which they paid $23 a month rent. The addition of a telephone at $3 brought their monthly rental expenses up to $26. And all the time they were living in this little apartment they were planning the home that they might some day be able to build.

With the advent of a daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Mikkelson got out pencil and paper and started figuring how they could made this dream home into a reality. They felt that they wanted to give their daughter all of the advantages of fresh air and sunlight in an uncongested district. They also wanted to look ahead and locate in a section where they were assured of good schooling for her. So, with the money they had saved they bought a lot 100 feet wide by 360 feet deep in Ellsworth Lane, off the Lay road.

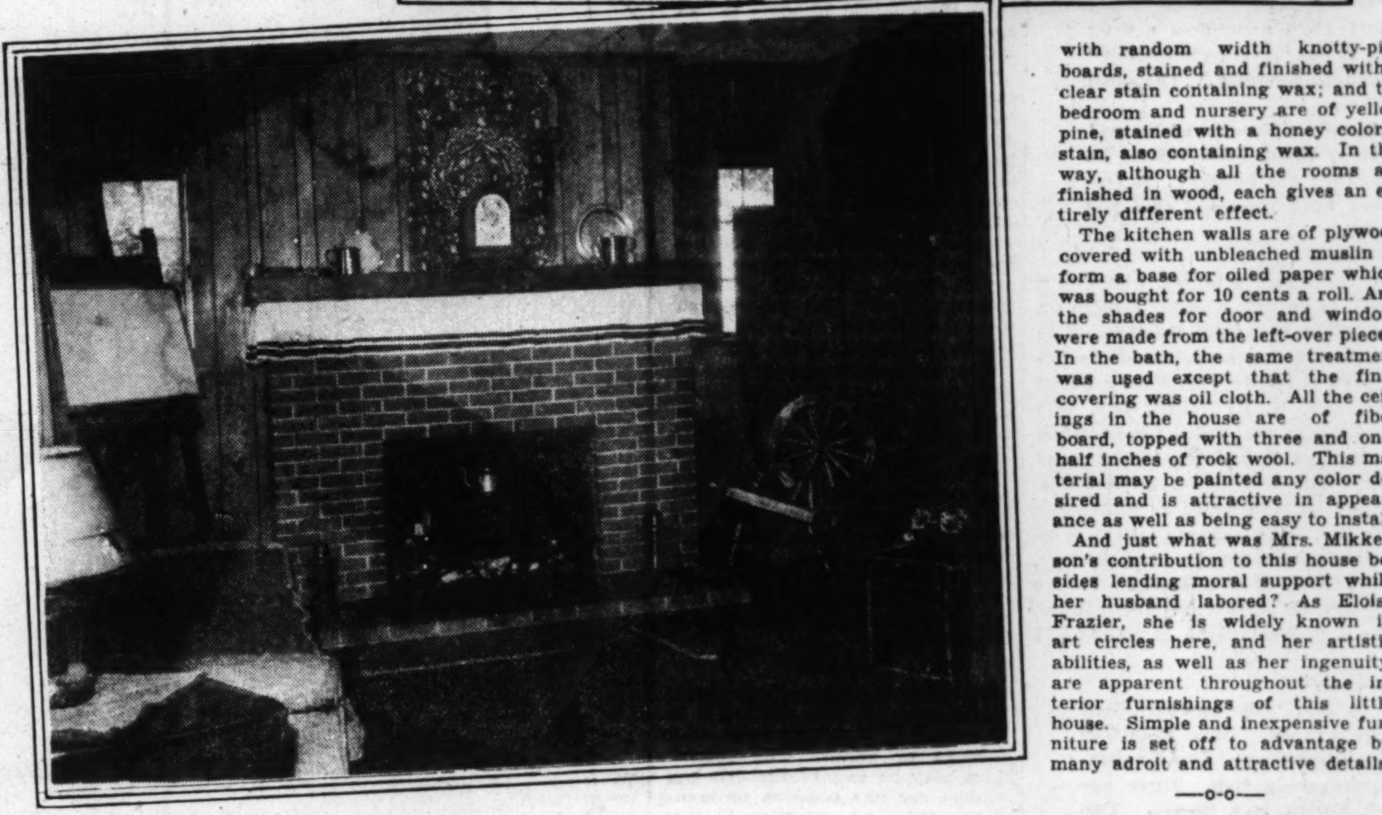
And now comes the thrilling part of the story. Mikkelson, being an engineer, decided to build the house himself. Figuring the construction costs, he borrowed $3600, and was able to get the money at 3 per cent. Working only on week-ends and holidays, with the help of his father and father-in-law, and the occasional assistance of interested neighbors and friends, he completed the house in 11 months. The only professional labor was for plumbing, wiring, tiling and roof work.

—o-o—

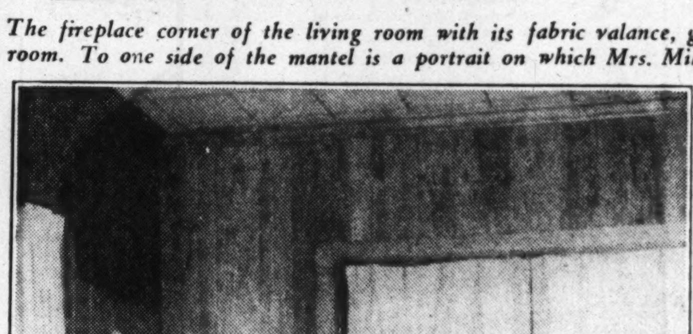
THE story of the actual construction of this charming little five-room Cape Cod cottage is, I think, as fascinating as a description of the most elaborate Hollywood home. Every detail was planned with the utmost care to gain the greatest efficiency of building with the lowest possible construction cost. In addition, Mikkelson was limited in using only those materials which he could handle himself without skilled assistance, but he has most adroitly made a virtue of necessity and produced a house which is not only liveable, but most attractive as well.

In the first place, he selected the lot with an eye to saving as much excavation work as possible. A gentle sloping toward the back of the lot was used to advantage for the entrance to the basement garage, saving the expense of building a retaining wall. A large hole in the center of the lot decided the location of the house, eliminating almost all excavating labor except a small amount of dig the footings.

Concrete walls were used in the basement because they have the greatest strength and water resistance of any foundation material. And Mikkelson poured the concrete himself. The first floor is also of concrete because it is fire and termite proof and also because it furnishes a useable wearing surface without any additional floor covering. It was ground smooth with a terrazza machine and finally stained and waxed.



The fireplace corner of the living room with its fabric valance, giving a peasant atmosphere to the room. To one side of the mantel is a portrait on which Mrs. Mikkelson is working.



The wood walls in the dining room are an excellent background for the gay pottery plates hung on them.

The brick for the exterior walls was gradually accumulated from various wrecking jobs where the brick could be purchased second hand. After the house was completed these bricks were finished with two coats of waterproof white cement paint.

The roof is of shingle tile which is more expensive than the average roofing material but it was selected for its permanence and its appearnace. Appearance was particularly important in this case since two-thirds of the front elevation is roof, a typical feature of Cope Cod houses. These shingles, of vitrified clay, are molded in the shape of heavy hand-hewn wood shingles and are in assorted tones of gray-green, blue and soft brown, giving a weather appearance.

—o-o—

THE windows, which add much to the exterior appearance of the house, are of steel casement sash fitted with inside flat metal screens. In addition to their attractive effect, they are also extremely easy to install, coming complete in one unit so that they can be built right into the brick work, without skilled labor. Across the front of the house they are set off by wood shutters, painted in a deep green tone.

The interior, as well as the exterior, was done entirely by Mikkelson and here again materials which were labor saving as well as effective were chosen. All of the rooms with the exception of the bath and kitchen, were finished with v-jointed wood panelling to save the specialized labor required for plaster work. The living room is done with random width knotty-pine boards, stained and finished with a clear stain containing wax; and the bedroom and nursery are of yellow pine, stained with a honey colored stain, also containing wax. In this way, although all the rooms are finished in wood, each gives an entirely different effect.

The kitchen walls are of plywood covered with unbleached muslin to form a base for oiled paper which was bought for 10 cents a roll. And the shades for door and window were made from the left-over pieces. In the bath, the same treatment was used except that the final covering was oil cloth. All the ceilings in the house are of fiber board, topped with three and one-half inches of rock wool. This material may be painted any color desired and is attractive in appearance as well as being easy to install.

And just what was Mrs. Mikkelson's contribution to this house besides lending moral support while her husband labored? As Eloise Frazier, she is widely known in art circles here, and her artistic abilities, as well as her ingenuity, are apparent throughout the interior furnishings of this little house. Simple and inexpensive furniture is set off to advantage by many adroit and attractive details.

—o-o—

ONE of the most effective features of the living room is the huge brick fireplace with its fabric valance below the mantel providing a charming peasant note. This valance is of a heavy bagging material, also used for the traverse curtains, and is in a natural tone with bandings of green and maroon. Incidentally, Mrs. Mikkelson has her own invention for making pinch pleats in curtains which are just as easy to launder as straight curtains. By putting a draw string through the pleats they may be opened out and ironed flat and then drawn up again, so that no ripping or sewing is necessary.

Other touches of Mrs. Mikkelson's throughout the house include a regular old upright piano which has been made to fit into the decorations by being painted a blue green tone. In one corner of the living room stands a screen covered with green suede and decorated by Mrs. Mikkelson with fishes and under-sea motifs, even the window shade being decorated with waves and fishes. There are many other decorative features that add to the unusual quality of this house.

Finally, has the budget been forgotten by this young couple in their enthusiasm at having a home of their own? Not at all. Taxes and interest on the money borrowed come to $15 a month, water $2, and telephone $8, bringing the total monthly expenditure to $25 or $1 less than was expended on the three-room apartment. Add to this sum the $50 a year it costs for heating and you still have a monthly outlay which would fit into the most modest budget.

Dreams are not always as expensive and impossible as they seem. At least not to young couples like the Mikkelsons who know what they want and have the will and ability to achieve it.

Collecting Hobby For Housewives

THERE is nothing like a collecting hobby for fun and interest and awakening new thoughts and ideas. Every woman who has the collecting bug will tell you that. And that is why, when women tell us that club life palls and that they want some other outside interest, we invariably start them off on the idea of a treasure hunt.

Snuff boxes, old coins, luster ware, glass, china, old silver, pewter, or Sheffield plate—it doesn't matter what it is. The thing is to collect as much as one can, to run pieces to earth, to search out the highways and byways for treasure and to spend as little as possible on the hobby. For, quite obviously, there can be little real fun, thrill or adventure in giving an order to collect such and such a piece or outbidding at auctions.

No, the thing to take a woman out of herself is to go hunting, to look in every shop window, to enter every quaint shop with the hope that something will be found reposing, perhaps, on the top shelf or in a dusty corner, a treasure that will prove to be the gem of her collection.

—o-o—

BESIDES THE hobby idea, fine pewter or Sheffield or glass, nicely displayed, adds beauty and charm to the home. Of course, it is up to each one of us to pick out just what we want to collect. Usually every woman has a liking either for silver or glass, or objects of art, dainty bibelots, or maybe old jewelry. The latter offers a marvelous field, for fine old jewelry, paste, semi-precious stones and quartz in old settings are being worn today.

One woman we know who has been collecting old jewelry for years, picking up pieces at ridiculously low prices, now has lovely accessories to set off her classically simple clothes.

—o-o—

ANOTHER OF our friends became interested in old snuff boxes after she had fallen in love with one in the window of an antique shop in London. Wherever she goes she searches for snuff boxes and her collection is now a wonderful one. Before that she had little patience with any other interest but her home and family, and she wondered why she was dull, for she had plenty of time on her hands and didn't care much for clubs and similar activities.

But when the snuff box era began, she began a course of reading and became an authority not only on the snuff boxes but of the history of the period when gentlemen took their pinch of snuff. Her collection adds grace and romantic charm to her drawing room and is most artistically displayed.

We just cite these two instances to demonstrate how much joy and fun there can be in the collecting bug.

are now weeping quietly into their consomme over the loss of Robert Nathan, poet and novelist, who has just been spliced to Mrs. Lucie-Lee Hall Skedding, widow of a New York banker. . . .

Speaking of town eligibles, our leading man-about-town, William Rhinelander Stewart, now denies to the press that a marriage has been arranged (as the London Morning Post puts it) and will shortly take place, between himself and the beauteous blonde Janet Newbold Ryan, once Washington's ace glamor girl. Willie, it appears, is still playing the field—though he is often seen around and about with the lovely Janet. . . .

PERFUME-SELLING by "ex-pressman" on the streets of this town continues to be a leading racket, in spite of its great age. Every now and then one of these high-binders draws up beside my parked flivver and mutters "could you use a bottle of good perfume, lady? Cost $25 retail—but I could let you have it for five!" Most of the town girls are on to this skullduggery, but the petty racketeers still snag an occasional customer—and the stuff is just as apt as not to be slightly sweet-scented water. . . .

COME WEAL, come woe, Britain always manages to ship us one beautiful racqueteer for the national championships at our Forest Hills, out on Long Island. This year the Old Country ferried over the lovely Kay Stammers, England's No. 2 lady player, and as easy on the eyes as she is handy with the tennis bat. Such peaches help the boxoffice no end, for Kay and her ilk are lovely sights, leaping about the greensward on an early September afternoon.

From the Ground Up

REMEMBER the fascination of dropping Japanese paper pills into water and excitedly watching a whole garland of flowers unfurl on the surface? Well, the bulb world offers the same sort of excitement with almost as much ease. Each bulb comes equipped with miniature stem, leaves and flowers folded up within it, and enough food to bring about this miracle of nature. There is very little we can do to help except provide well drained soil and some winter covers—the bulb will do the rest.

Let's start with tulips, for you will certainly want a few of these somewhere and probably a lot of them to brighten up the whole garden. They can be planted in casual gay groups in the shrub borders or formally paraded along the walks or in flower beds. The visions of tulips are before us, when we visit the seedsman to buy them. How can we resist any of the delicious colors and endles varieties? Particularly when tulip time can be prolonged by selecting from the early bloomers on through the cottage to the late Darwin types. The range of colors will satisfy the most exacting person.

There are a few points to consider in the planting. If your home is in the city, early fall planting (September or soon in October) will be best so that the bulb can get some root growth before the ground freezes. If your home is in the country, however, the bulbs, if placed in the ground early, will offer a tempting meal to field mice and others of that ilk. It is better in this case to plant the bulbs just before freezing weather and mulch the ground to keep the temperature even until growth commences in early spring. The planting method will be the same regardless of the time you plant them in fall.

—o-o—

AS I HAVE mentioned, good drainage is the first requisite. Break up the soil thoroughly to the depth and width of a spade for each bulb. If the soil is hard and of clay, loosen it with sand and enrich it with bone meal. Then dig a hole five or six inches deep with a broad trowel, put in a pinch of sand just under the bulb to assure drainage at this vulnerable spot, set the bulb firmly, and fill in with loose dirt.

To be sure the soil packs around the bulb properly, soak the ground thoroughly immediately after planting. Plant tulip bulbs eight to 12 inches apart, depending on their size. If the planting is done in early fall, the bulbs will need water at least once a week to make a good root growth. After the ground freezes mulch all bulbs with leaves, grass cuttings or straw to keep the temperature constant until spring. Tulips can be left in the ground for three or four years, or until the bloom begins to decrease. Then harvest them in summer after the foliage has ripened, divide the bulbs and replant in fall.

—o-o—

YOU WILL want narcissi in your garden, too, next spring, for they can be used in so many ways and so effectively that you can't resist the catalogues. A good scheme is to use the higher priced kinds for definite corners and protected spots in borders, while the cheaper varieties can be scattered or naturalized under a group of trees.

The "naturalizing" will be more natural if a handful of bulbs are flung across the ground and planted where they fall. The method for planting is the same as for tulips except that narcissi root less easily and will do better if planted early in September, despite the rodent hazard. The narcissi will not have to be lifted for four or five years if planted from 12 to 15 inches apart.

—o-o—

OTHER BULBS to delight the winter-weary eye are crocuses, grape hyacinths, snowdrops, winter aconites and scillas. These lovely little bulbs make a sheet of color when scattered on the grass, in little hollows or on swells in the garden. Their skimpy little leaves will have ripened and gone by the time the lawn mower is tuned up in spring, so their home under the grass is both safe and effective. Plant them in September, two inches deep and two or three inches apart in well-drained soil and with a pinch of sand for each to sit on. Mulch them when the ground freezes. Every third year they will have to be dug up, the many new bulblets separated and all replanted for the glory of spring.

SAUCE for the GOOSE

by
Irma S. Rombauer

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.

THERE are, I understand, two types of Chinese food—native Chinese dishes and Americanized Chinese dishes.

The whole culinary art of China depends upon the mixture, as few dishes are cooked separately.

I can give no examples of real Chinese food, but, as for the Americanized product, there are endless rules to be had.

These dishes are served generally, and one does not have to go to a Chinese restaurant in order to eat them, but our party did.

In order to acquire as much information as possible we all ordered different dishes.

One was chop suey with bitter melon, which, to our amusement, the Chinese waiter was unwilling to serve. He assured us that we wouldn't eat it and was so insistent that we meekly let him have his way.

—o-o—

WHAT HE did serve was: Warmein chicken chop suey with pineapple and crab fu yong.

The pork ribs (spare ribs) are first boiled, then baked. When served they look glazed, a rich brown sauce adhering to them. This is made with syrup, soy sauce and vinegar. A very good "occasional" dish.

The Warmein is a fine mixture of cooked vegetables, a little bacon and the usual (obligatory?) bean sauce. Cooked noodles are served over the top.

—o-o—

● THE CRAB fu yong is a rather firm omelet containing vegetables, onions, pepper beans, sprouts, etc., and crab meat, covered with fried noodles and swimming in a sweet syrup.

Here is an exact recipe for the

Chop Suey With Pineapple

Cut into small squares:
One pound veal.
One pound pork shoulder (or a two-pound chicken).

Brown the meat in two tablespoons butter. Cover it with boiling water. Simmer it covered until it is nearly tender.

Add:
One-half pound sliced mushrooms (optional).
One and one-half cups chopped onions.
Two cups diced celery.
One and one-half tablespoons cooking molasses.
Three tablespoons pineapple juice.
One-half teaspoon powdered ginger or a piece of ginger root.
One teaspoon salt.

Simmer the stew until the vegetables are tender. Add for the last 10 minutes one cup sliced pineapple cut into wedges.

Thicken the dish with one tablespoon flour stirred with two tablespoons pineapple juice.

Season it with soy sauce.

California Salad

● ARRANGE ON a platter or in an individual plate: Lettuce leaves, skinned and sliced avocado, bananas, oranges and tomatoes.

Cover the salad with French dressing.

California Baked Fruit

Six Servings.

Drain various kinds of stewed fruits.*

There should be about three cups full.

Place the fruit in rows in a greased oven plate.

Sprinkle it with:
One-half cup ground macaroons or nut meats.
Three tablespoons lemon juice.
Three tablespoons fruit juice, or maraschins, brandy, rum, etc.

Dot it with two tablespoons butter.

Bake the fruit in a moderate oven 350 degrees for about one-half hour. Serve it hot.

*A No. 2½ can of fruit salad may be used.

Orange Icebox Cookie

Cream:
One-half cup butter.
One and one-half cups sugar.
Beat in two eggs.
Add:
One-fourth cup orange juice.
One tablespoon lemon juice.
One teaspoon grated orange rind.
One teaspoon grated lemon rind.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.

Sift before measuring three and one-half cups bread flour.

Resift with two teaspoons baking powder.

Add the flour gradually to the other ingredients.

Beat or work the batter until they are well blended.

Shape the dough into two rolls, two inches in diameter.

Wrap them for about 24 hours (until the dough is very firm).

Cut the dough into the thinnest possible slices.

Garnish the centers if desired with nut meats.

Bake the cookies on a greased tin in a hot oven 400 degrees for about 10 minutes.

Gold Accents

That touch of gold which is such an important asset to the success of a black costume may be achieved in various ways. It may appear in the form of a large belt buckle, a row of tiny buttons or a strand of beads. Should you wish it to be intensified, wear a black frock which is topped with dull gold satin or with duvetyn. Both are listed among the important alliances of the season.

Cooking for All Members Of Household

Modern Housewife Plans Balanced Meals to Fit Varied Tastes.

By Alice Lynn Barry

MEALS come in patterns now. Based on the old familiar dress patterns, food patterns are cut to fit each member of the family and keep everyone satisfied. By that we mean that vitamins, minerals, proteins and starches are fitted into each meal to achieve balance, thus doing away with the old hit-and-miss methods. Of course, many a skillful cook has been serving her meals in patterns for years—just by instinct.

It's no trick if you remember that the starchy "energy" foods may be your starting base, followed by the necessary vegetables, the fresh fruits and the foods rich in vitamins and minerals. Rice is an excellent starch food, a real energizer, so it might well form the main dish or accompany the meat course. The addition of a vegetable or fruit salad, or a dainty fruit dessert, will complete a balanced meal.

—o-o—

FOR BREAKFAST, we serve orange juice for that vitamin C and rice waffles for energy. To make the waffles, sift one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon sugar and half teaspoon salt. Add two egg yolks, beaten with one cup milk. Beat until smooth. Add one cup cold, cooked rice and four tablespoons melted butter. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Bake on hot waffle iron and serve at once. If desired, serve with corn syrup.

A good, well-balanced luncheon menu might contain a slice of broiled ham with a fresh vegetable accompaniment. Bananas and cream, cup cakes and a beverage complete a splendid meal.

When the main course is substantial, the dessert should be light, such as a sherbet with dainty wafers or sponge cake. After our tomato juice cocktail, followed by roast beef, green peas, creamed cauliflower and an endive and watercress salad, we serve a cool, light lemon sherbet to top off an excellent dinner. For a nice sherbet, boil one cup water, quarter cup sugar and half cup light corn syrup together for five minutes. Add quarter cup lemon juice. Cool and freeze to a mush. Add one beaten egg white and freeze until firm.

—o-o—

A PERFECT pattern for a supper menu might include baked rice and cheese with an apple and celery salad, followed by a date mold, all foods contributing their share of the necessary proteins, vitamins and minerals. For the main dish, we need three cups of cooked rice, putting a layer in a greased baking dish. The rice layer should be followed by a layer of grated cheese, seasoned with salt and pepper. Continue adding layers until the dish is almost full. Add enough milk to come half-way to top of the rice. Cover with crumbs, dot with butter and bake in moderate oven for 30 minutes.

For the date mold, soak one tablespoon gelatin in quarter cup cold water for five minutes and dissolve gelatin and quarter cup sugar in one and a half cups of hot coffee. Cool until syrupy. Fold in half package dates, quarter cup chopped nuts and one-third cup of cream, whipped. Mold, and chill. Unmold and serve with whipped cream.

Rice Jelly Balls

Sugar and spice and very nice rice are what these jelly balls are made of! So get out your nutmeg, jelly and that bowl of boiled rice that we hope you keep handy in the refrigerator for just such an occasion as this, and go to town on this recipe.

Reheat two cups of boiled rice and mash it while hot. Stir in quarter cup melted butter, two well-beaten egg yolks and quarter teaspoon nutmeg and quarter cup sugar. Shape mass into balls and insert a teaspoon jelly or jam in the center of each. Dip in egg and cracker or bread crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat.

Serve with raisin sauce, made by cooking together for 15 minutes: one cup of seeded raisins (that have been put through a chopper and simmered in one and a half cups of cold water for five minutes) and half cup sugar. Just before serving the hot sauce add one and a half tablespoons lemon juice.

Muffs in Vogue

It won't be many weeks before muffs will be appearing again to distinguish new costumes. This coming winter they will be carried with suits as well as with frocks. In fact, it looks as though they will be in the limelight long before the weather man predicts genuine winter weather.

As an example of the importance of the muff, stylists are suggesting it as the smartest accent for a dressy suit. A large one of black Persian lamb is an accessory of significance with a black suit trimmed with the same fur while a suit of brown velvet which is banded with mink adds a mink muff to complete its qualifications for charm.

DISHES MOTHER COOKED

This Writer's Mother Was Noted for Her Cooking and He Gives Some of Her Favorite Recipes.

Smetana varies the old vegeable salad recipe.

At left—meat stuffed cucumbers provide a new and tasty treat.

Wm. H. Zerbe

Below—Bitochky smetana combines veal and sour cream to gratify taste.

FORTY-FIVE years or so ago when customers came into my mother's Russian restaurant they were more interested in Bitochky than they were in the balalaika, and a deep bowl full of Schavel garnished with Smetana and hard-boiled eggs was much more intriguing than the strains of the Volga Boatman or Tatanya.

While music undoubtedly furnishes much mental pabulum, a roast suckling-pig drenched with a fine sauce is much sturdier nourishment for the muscular appetite. And the Russians that literally inhabited the restaurant were much more intent on satisfying their stomachs than their aesthetic sense. Those were the days when a Russian restaurant was still a Russian restaurant.

There was none of this gulp-and-run business in the place. Food was taken seriously, generously—and many lengthy debates were held over a dish of Borsch by the habitues. A dinner very often consumed two hours. A man generally browsed around a table clustered with Zakusha (hors d'oeuvres) and sampled a dozen or more of these delicious appetizers—smoked salmon, sturgeon, sour cream and little red radishes, anchovies, boiled rice, eggs stuffed with giblets and onions, potatoes sliced fine and browned in duck's fat and pickled fruits and vegetables of all combinations—before sitting down to his regular meal.

Tradition tells somewhere, that Antony, the buggy-dashing Roman blade, gave the cook who arranged his banquet for Cleopatra the present of a city. I am certain that had it been within the power and means of some of my mother's satisfied customers, she would have been showered with cities—and perhaps countries. If ever a woman knew the path to a man's heart, she did—and there were no detours. Many women forget that a successful recipe is like a formula for, let's say dynamite—be there one little ingredient lacking, the kick is gone.

—o-o—

AS is natural, certain dishes that my mother made were especially favored by many of her patrons. I recall an enormous fat man who was tremendously fond of koulibayka and would consume prodigious amounts of these fish-cakes. After stowing away enough to appease three ordinary people and washing them down with a huge beaker of prosta kwascha—a buttermilk—he would waddle back to the kitchen and insist on kissing my mother's hand.

One night after the usual dinner hour there were about 50 or 60 Russians seated at the long tables in the dining room, drinking tea or vodka, or munching dry cakes. A middle-aged American came in, sat down at a table and called, "tchay, tchay" to a waiter. Tchay is the Russian word for tea. Presumably this was as far as his Russian vocabulary extended.

But the poor fellow must have been hungry for presently he beckoned the waiter to him again and started some weird gestures and contortions. He rose to his full height, clapped his sides three times and then started crowing loud enough to jiggle the dishes on the kitchen shelves. Instantly every eye in the room was on him, but he took his plate and passed it to the waiter who comprehended the man's wishes and soon brought him a portion of chicken.

There was one regular patron of the restaurant who held a particular fascination for me. Perhaps it was because he was a Yakute, and I had heard many strange tales about the Yakutes. This chap used to seat me at his table, ply me with tea out of the great copper samovar, and regale me with stories. He was tall and thin and always wore a rather soiled black velvet jacket. A long, scraggly beard covered the lower part of his face, and his cheeks and nose were covered with a tiny network of red lines.

There was an adage among the Yakutes which said: "To eat much meat, and grow fat upon it, is the highest destiny of man," and this fellow seemed to be upholding this adage. He used to tell me that four Yakutes would eat a horse. I believed him after watching him tuck away, at one sitting, a Betchina that would have lasted a large family a couple of days.

At first most of the people who came into the restaurant were Russians, but gradually customers of other nationalities drifted in, and it was no unusual sight to see an American devouring a portion of Forschmak or Scoblianka with as much gusto and relish as any dyed-in-the-wool Russian.

When I started to select a dozen recipes for this article from over a hundred that my mother left, I thought I would encounter some difficulties in picking the popular ones. However, it was quite simple. Every time I came upon a recipe that looked particularly ragged, finger-marked and shopworn, I chose that one. From a group of about 50, I culled the following:

Betchina

One (8 pounds) smoked ham.
Eight cups all-purpose flour.
Cold water.

Soak ham overnight in water to cover. Drain and dry thoroughly. Blend flour with enough cold water to make a stiff dough. Roll out to one-half inch thickness on a lightly floured board. Cover ham entirely with dough. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) three to 3½ hours. Remove from oven, cool slightly, cut away crust and serve. This recipe yields 12 to 15 portions.

Stuffed Cucumber

One pound round steak, ground.
Two slices bread.
One-quarter cup milk.
One medium-sized onion, choped.
One tablespoon butter.
Six medium-sized cucumbers.
Four cups cold water.
One-half cup vinegar.
One tablespoon granulated sugar.
Two bay leaves.
Two teaspoons salt.
One-quarter teaspoon pepper.
Three tablespoons flour.
Parsley.

Combine meat with bread which has been soaked in milk. Fry onion lightly in butter and stir into meat. Peel cucumbers, cut lengthwise, slice off tops and reserve seeds and pulp. Stuff with a prepared meat. Replace tops of cucumbers and fasten down with tooth picks. Place in kettle, add cold water to cover, also vinegar, sugar, bay leaves, salt and pepper. Cook until cucumbers are tender, about 20-25 minutes. Remove cucumbers. Thicken liquid with flour and serve as sauce over cucumbers. Garnish with parsley. This recipe yields six portions.

Onion and Apple Salad

Four medium-sized onions, sliced.
Four medium-sized apples, peeled and sliced.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
One hard-cooked egg yolk.
One tablespoon dry mustard.
One tablespoon granulated sugar.
One-quarter cup olive oil.
Two tablespoons vinegar.

Combine sliced onions and apples in a deep bowl. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Chill. Blend egg yolk with mustard and sugar. Gradually stir in olive oil. Add vinegar last and serve dressing over onions and apples. This recipe yields four portions.

Russian Vegetable Soup

One pound stewing beef.
One-half pound lean ham.
Two quarts cold water.
One and one-half teaspoon salt.
One-half cup dried peas.
One medium-sized onion, minced.
One medium-sized carrot, minced.
One leek, chopped.
One stalk celery, chopped.
One-half cup rice, cooked.

Place beef and ham in cold water and bring to a boil. Add salt. Cook slowly until tender. Cook peas, onion, carrot, leek and celery in water to cover generously until tender. Season lightly. Before serving, remove meat, cut in small pieces and add to vegetable soup with rice. This recipe yields eight portions. Frankfurters, sliced and fried, may be added to this soup instead of the meat.

Forschmak

One pound beef, boiled.
Six potatoes, cooked.
One medium-sized onion, minced.
Two tablespoons olive oil.
Six anchovies.
Two eggs.
One-quarter cup Parmesan cheese, grated.

Put beef and potatoes through food chopper, using fine knife. Brown onion lightly in olive oil and add to first mixture. Wash anchovies, gradually beat in egg yolks, then add egg whites, beaten until stiff, but not dry. Blend into first mixture. Put in greased casserole, sprinkle with cheese and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) until nicely browned, about 40 minutes. This recipe yields four portions.

Zakuska of Stuffed Eggs

Six hard-cooked eggs.
One tablespoon olive oil.
One-half cup tongue, minced.
One teaspoon onion, grated.
Dash of pepper.
Two anchovies, mashed.
One egg yolk.
One and one-half cups canned tomatoes.
One teaspoon salt.
One-half tablespoon butter.
Two teaspoons granulated sugar.
One teaspoon cornstarch.
Two tablespoons cream.

Cut eggs in half lengthwise. Remove yolks and mash to a paste with olive oil, tongue, onion, pepper and anchovies. Stuff back into whites and arrange on greased shallow baking dish. Brush with egg yolk, and set in hot oven (400 degrees) for two or three minutes. Serve with following sauce: Combine tomatoes, salt, butter and sugar and simmer 30 minutes. Mix cornstarch in a little cold water and add, cooking five minutes longer. Stir in cream. Strain and serve hot. This recipe yields six portions.

Bitochky Smetana

One pound ground veal.
Three medium-sized potatoes, cooked.
One egg.
One small onion, grated.
One teaspoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.
Three tablespoons butter.
One cup sour cream.

Combine veal with finely choped potatoes, egg, onion, salt and pepper. Mix well and form into round balls. Fry in butter. Add one-half cup of the sour cream and simmer for a few minutes. Before serving, add remaining sour cream. This recipe yields four portions.

Borsch

Four medium-sized beets.
Four cups stock or
Four cups hot water and four bouillon cubes.
Three tablespoons vinegar.
Two frankfurters, sliced.
Sour cream.

Scrape beets, wash and cut into small dice. Add to soup stock with vinegar. Cook until beets are tender. Strain and add frankfurter slices. Bring to a boil and serve at once with sour cream. This recipe yields four portions.

Smetana (Sour Cream) With Fresh Vegetables

Four small tomatoes, sliced.
Four small onions, sliced.
One medium-sized green pepper, chopped.
Six radishes, sliced.
One cup sour cream, chilled.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.

Combine tomatoes, onions, green pepper and radishes. Cover with sour cream, season with salt and pepper and serve at once. This recipe yields four portions.

Sliced dill pickle and green tomato prepared in this way is an equally delicious dish.

Finally, readers, we do recommend these recipes. You will find them different and decidedly interesting.

New Recipes For Luncheon Egg Servings

Cooking Expert Lists Seven Dishes in Which Eggs Are Used.

By Gladys T. Lang

Ham and Egg Timbales

BEAT four eggs without separating, add one-half teaspoon of salt, a little freshly ground pepper, one-half teaspoon of onion juice, one cup of ground ham and one cup of milk. Mix thoroughly and pour into six well-buttered custard cups. Place on folds of paper in a pan of hot water and bake slowly about three-quarters of an hour or until set. Turn out on rounds of toasted whole wheat bread and surround with creamed peas.

Egg Canapes.

Four slices of crisp, freshly made toast.
Four cold poached eggs.
One small can of tuna fish.
One teaspoon chopped parsley.
One tablespoon of chopped celery.
One teaspoon of chopped chives.
One tablespoon chili sauce.
Mayonnaise.
Salt and pepper.

Mash the tuna fish with the parsley, celery and chives. Add the chili sauce, salt and pepper and after mixing well, spread thickly on rounds of toast. On each place an egg which has been poached in a ring and allowed to chill. Over all pour a well seasoned mayonnaise. Surround with watercress and pickled beets.

Luncheon Egg Dish

Boil hard the desired number of eggs. Plunge into cold water and peel. Cut in halves lengthwise and carefully remove the yolks. Mash yolks and season with dry mustard, salt, pepper, a little scraped onion juice, lemon juice and melted butter. Refill whites and press halves together and place in a pyrex dish. Cover with a rich cream sauce. Cut up a few strips of bacon and fry crisp. Drain on absorbent paper and scatter over top of egg dish. Place in oven to thoroughly heat. Garnish with parsley.

Eggs Susette

Parboil two pairs of sweetbreads in acidulated water for 20 minutes, plunge into cold water, then remove all skin and membranes. Break into pieces and add to a well seasoned cream sauce.

Bake six large potatoes of uniform size, cut a slice from flat side and scoop out. Mash and season and line shell a quarter of an inch thick. Pour in the creamed sweetbreads. Make a well in center and in each drop a raw egg. Cover with buttered crumbs, mixed with grated cheese and bake until the eggs poach. Serve either with or without creole sauce.

Eggs and Mushrooms a la Newburg

One pound of mushrooms.
Three tablespoons butter.
Paprika and a dash of cayenne.
One tablespoon of flour.
One-half cup bouillon.
One-half cup cream.
Three tablespoons sherry.
Four hard boiled eggs.
Salt and pepper.

Peel and slice the mushrooms and cook in butter for 10 minutes. Add the paprika and cayenne while cooking. Dredge with flour and stir until dissolved, add the bouillon and cook until smooth, stirring constantly. Place in the double boiler, add the cream, sherry and sliced egg whites. Season with salt and pepper. Heat. Serve on crisp toast and over top sprinkle the egg yolks which have been pressed through a sieve.

Russian Eggs

One ounce of roquefort cheese.
Six hard boiled eggs.
One tablespoon each of minced celery and grated onion.
One teaspoon finely cut parsley.
One-fourth cup bread crumbs.
One egg.

Slice the eggs lengthwise and remove the yolks. Mash the yolks with the cheese, onion, celery and parsley, salt and pepper. Refill the egg cases with mixture and press halves together. Beat a raw egg with a little water. Roll the prepared eggs in bread crumbs, then in the raw egg and again in crumbs. Fry in deep fat to a light brown. Serve with a tomato sauce.

Sherred Eggs with Corn

Six eggs.
One tablespoon of anchovy paste.
One cup of Hollandaise.
One small can of caviar.
Six rounds of buttered toast.

Butter freshly made rounds of toast and spread sparingly with anchovy paste. On each place a freshly poached egg. Cover with Hollandaise sauce and top with caviar.

In a double boiler cook two cups of fresh corn cut from the cob, for 20 minutes. Make a cream sauce with two tablespoons of butter, two of flour and one cup of milk. Season to taste with salt, pepper, paprika and a little Worcestershire sauce. Mix with the corn. Half fill individual pyrex baking dishes, piling up around sides. Make a hollow in center of each and place a pimento ring. In the ring break an egg. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dot with butter and bake until eggs are set.

STAMPS · Styles for Men · DOGS

OFF the LEASH

by H. F. Owen

FROM now until December is the ideal training season for dogs. You can accomplish a great deal with your dog if you will spend 15 minutes or a half hour every day or evening with him.

One of the exercises a dog enjoys is jumping. You can teach him to jump over a hurdle, over a cane held in your hand, through a hoop, or through your arms. Also, the broad jump, over several obstacles placed so that the dog will have to make a long jump rather than a high one.

Your hurdles or obstacles should be no higher than the dog can readily jump. A large dog like the Doberman Pinscher Collie or German Shepherd can easily clear a barrier three and a half feet high. If you do not wish to build a hurdle there are many things that you may use for this purpose. A hedge or low fence makes a good hurdle. A chair will do and two or more chairs placed close together make a good obstacle for the broad jump.

To teach the dog to jump, first snap on his leash, then, leading him, either step over the hurdle or go past it at the end but hold your leash over the obstacle so the dog will have to jump it. Give a natural command, such as "over" or "jump," but give it in a spirited, eager tone.

After a few trials your dog will understand your command and you will need only to walk up to the hurdle and give your command. He will jump it eagerly. Now say, "Back," give your leash a quick jerk and your dog will jump again to you. Work the dog on the leash until he will jump over and back on command. Do not throw a ball or stick over the hurdle to teach him to jump, as he will go around the hurdle to get it, but after he has learned to jump over and back you can have him return an object thrown.

—o-o—

● TO TEACH your dog to jump over a cane, have him on the leash. Hold the cane in the hand nearest the dog. Hold the cane low and with the leash in the other hand, speak your command, "Jump," giving the leash a quick pull upwards and over the cane. Praise him if at first he only walks over the cane. In a very short time he will understand, and then you may hold the cane as high as he can jump easily.

In teaching him to jump through a hoop, hold the hoop as you did the cane, but pass the leash through the hoop to guide the dog at first. In holding the hoop for a dog to jump through, always hold it on an angle with the top of the hoop toward the dog. This is done because if the hoop is held straight up and down the dog may try to jump over the top.

After he has learned your commands and how to jump through the hoop, it is easy to get him to jump through your arms by making a loop with them.

REPUTED TO BE one of the toughest, strongest and most surefooted of all breeds, the Eskimo dog is a real product of the Arctic regions. For 2000 years he is known to have been used as a sled dog in the most trying climates. With a keen sense of smell, he is also used as a hunting dog in the Far North.

Although airplanes are now used a great deal by explorers in the Arctics, dogs will always be a necessity in reaching the snow-covered and mountainous interiors.

—o-o—

● THE ESMIKO dog has a very affectionate disposition and makes a very nice pet, but he is rather aggressive and not to be trusted too much with other dogs. He is a beautiful dog with small, erect ears, and a thick dense coat and tail tightly curled over his back. His coat is so thick that he is able to withstand the sub-zero temperatures, and the heavy rains do not penetrate. In color the most typical is white on the body with black heads and all white with silver gray on his back.

He never forgets anything he is taught, which may be the reason that he is so valuable on the frozen trails of the North. Once he has gone over a trail, he never loses his sense of direction.

In height, the male Eskimo stands from 22 to 25 inches. He weighs from 65 to 85 pounds. The female is from 20 to 25 inches high and weighs from 50 to 70 pounds.

The body of the Eskimo is powerfully built. His coat varies in length from three to six inches, with an undercoat of wool from one to three inches in length. His feet are large and well padded.

New Flares

While wider hemlines and swinging movement is the order of the day in skirts for autumn, not everything is built with a flare. Occasionly a flared tunic blouse tops a pencil slim skirt, and there is always the classic, straight dress for the conservative.

However, we shall be seeing much that is new in the way of flares. An attractive costume suit, youthful and bouyant of line, has a wide-flared belted tunic coat ending at the knee to show the slimest and straightest of skirts beneath. This is by way of accenting the coat's flare. A band of four around the bottom of this coat is another accent on the flare and spells distinction for autumn, 1936.

Cleanliness Is Paramount in Mouth Hygiene

"Infections Can Make No Headway Against Good Teeth and Gums."

By

Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE hygiene of the mouth includes not only the health of the teeth, but also the gums, tongue, salivary glands and tonsils. The tongue and salivary glands should perhaps be omitted, because there is no procedure that can be carried out to keep them healthy; although they may contribute to the general contamination of a mouth cavity and add to the unfortunate condition of bad health, they respond only to the general measures of cleanliness advocated below. The tongue, especially after the age of 50, should be watched for any open spot or denudation of the mucous membrane.

The other structures suffer from two handicaps which determine all their many troubles—first, from youth to age the teeth, gums and tonsils tend to degenerate and atrophy; second, they are constantly exposed to infection.

The atrophy the dentist has to fight all our lives. We can help prevent it by using a good protective diet—with milk, eggs, green vegetables and fruits. In the end, the atrophy is the more destructive of the two forces, because the infections which constantly bombard the mouth can make no headway against a strong set of teeth and gums.

—o-o—

THESE INFECTIONS work in various ways. They are introduced by the food, in the air which is constantly going in and out of our mouths, by the many things that both infants and adults put into their mouths. They are augmented by nests of food particles which get between the teeth and act as culture media for germs.

They are also augmented by the tendency of the gums in some mouths to recede from the teeth and make a pocket for germs, especially those called "Vincent's organisms," or trench mouth. These organisms are present in all mouths, but do no harm until they begin to attack the receding gum margins, where they create a spongy condition which bleeds easily,' and is evidenced by a blood-tinged accumulation of debris in the morning. Eventually this leads to pyorrhea, which is more destructive to teeth than dental decay itself.

The question of cleanliness, then, is paramount in mouth hygiene. Absolute cleanliness in the bacteriological sense of sterility is impossible, and the incessant use of mouthwashes and antiseptics may do more harm than good. But the removal of food particles and of debris in general around the gum margins and between the teeth will bring about a large measure of order, and as a useful by-product the manipulations will toughen the gums.

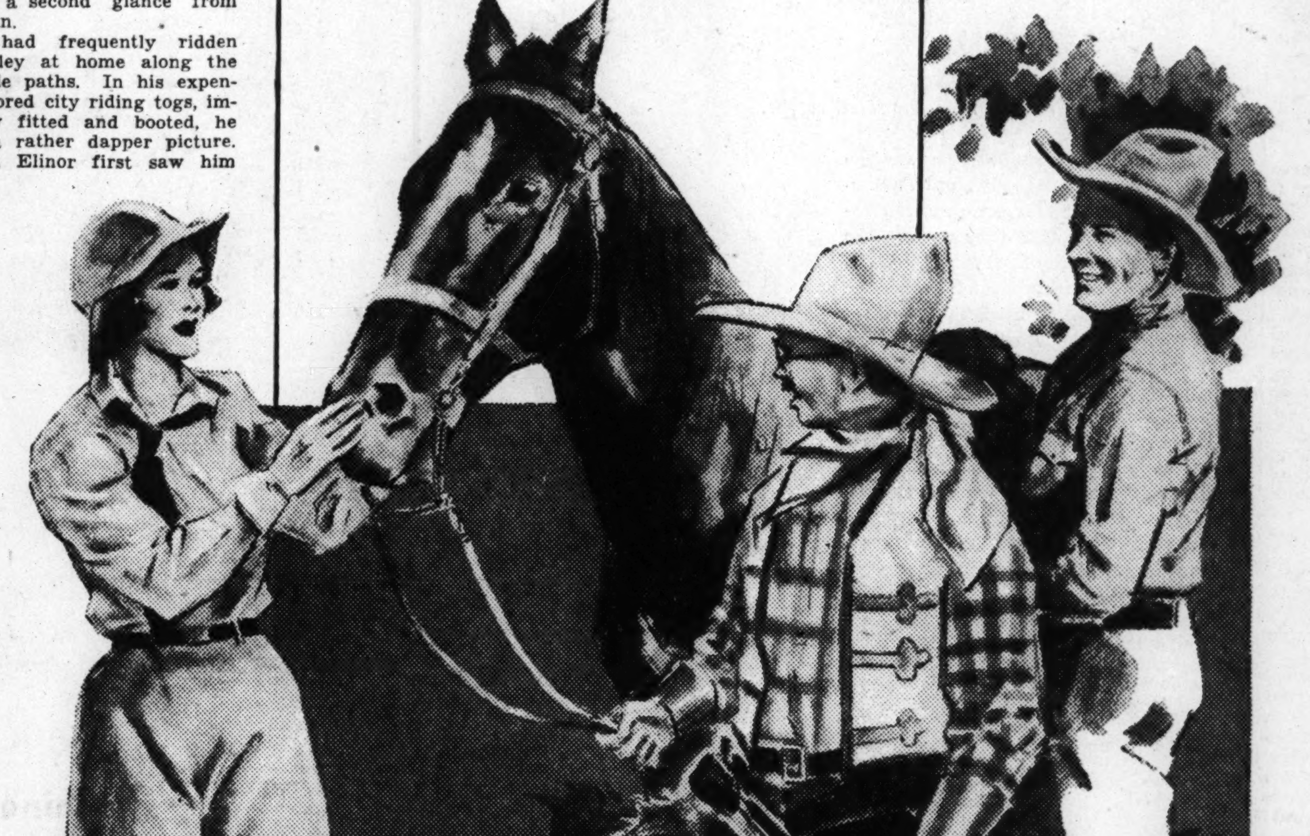
Cooking Rice

The secret of cooking rice properly lies in the generous use of water, and in sprinkling the rice into the cooking utensil so slowly that the boiling is maintained. Enough water must be used to keep the rice grains moving and separate until they are thoroughly done. So use your largest pan to boil your rice.

Dude Ranch

a short story

by JACK LAIT



Dudley was not much of a figure in a cowboy outfit.

WHEN Elinor announced that she was going to marry Dudley Hammersmith, there was considerable tut-tut and buzz-buzz.

Dud was short, nothing much to look at, almost twice her age, bespectacled, serious and no more prosperous than a number of apparently more eligible and younger men in mad pursuit of her.

He had no particular sense of humor, but he was gifted with a tireless persistency which made him a success as a business man and won his bride against heavy competition.

For a honeymoon locale, Elinor, who loved the rough outdoors and was a passionate horsewoman, chose a dude ranch out near Monte Vista, Colo., which she found through an advertisement in a magazine. It turned out to be ideal, since all the accoutrements of old-time life had been preserved, whereas in the guest cottages, which had rough exterior of log cabins, were all the comforts and conveniences of modernity, such as running hot water and long-distance telephone connections.

To the Hammersmiths was assigned a tall, weather-beaten, rangy cowhand, named Hank, as a guide. Hank wore the conventional sombrero, shaggy chaps and ferocious spurs. He was a figure to attract a second glance from any woman.

Elinor had frequently ridden with Dudley at home along the park bridle paths. In his expensively tailored city riding togs, immaculately fitted and booted, he had cut a rather dapper picture. But when Elinor first saw him emerge with his egregious hat and chaps, walking gingerly and uncomfortably in the high-heeled boots and getting tangled up in wild west spurs, she could hardly choke down a guffaw.

He looked so out of place and so far from home. And alongside the easy, graceful Hank, he looked lamentable, squinting through his glasses, white-faced and uncomfortable.

The instructions to the guides were not to originate conversations, not to volunteer speeches unless invited and encouraged. For a few days, during which Hank rode with them, adjusting their stirrups, warning them of the idiosyncrasies of their particular mounts, obeying regulations, he did not grow loquacious. But as the days wore on, one thing and another called for exchange of experiences and Hank felt quite free by then to talk up.

—o-o—

ELINOR thought him a modest and retiring fellow. There was no braggadocio about stampedes, taming mean horses, bull-dogging steers over at Alamosa, or such other feats as a professional cowboy might be expected to flash on the thrilled city tenderfoot. He talked politics with what seemed to be a fair knowledge of his subject, and when he got horsey he discussed mainly immediate topics such as the mishaps of some other guests who had insisted on picking horses too green for their amateur skill in the saddle and the like.

He never told about his past, nor was he asked to. Elinor could visualize him, a child of the wide areas, raised on the back of a mustang, singing the maudlin laments of the lonely herdsmen at a fire on a long, dark night.

He had scoured Hollywood with its myriad rough-riding extras, concentrated there for work in what the trade knows as "horse ropers." They could not have found a picture cowboy who looked more like a picture cowboy than did their Hank.

Elinor was devoted to her husband. There was no thought of potential disloyalty, even though now and then he did strike her as being a bit ludicrous. But she couldn't help thinking that if she were another girl—say, a girl who looked and felt very much like she did, but of course was not married or was not in love with her husband—it might just be that such a girl might enjoy being held in the strong arms of this tall son of the West.

In fact, there were hours when Dudley might have sat up abruptly had he been able to read the mind of his bride, who was speculating—vicariously, of course, through that other imaginary girl who had no husband or had no use for her husband—how it would feel to be Hank's gal; to ride with him off the beaten path of the dude ranch softies, out in the far beyond where there was no modern plumbing and where life was on the level.

If Hank ever caught such a light in her eye, he must have looked the other way. Surely he was never guilty of that unforgivable sin of a guide going flirtatious with a paying customer, especially a married one. Nor did Dudley lose a single snore in his complete confidence that his bride had thoughts for him alone—for him to whom Hank was just a stable boy.

They were coming toward the end of their stay and the end of their honeymoon, and they had just come to the end of their last ride with Hank, pulling up at the corral. Hank had been complimenting Mrs. Hammersmith on her fine riding ways, and Dudley had beamed at the compliment to her.

"Yes," he said, "Mrs. Hammersmith is considered one of the best equestriennes in town. We have our own horses and we keep them at the Midtown Stables, the swankiest in—"

"Midtown!" exclaimed Hank. "Gee, that's where I always tried to crash in but could never land. I work steady, myself, at the Utopia Riding Academy, around the corner from Midtown, only summers I come out here because—well, to tell the truth, I make enough in tips (and he looked significantly toward Dudley) to pay my way through my night courses in college. . . . I'm going for a CPA, you know—Certified Public Accountant—and I'm supposed to be pretty good that way."

—o-o—

HAD Hank slapped Elinor in the face with his leather gauntlet he could not have brought the crimson flush to her cheeks that his clumsy statement—she could never think of it as anything but a confession—had prompted.

Her noble child of nature! Her cowboy! Her—no, that other Elinor's—romantic lover! Her silent, strong Westerner!

A sidewalk-reared city groom in a livery stable, a tip-chiseling, panhandling racketeer; and most of all, a potential master-bookkeeper.

"If you will write Mr. Hammersmith," she said with mock courtesy, "stating your qualifications, perhaps he would recommend you to the Midtown management. But I do know they are extremely exacting, and that the recommendations must be of the very highest."

The ring in her voice was unusual for her habits of even-tempered speech. Dudley looked up surprised. But Hank took it with great appreciation and warmly answered, "Oh, thanks, that will be just dandy of you."

Elinor turned and started toward the bungalow. Dudley lingered behind a moment to give Hank the tip for which there had been no need to ask. Then he followed Elinor.

"I'll do the best I can for that young fellow," said Dudley. "He's a pretty fine boy. I think the Midtown Stables would do well if they had him."

"If you do, I'll never talk to you again in my life," snapped Elinor. "I think he's a vulgar, crude beggar. If he gets into Midtown, I'll never ride there again!"

Weeks later Dudley Hammersmith sat at his desk. His secretary had opened his mail. Rapidly he turned the letters over with annotations, brief and cryptic. One he held between his thumb and finger, sighed and said:

"Splendid young fellow. Like to help him. But Mrs. Hammersmith had a grouch on him. . . . Now that I think of it, she disliked him from the first. . . .

The notation on this one was "wastebasket."

"Old Maxims Still Valuable In Daily Life"

"Among Greatest Are 'Know Thyself,' 'Control Thyself,' 'Give Thyself.'"

By the Rev. J. F. Newton

"WHAT I like about your column," a reader writes, "is that it is simple, kindly, and has the human touch. Better still, it does not feed us on soft soap, but gives the middle man a little faith in himself and the courage to carry on in face of facts.

My reader is right in saying that soft soap does not help in the job of living, unless we just want to get by. It slurs over hard realities, and slides by plain facts. Life is a stiff fight, a hard row to hoe, and it was meant to be so. Otherwise, our humankind would be a set of softies, not worth our salt. As it is, half of our trouble in life comes from not facing the facts, and the other half from wanting to have our own way.

One of my best loved books is "Typhoon," by Joseph Conrad. In that book the old Skipper won out, because he dared to sail into the white teeth of the storm, rather than be swept away by it. He kept his head in the midst of panic, held his ship to its course, and made the harbor.

Of course the old Skipper had courage, but he had something else too, something beyond courage, out of which his courage grew and by which it was fed. It was not philosophy in the technical sense—as when we speak of the philosophy of Plato or Kant—but something more practical which gave him poise, patience and a quiet mind even in a whirling storm. Let us call it a life-wisdom—faith in his ship, faith in himself, and the skill to use his vast knowledge of the sea to sail to safety.

—o-o—

AT OUR HAND, ready for our use, is the highest life-wisdom of the race, old, simple, true, tried by long time, truth learned by living and tested by generations of men. It is all summed up in three great maxims, just six words, two of which we owe to Greece, two to Rome, and two to Judea:—"Know thyself, control thyself; give thyself." By such stars men have sailed the seas of life, in storm and calm, and by following them they have found out what life is all about, what it is worth, and how to live it.

"Know thyself"—life is an adventure in self-discovery; it begins early and goes on to the end. How little we know of ourselves at first, and how much we learn betimes, and how many surprises we have along the way. By the time a man is 40, it is said, he ought to know his body, how to take care of it, how to use it. In the same way, he ought to be aware of his mental powers, what he can do, what he cannot do, and how to make the best investment of his capacities. He ought to know his moral life too, his strong points, his weak spots, and how to guard them; and something of that strange inner life of faith and vision and immortal hunger.

"Control thyself"—life is a process of self-discipline and self-mastery. But, if we do not know ourselves, we cannot control ourselves, and there will be chaos and disaster. The old Stoics, who gave us this maxim, knew that a soft, loose, ungoverned life is futile. To live at random, the victim of impulse, is wasted and folly. Life, to be of any value, must have unity, direction and stern discipline, and it must be dedicated to some work or cause worthy of itself. Otherwise it goes stale, falls flat, or is frittered away in "miserable aims that end with self."

—o-o—

"GIVE THYSELF"—life must be out-going, not ingrowing, or it will tie itself into knots and become an irritation, not an inspiration. Selfishness automatically defeats itself. To be healthy and happy we must be self-spenders, else we lose what we have. But in order to give anything to our race we must be something and have something—must know our own powers, develop them, master them, and by concentration and consecration give them in service, and often in sacrifice, to our fellows. No man can be happy or holy until he gets himself off his hands.

Such is the life-version—very old and very simple—upon which all my talks are based. Jesus taught it in a picturesque way, when He said that the man who seeks to save his life will lose it; and the man who loses himself—gives himself, forgets himself in devotion to a great and worthy end—finds himself, finds meaning and purpose and happiness in life. He himself proved the truth of it in His own life. He gave up the things that men strive for, fight for, seek for, yet He was the richest soul who has walked and toiled among us.

Life can be a masterpiece, a mixture, or just a mess. It depends on how we take it, what we believe about it, and how we live it every day; and that is what we are talking over from day to day, frankly, in the face of all the facts, trying to learn and live.

THE STAMP REVIEW

By John Chamberlin

● Stamp collecting is the most universal hobby in the world. The millionaire and machinist have something in common when they talk about stamps. The millionaire can collect the rareties, but the machinist can collect postally-used minor varieties of the current two-cent stamp, and the machinist may derive as much satisfaction from his collection as the millionaire will from his.

The late King George of England, a world famous philatelist, while visiting war veterans' hospital, was presented with a postally-used copy of the current half-penny stamp with an inverted watermark by a disabled veteran. King George easily could have had the stamp in unusued condition, but if he wanted it genuinely postally used, he would have had to do the same as the veteran—sort thousands of used stamps until he found one. The veteran had found two. King George sent the disabled veteran stamps in trade of equal value which the former soldier needed in his collection.

ALMOST every stamp of Japan of the 1876 to 1879 issue has been imitated. Some imitations are so crude in appearance that they cannot be considered dangerous. More care has to be taken with the stamps Scott's Nos. 60, 61, 64, 67, 68 and 72. Of these, fairly well executed imitations exist, by which the less vigilant collector may be taken in.

The Japanese Government permitted the making of these imitations on condition that their makers embodied in the design two Japanese characters denoting "imitation."

The Japanese imitators made these two characters so small that the average eye could not see them, and often cunningly placed these two little characters so as to make it appear that they were part and parcel of the regular design.

A favored place for the "imitation marks" is among the flowers and in the shade of the foliage. If you don't find the imitation marks on any of the rarer stamps, compare the design under a magnifying glass with one of the cheaper stamps. The imitation marks may be cleverly hidden in the design somewhere, else they may be erased or covered up by the cancelation.

FRANCE IS reputed to be about ready to issue a stamp for the tercentenary of Corneille's play, "La Cid." It appeared in November, 1636, and was one of the greatest successes of its author, Pierre Corneille, 1606-1684, a French dramatist and poet.

Corneille was a contemporary of Cardinal Richelieu (France A59, and Guadeloupe A14) founder of the French Academy. The enormous success of "La Cid" provoked the jealousy of both Richelieu and the Academy. Contemporaries assailed it. Writers who disagreed with the author assailed the play and held that the subject was utterly bad; that the rules of dramatic composition had been disregarded; that the action was badly directed; that the versification was consistently faulty, and that the play had been stolen.

—o-o—

EARLY THIS YEAR Latvia issued a set of four stamps, each bearing a man's portrait, commemorating Latvian Press Week. Not one of the four men rates the Britannica, but from foreign sources they are:

A. Kronvalds, 1837-1875, who was a teacher and journalist. He organized the Lettish schools and worked for a revival of the Lettish language and literature. His portrait is on the three santimu value printed in vermillion.

A. Pumpurs, 1841-1902, is shown on the 10 santimu value in the uniform of a Russian officer. He was professionally a military typographer and was the author of Latvia's national epic, "Bear-Killer." He also wrote many songs and poems.

The 20 santimu pink shows J. Maters, a journalist. He published his own novels in his own paper, but was better known for his translations of legal works which form the basis of the present Latvian legal code. He was born in 1845. The date of his death cannot be ascertained.

Auseklis is the pen name of the poet Mikus Krogsemis, 1850-1879, who was a teacher at Riga and St. Petersburg. He translated into Lettish the poems of Schiller (Germany A52 and A73), Goethe (Germany A51) and many others. He also wrote many ballads, songs and poems which are notable in Latvia for their beauty of language and imaginative feeling.

KING EDWARD has finally appeared philatelically, and in spite of rumors to the contrary, he appears first on the stamps of Great Britain. Sept. 1 was the first day in London and about 30,000 of the stamps were sold. The design is a photographic profile of the King, and was chosen by Edward himself. But the fact that the King chose the design had not prevented criticism by British artists, who maintain that there is no dignity in a photograph.

Wide Belts

By their belts you shall know them—the fashion-wise women of autumn, 1936. Girded for style they shall be, even as the story books tell us the knights of old were "girded for battle." And who is there to say that keeping up with the fashions isn't a battle, of a sort?

Paris puts emphasis on wide belts for both day and evening dresses. They appear in gold kid, in patent leather, in plain leather on daytime clothes. Then there are wide velvet belts, embroidered and ingeniously fastened by narrow straps and buckles of contrasting color. A wide gold kid belt encrusted with turquoise beads is the feature of a white satin evening gown in a St. Louis shop. This belt is made in sections in order not to detract from suppleness of figure and stitched in a way remindful of the coat-of-arms on a shield.

Do you have cocktail glasses so small or peculiarly shaped that they are difficult to clean? There is a small cocktail-glass cleaner, which consists of a tiny rubber sponge on the end of a pencil-shaped handle, that will do the job thoroughly and easily.

Gray Costume Suit

Dignity and classic distinction are beautifully exemplified in a costume suit of gray which not only will meet the first fall days superbly, but will go smartly through the winter since its hip-length jacket is of gray caracul. The one-piece dress is fashioned with a slight flare to the skirt, a close neckline with a youthfully small collar of silver brocade, and a center front closing held with chased silver fastenings from neck to waist. Such a suit will do for tea or cocktails, or almost any affair not requiring formal dress.

Knitted Fashions

Designers of knitted fashions are determined to keep up with the mode. The peplum suits and frocks look difficult to create with yarn and needles, but expert creators have mastered the art. One of the most stunning costumes of the autumn is a three-piece suit which has a tunic length coat that flares decidedly at the hemline. The skirt is straight and slender. A contrasting knitted blouse is dotted with stars and has a high, standing collar.

"Old Maxims Still Valuable In Daily Life"

"Among Greatest Are 'Know Thyself,' 'Control Thyself,' 'Give Thyself.'"

By the Rev. J. F. Newton

"WHAT I like about your column," a reader writes, "is that it is simple, kindly, and has the human touch. Better still, it does not feed us on soft soap, but gives the middle man a little faith in himself and the courage to carry on in face of facts.

My reader is right in saying that soft soap does not help in the job of living, unless we just want to get by. It slurs over hard realities, and slides by plain facts. Life is a stiff fight, a hard row to hoe, and it was meant to be so. Otherwise, our humankind would be a set of softies, not worth our salt. As it is, half of our trouble in life comes from not facing the facts, and the other half from wanting to have our own way.

One of my best loved books is "Typhoon," by Joseph Conrad. In that book the old Skipper won out, because he dared to sail into the white teeth of the storm, rather than be swept away by it. He kept his head in the midst of panic, held his ship to its course, and made the harbor.

Of course the old Skipper had courage, but he had something else too, something beyond courage, out of which his courage grew and by which it was fed. It was not philosophy in the technical sense—as when we speak of the philosophy of Plato or Kant—but something more practical which gave him poise, patience and a quiet mind even in a whirling storm. Let us call it a life-wisdom—faith in his ship, faith in himself, and the skill to use his vast knowledge of the sea to sail to safety.

—o-o—

AT OUR HAND, ready for our use, is the highest life-wisdom of the race, old, simple, true, tried by long time, truth learned by living, and tested by generations of men. It is all summed up in three great maxims, just six words, two of which we owe to Greece, two to Rome, and two to Judea:—"Know thyself, control thyself; give thyself." By such stars men have sailed the seas of life, in storm and calm, and by following them they have found out what life is all about, what it is worth, and how to live it.

"Know thyself"—life is an adventure in self-discovery; it begins early and goes on to the end. How little we know of ourselves at first, and how much we learn betimes, and how many surprises we have along the way. By the time a man is 40, it is said, he ought to know his body, how to take care of it, how to use it. In the same way, he ought to be aware of his mental powers, what he can do, what he cannot do, and how to make the best investment of his capacities. He ought to know his moral life, too, his strong points, his weak spots, and how to guard them; and something of that strange inner life of faith and vision and immortal hunger.

"Control thyself"—life is a process of self-discipline and self-mastery. But, if we do not know ourselves, we cannot control ourselves, and there will be chaos and disaster. The old Stoics, who gave us this maxim, knew that a soft, loose, ungoverned life is futile. To live at random, the victim of impulse, is wasted and folly. Life, to be of any value, must have unity, direction and stern discipline, and it must be dedicated to some work or cause worthy of itself. Otherwise it goes stale, falls flat, or is frittered away in "miserable aims that end with self."

—o-o—

"GIVE THYSELF"—life must be out-going, not ingrowing, or it will tie itself into knots and become an irritation, not an inspiration. Selfishness automatically defeats itself. To be healthy and happy we must be self-spenders, else we lose what we have. But in order to give anything to our race we must be something and have something—must know our own powers, develop them, master them, and by concentration and consecration give them in service, and often in sacrifice, to our fellows. No man can be happy or holy until he gets himself off his hands.

Such is the life-version—very old and very simple—upon which all my talks are based. Jesus taught it in a picturesque way, when He said that the man who seeks to save his life will lose it; and the man who loses himself—gives himself, forgets himself in devotion to a great and worthy end—finds himself, finds meaning and purpose and happiness in life. He himself proved the truth of it in His own life. He gave up the things that men strive for, fight for, seek for, yet He was the richest soul who has walked and toiled among us.

Life can be a masterpiece, a mixture, or just a mess. It depends on how we take it, what we believe about it, and how we live it every day; and that is what we are talking over from day to day, frankly, in the face of all the facts, trying to learn and live.

Signals in BRIDGE

By Ely Culbertson

EVERY player of experience has seen the fine results that may be achieved by correct signaling between defenders. The precise, although subtle, language of signal cards is much better appreciated than it was a few years ago, but there is a concomitant to this that is not nearly as well known. If a thief wants to rob a house in comparative safety, his first step usually is to cut the telephone wires. Far be it from me to suggest that contract players should take pointers from thieves, but it must be admitted that the correct technique to be observed on certain hands might be described as "cutting the wire."

West, dealer.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 spade	1 diam.	2 hearts	Double 2 n. t.
Pass	3 n. t.	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the six of hearts, and East's nine was taken by declarer's ace. Declarer now counted the tricks he could run off and found they added up only to eight: five diamonds, two hearts and one spade.

—o-o—

● OBVIOUSLY, he could build another spade trick by conceding the king. But there was a severe danger attendant on the normal play of laying down the ace and another spade. In the first place, it would locate the ace for West's guidance. In other words, he would look to another suit for his partner's high card strength.

But even more important than this was the danger of finding West with a six-card suit which would leave his partner with only one. In that event, two rounds of spades would give East a golden opportunity to discard a heart.

And the declarer realized that, between expert partners, as East and West were, this signal would shout from the house tops for a discontinuance of heart leads and, consequently, a shift to a new suit. That the new suit would be clubs was only too apparent.

—o-o—

● SO THE declarer simultaneously concealed his spade ace and severed the partnership communications by leading his low spade up to dummy at the second trick.

West hardly can be blamed for falling into the trap. Not knowing but what his partner had the singleton ace of spades, he ducked and dummy's queen held, after which eight tricks promptly were run off. West truly was on a spot, and, even if he had made the correct guess of putting up the spade king, it would have been extremely far-fetched for him to have guessed further that a club shift was vital. For all he could know, East might hold the diamond ace and, in that case, he certainlly would want a heart continuation to clear his suit.

The true point of the play is, however, that had declarer laid down the ace and another spade, West's correct defense would have become crystal clear on the discard of a heart by his partner.

—o-o—

QUESTION: What is the proper way to play the trump suit when one cannot afford to lose even one trick, and the holdings are as follows:

Declarer	Dummy
A Q 9 6 5 3	J 8 4 2

Answer: Assuming enough entries in dummy, the best percentage to lose no trick is to lead the jack.

Brevity in Skirt Lengths

THE news that skirts are shorter isn't creating a ripple of interest any more because women have decided to accept the brevity as a badge of smartness. What to do about their afternoon and dinner clothes, however, continues to bother them because there is such a wide diversity of opinion as to the proper length of more formal clothes.

In deciding upon skirt lengths for dress-up occasions, it is safe to determine that erring on the side of too short a skirt is better this season that to err with a skirt too long. Afternoon dresses are adopting street lengths, which means that they are nearer the knees than they are the ankles. Even many of the dinner costumes have skirts as short as those worn during the day. These outfits have decided formality of styling and are most practical because they are suitable for so many diifferent occasions.

The skirt which reaches just above the ankles is another popular length for dinner wear. It is being featured when the dress has the shoulders covered, and also for the dinner suit which has a dress and matching jacket.

DRIVING ALONG the coast one day this week we stopped at Malibu Inn for a noonday snack and who should we find perched at the counter in white flannel slacks but Luise Ranier, and enjoying a piece of fried chicken, even as you or I when we fancy we are unobserved, holding it with her fingers. Luise has a home down that way somewhere and goes to the inn frequently. She particularly recommended some home-made jellies and jams which they sell there. She herself was buying quite a supply, but remembering where the red hand pointed on our scale that morning, we regretfully turned away. A night or so ago I had seen the lovely Luise at the Biltmore Bowl at a dinner party wearing yellow satin and looking very feminine, indeed. In the same party was Norma Shearer, still reminiscent of Juliet with her hair done in the Juliet bob and wearing a graceful gown of white chiffon which was accordion pleated and trimmed with silver.

—o-o—

AND SPEAKING of Miss Shearer, I wonder if you happened to hear her a few nights ago when she broadcast over the air several scenes from "Romeo and Juliet," and, if so, if you had visualized her as wearing her Juliet costume for the occasion. Well, being among those present, I can tell you that she wasn't. But she might well have been dressed for a modern version done in up-to-the-minute clothes, for she had chosen a black crepe dinner frock cut with a flaring tunic which reached to the knees and under it a slim skirt slit at the front. The sleeves were long, the neck "Veed" and a wide cummerbund girdled the waist, fastening with jeweled buttons.

—o-o—

THE THOUGHT of costumes brings me to my meeting with Lenore Ulrich on a set a couple of days ago. She had on the most astounding creation. A silvery white dress with very full skirt on which small, gaily colored birds, made of real feathers, were flying about sportively. In front, on the side, was a pocket formed like a bird's nest, with little cloth eggs in it. Miss Ulrich enlightened me by saying that this phenominon was designed for a fancy dress ball sequence in Greta Garbo's picture, "Camille".

—o-o—

I MET Maureen O'Sullivan yesterday putting a few last-minute finishing touches to her trousseau, for her marriage to John Farrow, which took place this morning. Maureen assured me that hers is almost entirely a tailored trousseau. She has numerous suits of wool and tweeds and one, quite dressy, of black velvet. There is also a serviceable pig skin trench coat and the "cutest little pigskin beret which laces together in sections and looks just like a football cut in hall," said she. So, Junior, watch your pigskin!

—o-o—

JOAN CRAWFORD certainly does have the best looking outfit: At the opening of "Every Man" at the Hollywood Bowl this week, in which George Houston, who played "Cyrano De Bergerac" at the Municipal Opera a few seasons ago, has the leading role, she got a chance to wear another new one. Her dress was of soft black wool cut with the high empire waist line and embroidered across the front with large gold palm leaves, done, she told me, by experts from Guadalajara, Mexico. The neck line was plain and round and the shoulders broad, the sleeves being wide and full to the elbows and from there to the wrist quite tight.

Over this dress Joan wore a hipline cape of black galyak, and her hat was a black tricorn, while her bag, which was quite large and of envelope shape, was covered on the front with black galyak. When she slipped her hand through the strap on the back it looked as though she was carrying a muff. Just a trifle advanced for September, but then they get that way out here.

No one had as much fun at Ensenada over the holidays as Gloria Stuart, Arthur Sheekman and Groucho Marx, who hired ramshackle rigs and horses from the local folk and careened wildly up and down the beach in impromptu races.

Robert Florey and Nick Grinde, Glenda Farrell, Peter Dunne, Bradley Page, Binnie Barnes and Roscoe Karns were among other Hollywood people at the Mexican resort.

EVERY time a new pastime gets a strangle hold on the Great American Public, we girls get a break, because it means something new under the sun for us to trot around in.

Now it's the automobile trailer that has come into our lives. . . . The Gypsy Life. . . . Doing our traveling close to nature . . . but the twentieth century girl wouldn't lack interest in clothes if she were marooned in a light tower. She knows that short effective poem about "Vanity is sanity."

There are various angles to this trailer traveling costume. Out at Twentieth Century-Fox Gwynne Wakeling, the designer, has conjured an outfit for Simone Simon which she considers ideal for roughing it trailer-fashion. The basis of the garb is tailored culottes of fine tan gabardine with a center zipper fastener and capacious slot pockets. The shirt is brown silk jersey with a minature Sam Browne belt and a brilliant sling scarf. The most novel part of the costume are "mosquito boots," especially designed of brown glove suede and patterned after riding boots. A fitted tailored jacket of brown gabardine and a brown felt hat fashioned like a sun helmet complete the ensemble.

HAVING LEARNED the American language on her first visit here, Anna Sten is now busily engaged with the more difficult matter of learning the customs of American life.

In her recently purchased Santa Monica home, the Russian star diligently practices such typical complexities as ping pong, water polo, parlor games, appreciation of American song writers and the matter of acquiring a sun tan.

Only one Russian diversion has Miss Sten kept for herself. She still takes long morning walks early in the morning and at dusk.

LEE TRACY, who favors Chinese food at the Brown Derby, made no mistake in bringing back a present for the chef there upon the former's return from his South Sea voyage.

The gift was a loose raglan coat which Foo Wong, the appreciative chef, wears to market, to social events and, it is suspected, to his bed chamber.

Meanwhile, the canny Mr. Tracy is receiving what is probably the most sumptuous and carefully prepared Chinese dishes since the reign of the empress dowager of China 30 years ago.

LOTS of folks in this day and age make a chore of being beautiful, but not so little Arline Judge who plays games with her beauty rites.

Instead of going in for the cool and calculating one, two, three setting-up exercises every morning, she hops into the swimming pool and pretends she is swimming the channel. Or if there is no swimming pool available she drops down flat on the floor on her tummy and goes through the swimming motions. Again she is swimming the famous channel and if she stops before a certain number of paddles she'll drown. Since swimming is numbered close to the top in ideal figure-keeping exercises, Arline never neglects this one.

Another game is doing her cycling exercises lying on her back with her legs making circular motions in the air. Now she is riding in a bicycle derby and if she stops before a planned number of revolutions, she'll lose the race.

When she brushes her hair she pretends to herself if she stops under a hundred strokes her hair will immediately lose all its sheen. When she puts on her make-up, she mentally tel's herself she is tinting a photograph to enter in a contest. The lipstick must go on without the slightest smudge. The powder must be exactly the right shade no matter how much tan she has and it must be as even as an old master would put flesh tones on canvas.

Keeping beautiful can easily become an irksome task, but not as far as the dashing Arline is concerned who has plenty of fun doing the job.

AN OCELOT street coat is one of the gorgeous things Designer Howard Shup is doing for Joan Blondell to wear to New York. (We wouldn't be surprised if by the time you read this Joan would be Mrs. Dick Powell and the outfit we mention turned out to be part of her honeymoon trousseau.) The coat, which is part of an ensemble, is made on simple swagger lines with a Peter Pan collar and is lined in golden brown silk crepe. Under the coat is a dress of matching brown crepe with flared skirt and the Alix Arabian treatment of twisted belt and cuffs.

The Problems Of a Married Woman Worker

She Has to Be Successful in at Least Two Distinct Jobs.

By Elsie Robinson

HER club is discussing this muchly muddled modern world, and the various mixups we mortals are in—so won't I please give my opinion on who's hardest hit?

Gladly, lady. Basing the same on 20 years of fevered mail and considerable personal snooping.

To my notion, the most perplexed, plagued, pestered and generally picked-'n-put-upon human in our modern scene is the married woman worker.

And the more efficient and successful she is, the more is she on the spot.

For why? For several whys. First, a married woman worker never holds one job, always two or three. She's mother, housekeeper, mate, social secretary, business confidante and general fixer. And in each of these jobs she is expected, by virtue of her business training, to surpass a strictly domestic record.

Other mortals may loaf on the job. The wife next door may spend a gossipy morning over the phone and let the sewing go until tomorrow. Her husband may sprawl out with pipe and paper after working hours. But no such luxuries for the married woman worker. Having ceased being saleswoman or boss, she must instantly become a 16-cylinder Missis or face the indignant glares and sneer or the hurt wonder of an outraged family and community.

This, however, is the least of the married woman worker's burdens. For harder to manage or endure, and infinitely more demoralizing to wifely affection and respect is masculine resentment.

—o-o—

EVERY MARRIED woman worker is wedded not only to a man but to a grudge. Grudge against what? Against that very job by which her family profits. Wives, to be sure, have always worked, and husbands have always expected them to do so. But they worked in a sphere which did not challenge the superior male.

Superior, how? No matter how. He just was. Time was when papa expected and received first place for no weightier reason than that he could grow whiskers and an Adam's apple. But with woman's advent into the industrial world, this simple argument no longer sufficed. The male no longer looms large by mere comparison with the female's littleness. He now must make good on his own. And, as a consequence, he is having a swell fit of pouts.

Every male will meet this statement with furious denials—and be perfectly sincere in his protests. But the fact remains that, consciously or unconsciously, mama's job gets papa's goat. And he never lets her forget the fact.

—o-o—

NOR IS THIS attitude confined to the diggers and delvers. The learned and mighty are quite as riled by feminine efficiency as the lowly low-brow, and equally pesty about it. Under this particular provocation, the fairest and fondest of men become regular meanies.

The married woman worker is not only a target for her husband's ire, but she is also the alibi for his errors. If he blunders, or in any way "loses face" before his masculine contemporaries, SHE is responsible. SHE has, in some way, neglected or imposed upon him . . . failed to understand him . . . interfered with his program.

In short, though theoretically emancipated, she must still be the domestic scapegoat which her mother was before her . . . that scapegoat which every male has required since Adam first chewed the apple and blamed it on Mrs. Eve!

And yet, girls, somehow, nevertheless and notwithstanding, we couldn't do wtihout 'em, could we?

Rust Tone Dress

"As tonic as Autumn wine" is one St. Louis matron's description of the new afternoon clothes. With a feeling for "elegance" everywhere, and with "short" dinner clothes coming into the fashion picture, what wardrobe wouldn't revive with such a bracer as this: a beautifully cut, simple dress of silk in a matlasse weave ornamented with embroidered dots of gold thread. The color is a new rust tone which is neither red nor brown, but partakes of both. It's a dress of urban sophistication for many a graceful occasion.

Hat Decorations

Not all of the flowers bloom on spring millinery. Some are reserved for autumn hats. Geraniums are the chosen ones in current collections, perhaps because it is logical that they should continue to blossom throughout the winter months. Vivid red geraniums are placed at the side of a peaked turban with as much daring as the designer could attempt. They are so large that an entire side of the hat is completely covered with the blossoms and the foliage.

How to Keep Clothing Free Of Dust, Soot

Cleanliness of Clothes Is the First Essential to Good Health.

THE hint of fall in the air these early mornings in St. Louis, makes us conscious of tweeds, woolens and heavier clothing. And in autumn and winter, as in summer, meticulous cleanliness and care of our clothing is the first essential to good health and good grooming.

Heavier fabrics, of course, present a more difficult problem than the easily-washed, light summer garments. The heavier fabrics also are likely to have more dust, grime and soot deposited on them during the winter months, which gives such clothing a dual disadvantage.

Dirt on clothes means dirt on the skin, so it is vitally important that some time be spent each day on the removal of surplus grime. That the clothes are dark and that dirt doesn't show up so readily, must be discounted.

—o-o—

EVEN BRUSHING, however, fails to dislodge the residue of dust which collects on the collar, along the under-arm and hem seams of garments. Here it is that our old pal, the vaccum cleaner, comes to the rescue. We are glad to note that business girls who do not keep house are going in for those small, light vaccum cleaners designed especially for clothing and such. A good going over with the vaccum now and again will thoroughly dislodge all deep-seated dirt. Such treatment not only will make for good health and good appearance, but it will add appreciably to the life of the garment.

When washing woolen underthings, a little ammonia should be added to the washing water to neutralize the acidity and remove the odor due to such a condition.

—o-o—

WHEN WASHING cardigans and woolen sweaters, first shake garments thoroughly. Then prepare a lukewarm lather with soap flakes in the proportion of three tablespoons to every gallon of water. A good notion is to add a teaspoon of glycerine to soften the water, preserve the fluffiness of the wool and to prevent it from shrinking.

Put the garments in the suds, using a separate lot for each color and gently squeeze out the dirt. Be careful not to rub or twist and never, never leave the articles soaking. Rinse in three lots of lukewarm water to which have been added a teaspoon of glycerine to prevent shrinking and a teaspoon of salt to preserve the colors.

Mahogany should be washed either with cold tea or vinegar and water.

Bronze Leather

● The vogue of copper in autumn fashions has prompted the designers of accessories and novelties to dip their merchandise into bronze dyes and give them a lustrous appearance. Bags and footwear of bronze leather are appearing as important accents to the costume. They are suggested for dressy daytime wear and for use with dinner frocks. Feathers which have bronzed edges likewise are noted as are belts, buckles and buttons with this same shiny surface.

Scarlet and Black for Fall

SCARLET and black will supply part of the glamor of autumn evenings. The vivid tone of red is used extensively by leading designers to brighten black frocks. It is especially stunning when combined with velvet.

Flowers of scarlet silk are so large they almost cover the front of the bodice of one low-cut velvet gown while equally large ones are attached to the back of the waistline of another. This latter trimming suggests a bustle.

Equally striking is the addition of scarlet velvet ribbon to black velvet frocks. It is twisted in a lattice-like arrangement around the square topped bodice and the shoulder straps of one striking gown, the back adding wide loops and streamer ends that almost reach the floor.

Corduroy Coats

A coat of corduroy or velveteen may be the exact type of wrap you need for the first cool autumn days. It is extremely chic this season, especially if the color happens to be one of those rich hues of green, brown or red.

Two different lengths are featured in these novelty cotton coats. One is hip length and may be worn with a swing straight from the shoulders or belted to give a flaring peplum line. The other is finger tip length and has a jaunty, swagger air. Both are lined to add warmth and both have a very tailored emphasis.

On Answering The Excuses Of Juveniles

"Everybody Else Does It. Why Can't I?" Is Familiar Plea.

By Angelo Patri

ONE of the most annoying, because it is one of the most difficult, replies to combat is, "Everybody else is doing it. Why can't I?" It is hard to answer because the child is expressing an error. He believes, or implies he believes, that any form of behavior must be right because someone else practices it, and in the language of the situation, "gets away with it." Perhaps the best reply is the old one, "And if he robbed a bank and was hung for it, you would think you ought to do the same."

But replies prove inadequate. One word leads to an avalanche of them and nothing is gained. What is one to do with the child who insists upon doing what is harmful because another does so? Tell him calmly, and with conviction, that he is not to do this because it is wrong. Say no more than that and let his words roll over you until they pass into silence.

—o-o—

"CIGARETTES are harmful for young people. You are not to smoke them. When you are full grown yon can do as you like, but until then, as long as you are the child you are, you don't smoke."

"Everybody else does. I'm to be the cow's tail as usual."

Don't answer.

When drinking intoxicating liquor is under discussion, speak with conviction against it. Hard drinks are not for growing boys and girls. Furthermore, no young person, boy or girl, who drives a car is to touch liquor. A car driver is carrying life and death in his hands, and his hands depend upon his brains. Brains clouded by liquor are likely to be the cause of accident. "No drinks for the driver." The fact that some other boy, some other girl, takes a cocktail or two before driving is no reason for another's being so foolish. To the contrary. The sober driver is doubly needed if there happens to be a muddled one on the road.

—o-o—

ASK THE NEXT protesting young persons who says, "Well, he does it," if he could find among his respected acquaintances one who did NOT do it. Get him to search his mind. He will not have to search long, and the fact that there is another example before him, one that shows him a better, more acceptable way, will weaken his already weak position.

When one looks for another erring human being in order to bolster up one's own error, the mistake is strengthened, not the right. And it is clear that the protesting one is looking for strength for his own desire.

Once in an older day this question was under discussion. The wise old leader said, "As for me and my house we serve the Lord." There is no other answer. Youth must choose between error and rightness some day or other, and it is our duty as elders to train him against the temptation of leaning against the brittle strength of error. What another does will not help him in the day of trial.

How Far Does A Housewife Walk in a Day?

One Person Says Seven Miles; Comfortable Shoes Are Necessary,

SOME industrious person who likes to find out things has discovered that the average housewife, trailing through her activities, travels seven miles a day. If you happen to be a housewife, you won't believe it; you know it is farther than that. Anyhow, seven miles are enough to make the feet kick up a protest. The average mother of small children sits down to eat and mend, and that's about all the sitting she gets. Her feet are so tired she wonders if she couldn't learn to walk on her hands and give her poor heels a rest.

For the sake of her nervous system, her temper and the preservation of the youthful figure, the woman who goes through the domestic treadmill each day should have her feet properly clad and shod. There is no economy in wearing shoes that have lost shape, fail to give support.

Cotton stockings give more comfort than silk. They are absorbent. Get them long in the foot. After putting on a stocking, pull it out at the toes. When washing them, rinse them well. Soap sediment irritates the skin.

—o-o—

FOR COMFORT, select an oxford. That is the best for housework. Find a broad toe. The heel should be about one and one-fourth inches high, broad enough to offer a firm foothold. Lace the shoe tightly. See that it comes up snugly at the arch. This last is important.

Cast no stones at the victims of footbinding in China. We haven't been very kind to ours in the past. Things are getting better now that women have awakened to the menace of spiked heels and shoes that are too full of feet.

If sensible shoes are worn during the day, in the home and on the street, one can indulge in the high-heeled affair for evening. Some day we shall consider them downright ugly. Continual devotion to spiked heels ruins posture, throws the shoulders forward, relaxes abdominal muscles, weakens the ankles and shortens the back muscles of the legs.

There's more even than that. They are responsible for grouches and frown lines. Many a human lemon presto-changes into a peach when she gives her feet a decent break, puts them in casing that are easy. And don't shy at the word "sensible." Sensible shoes are smare these days, beautifully decorative.

Pearls about your throat with a high necked black gown will continue to be the perfect choice to complete a costume. But gold beads for wear with browns, rusts, deep reds, raisin shades and other fall tones are quite the last word in fashion.

Grand Finales To Your Meals

TODAY we give some dessert recipes which are guaranteed to make a grand finale to any meal, or a nice companion with coffee or tea as a snack for guests.

For a scrumptious apple dessert, peel and grate three firm sweet apples, and set them to drain for three minutes in a sieve that has a piece of cheese cloth laid in it. Beat stiff the whites of five eggs, add four tablespoons sugar gradually, beating all the time; then add the apples, also gradually. Beat some more and put in glass bowl with about one-half a nutmeg grated on top. Have egg whites and apples very cold before starting to make the float, for this dish, although it must be eaten cold, should not be permitted to stand once it is made. Serve with rich cream.

For maple nut pudding, add two cups boiling water and one-third cup cornstarch diluted with one-quarter cup cold water to one and one-half cups brown sugar. Cook over flame until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Then cook in double boiler 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from stove, add three egg whites beaten until stiff, and one-half cup broken walnut meats. Add few grains salt. Mold and chill. Serve with a soft custard.

From Portugal comes a recipe that has delighted all who have tried it. Beat lightly the yolks of three eggs and whip into one cup whipping cream. Spread not more than one-half-inch thick in greased pan. Place over very low flame and cook slowly. Cool and cut into small pieces. Take up with spatula, brush lightly with beaten egg and fry in butter. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and cinnamon. Serve hot.

Two Famous London Homes Coming Down

Their Passing Causes Rattling of Ghosts of a Byegone Era.

By Bruno Lessing

LONDON, Sept. 12.

TWO old-fashioned houses—Nos. 8 and 9 Berkeley street ("Barkley" to you, madame)—are being torn down here. When an old London house is torn down, ghosts escape. I think they're going to erect an apartment house on this spot, but am not sure. I'm not sure of anything these days. It may be an office building or a movie theater that they have in mind; it's one of those warm, lanquid days when I'm too lazy to find out.

Anyway, you don't associate ghosts with apartment houses or cinemas. Ghosts stick to private habitations—castles, palaces, manor houses, etc. A ghost wouldn't fit into a building with an elevator ("lift" to you, madame), steam heat or modern plumbing. And there are many varieties of ghosts. Those who appear at midnight—white, shimmery things—and say, "Boo-o-oh!" And those that you don't see at all, but that are vivid in your mind.

In one of these houses more than 100 years ago, lived a Miss Howard. She was the daughter of a brewer and she was statuesque, beautiful and blond. She had rich gentlemen friends and she knew how to play the game. One of her admirers was Kinglake, a famous historian. But she met a charming young prince named Louis Napoleon and gave Kinglake the go-by.

The dear girl must have had wonderful judgment. She stuck to her prince through thick and thin —he was in jail for nearly seven years—financed him and finally saw the day when he became Emperor of France. It cost her over $200,000—the prince was broke most of the time. But when he won out he took her with him to France, gave her millions and made her Countess de Beauregard with a beautiful estate. The affair with Miss Howard ended when the Emperor married. But no one ever referred to her as Countess. She was always Miss Howard.

—o-o—

IN the house next door—but centuries before—lived Harriette Wilson. She was one of 15 children of a stockingmender. She lived to write memoirs. Her autobiography begins: "I shall not say why and how I became, at the age of 15, the mistress of the Earl of Craven."

She might just as well have ended there because that sentence tells the whole story of her life. With such an introduction to her experience, it was inevitable that she should become the mistress of many men. Among her paramours were dukes and barons and other sprigs of nobility. She was even chummy with the great Duke of Wellington. When she decided to write her memoirs, she notified all her boy friends and said that, for $500, she would leave their names out.

There's really nothing new under the sun. Many of them paid. Only I have great admiration for the Duke of Wellington, who told her, "Publish and be damned."

As the hammers of workmen demolish these buildings, what happens to the ghosts of these two "ladies" of the past? Will they haunt the new, up-to-date buildings that will occupy the spot of their amours? Oh will they pass out into the ether and mingle with the ghosts of the loose women of all times?

And there were other houses in London that have been torn down which also must have contained ghosts. The sweethearts of kings, poets, general, admirals—even of protectors. The way of all flesh. Is there not always some spirit that clings to rooms and walls before they are demolished? What happens to those spirits—or ghosts — when the scene of their joys and passions vanishes into the open air?

There was once a palace in which Cleopatra lived. It has vanished But where is Cleopatra's ghost?

—o-o—

ROSSETTI'S translation of Francois Villion:

"Where Hipparchia, and Where is Thais?
Where's Heloise, the learned nun ?
Mother of God, where are they then?
But where are the snows of yester-year?"

It is in an old, old city like London that such thoughts come to you. From time to time houses must be demolished to make way for the march of progress. And so many of these houses were the scene of ancient revelry—perhaps, even, of tender love—in which men took part whose names are famous in the world's history. Many a wild party.

"Hans Breitman gife a barty—
Where ish dot barty now?"

Where are the ghosts of those beautiful, charming, delightful, attractive, ambitious, naughty women now?

Tweed Frock

Among the interesting costume suits which combine fur with fabric is a dull green tweed frock ensembled with a brown lapin jacket. The dress is of the shirtwaist type and quite unadorned except for the large brown fur buttons which dot the center front. The hip-length jacket wears the green fabric belt clasped tightly at the waistline so that the hemline flares into a youthful peplum.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

NOTHING makes us feel quite so silly as having our hand kissed by a foreigner, even if it is in good faith. And when it happened in the middle of a downtown business office, where the eyes of clerks and stenographers were on the continental stranger anyway, we wanted to do a disappearing act. But it was worth the blushes, we thought, when he heard the story, told by George Ignace Dormont, a St. Louis visitor from Warsaw, Poland.

Of the five languages he speaks, his English is the least fluent, so our conversation lapsed now and then into French and at frequent intervals had to be interpreted in German through Dormont's host in St. Louis, Fred A. Newberger.

Dormont, son of a former surgeon-general in the Russian army, was attending law school in Moscow, when, in 1916, at the approach of the German army, the family was obliged to flee to what was then Petrograd. Dormont was then barely 17 but he took upon himself the responsibility of reaching his sister in Baku, where the elder Dormont had oil holdings, later confiscated by the Bolsheviks.

Accompanied by Skobelew, Minister of Labor in the Kerensky regime, he set out on the trip. Three weeks of traveling found them in the North Caucasus, still some distance from Baku, but near the summer villa of Skobelew. And there they were virtually marooned by a civil revolt.

Skobelew preferred the comparative safety of his villa and would go no farther. Dormont, however, was determined to get back to Moscow, and calculated by maps that his only way of escape was across the arm of the Caspian Sea and up the Volga. But Skobelew's estate was about 150 miles from the seashore. Buying horses where he could, for there was none to hire, and traveling the rest of the distance on foot he finally reached a small fishing village on the sea.

—o-o—

HERE AGAIN he had to buy the means of transportation, a small craft, with a ragged sail, for which he gave a fisherman 300 rubles. At dawn of the following day, he put out to sea with only a sack of potatoes for provision, and a pocket compass to guide him.

For five days the solitary youngster tossed in the little boat, beset by frequent storms, and on the morning of the sixth day, as he approached the delta of the Volga, sighted the smoke of a steamer. Using his coat as a signal, he attracted attention and the ship put out a small launch to take him aboard. Weak from exposure and his meager diet, Dormont asked immediately for bread, but because it was more plentiful in that part of the world, and more nourishing, they gave him only fresh caviar, great bowls of it. Small wonder that today he cannot bear the sight or smell, much less the taste, of that delicacy!

By the time the boat docked at Astrakhan, the youngster's strength had returned and with it sufficient pluck to attempt the trip to Baku again. This time, traveling by boat, he succeeded in reaching his sister, but did not have long to persuade her to return with him to Petrograd, for the day after his arrival, the Bolsheviks ordered immediate mobilization.

Dormont saw that if he was to get back to his family at all, it would have to be quickly and without accomplishing his purpose. Passports were not easy to get, however. Misrepresenting his nationality and business, he obtained a permit which entitled him to enter Moscow. It said nothing about leaving Baku.

The omission escaped the notice of harbor officials and Dormont was just congratulating himself after safely boarding the ship, when, a half hour before sailing, a band of Bolshevik sailors came on deck to order all men ashore.

Under protest, Dormont complied, but, flourishing his papers before the chief officer ashore, he finally gained full passport, just as the boat whistled for the third time. Its gangplanks were being withdrawn as he raced down the pier and leaped aboard.

And so safe to Astrakhan again, and eventually to Moscow and Petrograd.

And what is he doing here? He is on his way to Hollywood, where he intends to set to work as a sound engineer. After the war, on his return to Poland, he became interested in radio engineering and obtained the Government concession for the installation of individual radio dials and headphones for passengers aboard the railway carriages in Poland. But politics interfered and the grant was recalled, and Dormont has come to this country to seek his fortune.

He has left behind a sweetheart whose parents have agreed to send her to this country within a year—if he finds the pot of gold.

And there, gentle readers, is the story of the dark-haired, dark-eyed gentleman, who came from New York by bus, because he wanted to see the country, but who can bestow a compliment with a kiss as prettily as a Polish Prince.

An ordinary 12-inch ruler, stuck vertically into a lump of plasticine, is invaluable when turning up the hem of a frock. Put on the dress and get a friend to mark at regular intervals, with chalk or pins, the desired height of the hem from the ground. If this ruler is used, there will be no fear or uneven hems.

Recipes for Sweet Desserts

IT has been our experience that desserts, sweets and drinks perfected by clever cooks during warm weather often remain family favorites right through the autumn and often through the year.

A reader has sent some very interesting recipes, all utilizing candy, and all created during the summer. So here they are and we hope that you'll use 'em and like 'em.

For a novel way of serving cantaloupes, fill the center of a half cut of the melon with lemon ice and sprinkle the top with crushed peppermint candy.

Peppermint is used, too, to give a new flavor to malted milk. Mix 10 ounces of sweet milk, one dab of vanilla ice cream, one tablespoon ground peppermint candy and two heaping tablespoons malted milk. Mix thoroughly.

Believe it or not, but marshmallows now go into soup. When serving cream of tomato or cream of mushroom soup, pour over one lone marshmallow doing sentinel duty as a garnish.

Lemonade should be a household drink the year around, especially where there are youngsters. For a different flavor, try a cinnamon candy lemonade made by allowing one tablespoon of red cinnamon candies for each glass of lemonade. Dissolve candies in several tablespoons of water, then combine the red solution with the very cold lemonade. If the drink is for a "sweet tooth," add a very small bit of sugar.

—o-o—

WHEN SERVING grapefruit, dress it up with pieces of lime candy placed at intervals on top of the halved fruit. A caramel candy sauce is nice on hot boiled rice, custard or ice cream. Melt half pound of vanilla caramels in a double boiler and add one-half cup of cream, mixing well.

The desire for a really sweet dessert overcomes most of us at some time or another. Then we will be grateful for a dessert made by breaking pralines into small pieces and adding these to vanilla ice cream. Then melt chocolate candy bars in a double boiler and pour over top of the ice cream. It's rich, but good!

For a peachy frozen dessert, you will need half a pound of marshmallows, three cups crushed peaches (fresh or canned), half pint whipping cream and two tablespoons milk. Place marshmallows and milk in saucepan and heat over until marshmallows are smooth and fluffy. Cool. Gradually add the crushed peaches and blend well into mixture. Add the whipped cream and blend. Pour into freezing tray of refrigerator and freeze at coldest degree possible. Stir once during freezing period.

Try this method of fastening children's frocks that are constantly in the wash tub. Make a row of buttonholes down either side of the opening of the frock. Then make a pair of button links for each pair of buttonholes. The button links can then be easily removed for washing and the frock can go safely through the wringer.

Directoire Vogue

The directoire vogue has brought coat tails into the fashion limelight. Various interpretations of the mode are appearing in the collections of suits and coats on display in the St. Louis shops. A typical suit of a dark green nubby woolen has a jacket with a fitted waistline and a gored back. The side panels extend over the waistline at the back where they are held with large covered buttons. Slashes at the seams give the coat-tail effect. Many coats that resemble regulation coachmen's garments are similarly styled and are increasing in style interest.

Nice for supper are pancakes rolled around creamed chicken and covered with melted cheese sauce. Then for luncheon or supper there are fried rice patties with mushroom sauce and grilled cheese squares.

Novelty Belts

Anyone who is looking for a novel decoration to dress up a simple frock should take a look at the array of distinctive belts on display in the shops. Many of them are quite ornate with metal beaded sections or bright enamel buckles. The leather belts appear in bright colors as well as dark ones and have scalloped edges, stitched sections and odd shapes. One belt which is quite wide at the front is cut down to narrow width at the back while another is wide at the back and very narrow at the front. Copper and gold links or metal mesh sections are the striking features of other belts.

The choice of your first fall frock in one of the new soft, sheer woolens will prove your fashion acumen. Paris is using woolens even in formal evening cloths. For afternoon, a cloth into which gold or silver threads are woven is good.

The 'CROWN of the ANDES' FINALLY COMES NORTH

Created in Colombia in the Sixteenth Century, Now Worth Some $4,000,000, It Soon Will End Its Almost Fabulous History by Being 'Broken Up' for the Commercial Trade.

CHICAGO.

WHEN Pizarro conquered Peru and overthrew the Inca civilization in 1532 he won spoils of fabulous proportions — a trove of gold and jewels so great that his men did not move it all away. It was from part of this loot that the magnificent example of goldsmiths' and lapidaries' skill known as the Crown of the Andes was made. For more than three centuries, the crown was an object of veneration in the Cathedral at Popayan, a small city high in the Colombian Andes. Now, by special permission of the Pope, it has been sold to a syndicate of Chicagoans. Its first public exhibition in North America was recently opened here.

It was to repay a debt of gratitude to the Virgin Mary for deliverance from a plague that ravaged the surrounding region that the people of Popayan created this rare and costly piece of ecclesiastical art. The city was founded four years after the conquest by Sebastian de Benalcazar, one of Pizarro's lieutenants. Most of the colonists were Andalusian aristocrats—nobles, men of learning, soldier adventurers. In 1590, when they had succeeded in building in New Spain a city exactly like those of Old Spain, came news of the plague.

In the jungles and lowlands about the city, in nearby settlements, Indians and Spaniards alike were dying by hundreds of the disease, it was reported. The people of Popayan were panic-stricken. Desperate, they asked the venerable Bishop for guidance. Should they flee in hope of saving their lives? He counseled them to remain. Then he began a novena, a series of prayers, to the Blessed Mother of the Savior, beseeching divine protection for his people.

More than a year went by, and no plague came to Popayan. Their prayers had been answered, the citizens felt, and an exceptional tribute to the Virgin therefore was in order. After much discussion, it was decided to create an elaborate diadem for her statue in the Cathedral.

TREASURE chests were opened and the wealth of gold and emeralds taken in the conquest poured forth. A committee of noblemen directed the work, brought skilled artificers from Spain, employed the most expert in Spanish America. These men had complete freedom as to the cost and the time required. They were guided by only one instruction: "The crown must exceed in beauty, in grandeur and in value the crown of any reigning monarch on earth, else it would not be a becoming gift to the Queen of Heaven."

Six years, it is said, from 1593 to 1599, were needed to complete the task. Working patiently, inspired both by craftsmen's pride and religious zeal, the goldsmiths wrought an intricate and delicate design of abstract floral pattern, showing an undoubted Moorish influence, that is the delight of workers in precious metals today. They began with 100 pounds of gold, of which only 10 pounds remained in the crown when its lace-like pattern had been completed.

At the same time, the lapidaries were studiously grinding and polishing the emeralds that give uniqueness to the masterpiece. They encrust its surface, dangle from its interior, circle its base and surmount it in a gem-studded cross. In all, 453 emeralds, with a total weight of 1523 carats, went to make up the crown, forming what is considered the world's largest and oldest collection of these precious gems. The market value of the piece has recently been estimated by expert appraisers at figures ranging from $3,000,000 to $6,000,000, its very uniqueness making it virtually impossible to fix a definite amount. Its present owners make a compromise and accept the midway figure of $4,500,000.

The result of the ancient craftsmen's labors, as viewed today, is dazzling and well-nigh incredible. Seen here in Chicago, on its revolving platform against a background of rich red velvet, flanked by burning tapers, the crown is too dazzling for adequate comprehension. The average beholder, unaccustomed to gold and gems in such overpowering quantities, feels at first that this cannot be a precious and historic relic, that it must be a lavish modern ornament of machine-made brass and glass. Because its materials are imperishable, because it is brightly burnished and polished, the crown bears at first the appearance of having been made yesterday, rather than 337 years ago.

On closer view, however, the momentary illusion is dispelled. The golden blaze of the metal and the deep green luster of the jewels are too impressive to be synthetic. The seamed and cloudy interiors which attest the genuine emerald become visible—for no emerald is "flawless" as diamonds are flawless. The eye at last can appreciate the rich green beauty of the crown's central stone, a 45-carat emerald, said to have been worn by Atahualpa, last Emperor of the Incas, when he was captured by the Spaniards at the Battle of Caxamalca in 1532. Next in order of magnificence are the 17 massive pear-shaped emeralds which hang as pendants from the top of the crown.

The exquisite character of the metal work, too, becomes apparent on closer scrutiny. On the inside of the crown's lower surface, the close observer sees the places where it has been repaired after some of the vicissitudes of its long history, and the patches are far from the flawless nature of the original creation.

The Crown of Our Lady of the Andes was first placed on the statue's brow on December 8, 1599, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. As recorded by church historians, it was a memorable occasion. The newly completed crown was attached to a cushion and borne by a white horse, attended by a military guard of honor, to the palace of the Archbishop. There it was inspected by the families whose gifts had made it possible, and their friends from other cities. That night, the entire population of Popayan, each person holding a lighted candle, lined the street leading to the Cathedral. The crown was carried along the route, and amid tolling bells, solemn chants and clouds of incense, was placed on the statue. Each year thereafter, unless untoward events intervened, the coronation ceremony took place on the feast day.

UNTOWARD events were many. The pirates who roved the Spanish Main were attracted by the Spanish treasure, just as the Spaniards had been lured by the Inca treasure. At Popayan was a rich trophy, insignificant in bulk but worth an Emperor's ransom. (Actually, the crown measures 15 inches in height and 12 inches in diameter.) Popayan, though situated inland and at an altitude of 6000 feet, is within sight of the ocean, and constant vigilance was required to guard against the raids of the buccaneers who preyed upon cities as well as shipping.

To protect the crown and other treasures of the Cathedral, a group of nobles organized themselves into the Confraternity of the Immaculate Conception, and pledged their lives to save the church from despoliation. The organization is still in existence. On numerous occasions, it is recorded, the streets of Popayan saw blood when pirate forays were beaten off. To guard against just such dangers, the crown had been made in sections, fastened together with bolts of gold. In time of peril, it was taken to pieces and each part was buried by one of its sworn guardians. Later, when the danger was over, the parts were produced from their hiding places and the crown reassembled. It was in some of these hasty concealments that the crown was damaged, necessitating the crude repairs.

After piracy had died out, there came a new danger—the looting armies of revolutionaries and bandits. The members of the Confraternity rallied to the crown's defense in such emergencies as well.

To gangsters and jewel thieves of the twentieth century, the small bulk and high value of the crown are as great a lure as they were to the pirates of the seventeenth century. Rigid precautions are still necessary. Several squads of police, equipped with machine guns, guarded the crown's recent journey in an armored truck through Chicago streets to the Fair department store, where it is on display. Armed guards are in constant attendance. In addition, superhuman vigilance in the form of an "electric eye" guards the glass case which contains the treasure. At night, it is locked in a specially wired and guarded vault.

Popayan in its later years became a languid city, proud of its Old World atmosphere and traditions, its art treasures and classic architecture. It stood aloof from commerce, and became primarily a center of art, religion and culture, assuming a role akin to that of Florence in Italy, save that it was off the path of tourist travel. The rivalry of bustling seaport cities reduced its population to 20,000, and the once wealthy community became impoverished. To meet the problem of greater need and dwindling revenues, the church authorities decided in 1910, despite widespread public protests, to offer the crown for sale, to obtain funds for hospitals, orphanages and homes for the aged.

THE first prospective buyer was the Czar of Russia. An ardent collector of jewels, of all varieties save the ruby, which he viewed with superstitious fear, his special delight was the emerald. When he learned that the world's only collection of emeralds that surpassed his own was for sale, he eagerly ordered arrangements made for its acquisition. Negotiations quickly proceeded to the point that the consent of Pope Pius X for the sale of this church property was sought and obtained. This extraordinary papal document is as follows when translated:

"The Vatican, June 17th, 1914.

"The Holy Father, Pius X, having taken cognizance of the petition presented by Senor Thomas Olano y H. of Popayan, Patron and Syndic of the local Confraternity of the Immaculate Conception, and of the accompanying recommendation of the Ordinary, Archbishop Arboleda, for the reasons indicated has benignly deigned to authorize the above mentioned petitioner to alienate the precious crown of the Immaculate Virgin, providing he leaves the manner and conditions, both of the alienation and of the new institutions, to the prudent judgment of the aforementioned Archbishop.

"The Cardinal-Secretary of State of His Holiness, R. Card. Merry del Val."

Six weeks after this document was signed, the World War began. Among the many hopes extinguished by the war was that of the Czar to possess the fabulous jeweled crown, and when peace came, Nicholas and the Romanoff dynasty were no more.

It was by a chance remark that Warren Piper, the Chicago and New York jeweler who ultimately negotiated the purchase, learned of the crown's existence. Piper had left Northwestern University in 1910 to enter the jewelry business. Attracted at first by the diamond, he soon developed a preference for the emerald, and became recognized as a specialist in that gem. At the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915, he was in charge of a display of jewels. There he met a wealthy South American who wished to buy some emeralds as a gift for a North American friend. Piper prepared a selection of specimens for his customer's choice, only to be met by polite disapproval.

"These may be considered fine emeralds in North America," the Latin visitor said, "but the best of them is inferior to the poorest stone in the Crown of the Andes at Popayan."

TIDINGS of such an extraordinary collection of his favorite gem, of which he had theretofore never heard, whetted Piper's interest, but he found no jeweler in this country who could satisfy it with information. Later, he found one or two dealers in London and Paris who knew of the crown's existence.

The scanty information he received inspired in the Chicago jeweler an ambition to acquire the crown. He speaks now with quiet enthusiasm of his long quest, covering 21 years, from 1915 to 1936. The negotiations were long-drawn and laborious. For a time, he "practically commuted" from Popayan to New York, Piper says. It was necessary to obtain a certification of the papal authorization of the sale issued at the time of the Czar's overtures, and several trips to Rome were required to arrange for this.

In 1925, a rival for possession of the crown entered the field, when a group of European jewelers formed a syndicate for its purchase. When they failed to raise the huge sum necessary, these bidders withdrew. Piper was unable to handle the transaction alone, and in 1928 organized a group of friends to help finance it. The 1929 crash impaired the means of his backers, and the deal was perforce postponed. It was not until this year that another syndicate could be formed. On February 6, the final certification from the Vatican was obtained. This instrument reads as follows:

"This certifies that the present document is comformable to the original copy which is conserved in the archives of the Secretary of State (Section 2A) as No. 71,863 of the protocol.

"From the Vatican, the 6th of February, 1936.

"Dr. P. Pagliucci, Archivist."

So on June 6, this year, Piper attained his goal, when he presented a draft in seven figures (Piper will not tell the exact amount) and took title to the world's most valuable crown save that of the ex-Czar.

It is not surprising that this magnificent collection of emeralds should come from Colombia, for that country has been the source of the finest specimens of this stone as far back as the white man's history and the Indian's tradition run. Emeralds, in fact, played a large part in attracting the

The World's Most Historic Waterway GETS BACK Its GUNS

ISTANBUL, Turkey.

SUBMERGED torpedo stations, concealed mine fields, powerful disappearing 16-inch guns backed up by machine guns, anti-aircraft and light artillery, air bases, barracks for battalion after battalion, and concrete military highways are once more being dotted about the Straits, the world's most historic waterway. It consists of the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus, all famous in mythology, poetry, history and romance. It is the waterway that Xerxes had lashed with whips when its waves broke his bridge of boats, that Xenophon's immortal Ten Thousand crossed, that the Crusaders spanned, that Leander swam to see his Hero until their tragic death, that Jason and his Argonauts are said to have negotiated in the quest of the Golden Fleece, that bore the ships of the Achaeans to the siege of Troy and that the Allies failed to win in 1915 after the loss of 200,000 men and several battleships.

Nations have fought and negotiated over this vital waterway dividing Europe and Asia for 25 centuries and now a new chapter full of momentous possibilities has been opened with the signing of the Treaty of Montreux last July. For the first time since the Lausanne Convention in 1923 Turkey commands the Straits, superseding the international commission responsible to the League of Nations. Refortification is permitted. Foreign airplanes, formerly unrestricted, must keep to certain narrow lanes.

The Dardanelles fortifications kept the French and British warships from forcing the Straits in 1915 and liberating Russia from the Turkish blockade. Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, contended after the war that if the fleets had pushed on, regardless of the losses that had caused Admiral Sir John de Robeck to abandon his bombardment, Constantinople (now Instanbul) would have fallen. With the vast improvements that have been made since then in shore defense, it is certain that any other fleet that tackles the waterway, when its new defenses are prepared, is going to have a much tougher proposition to handle than De Robeck had. The airplane, of course, is the undetermined factor both in offense and defense.

In addition to the natural elements of defense, the Dardanelles depended in 1915 on three factors that were invincible as long as they were united. There were lines of mines, fairly accurately known to the Allies, that obstructed the waterway from the Narrows to the Marmora. They were under protection of the fire of the forts. Mobile armament made up of howitzers and field guns concealed in bushes and behind hummocks could fire on the mine sweepers.

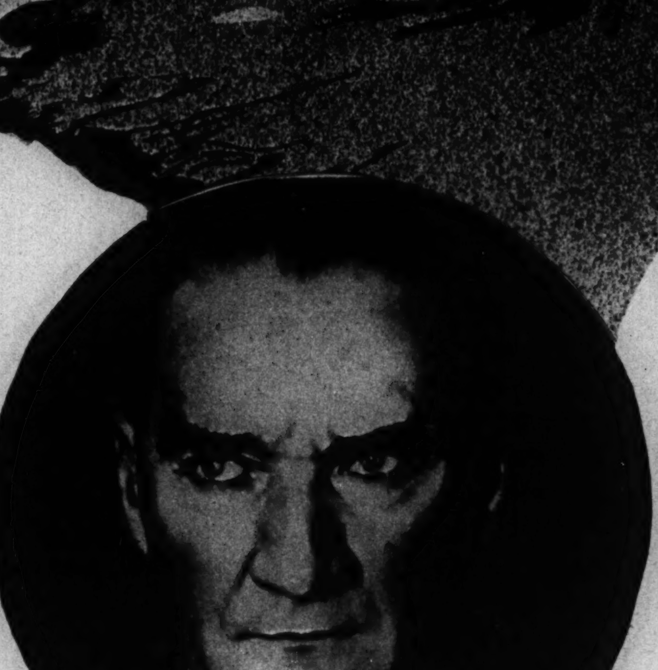
The mines had to be swept up for the warships to pass the Straits, the mobile armament had to be partially reduced for the sweepers to function, and the forts had to be silenced for the warships to remain in position to crush the mobile batteries.

After the fleet reduced the outer defenses and entered Eren Keui Bay where fire could be laid on the forts at the Narrows, the German staff, which directed the operations against the British and French, decided its best plan would be to try to lay a row of mines that would trap the warships. Every night a British flotilla of sweepers swept the waters ahead of the big ships and guarded against the laying or floating down of mines. But one stormy morning, just as the night flotilla was withdrawing and the larger vessels were taking up the watch, a small Turkish ship crept out and laid a string of 20 mines ahead of the regular mine field.

Ten days later, on March 18, the fleet began its main attack on the forts at the Narrows. Picket boats watched for floating mines. The forts hurled their shells, sending great geysers of water up and occasionally registering a hit on some ship. Ashore, columns of earth and concrete sprayed from the forts. There were tremendous explosions in some of the forts. Most of the gunners were forced to retire to bombproofs and await a lull in the action. The sweepers took advantage of the opportunity and ripped up mine after mine from its moorings.

THE big ships were supposed to be in water clear of mines, but suddenly the French ship Bouvet went up in a cloud of smoke and steam, only 60 of her 700 men being saved. The defenders of the forts were beginning to fire on the mine sweepers. Then the British battle cruiser Inflexible, behind the advance line of battleships, listed and heeled over. Three minutes later and the Irresistible, another British ship, went down. A half hour later and the Ocean, going to aid the Irresistible, hit a mine and sank.

Admiral De Robeck, mystified by the appearance of the mines and shocked at the loss of his ships, called the action off at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Never again did he send a ship into the Straits. He stayed on guard and the army carried on several months until 200,000 men were lost and the whole Gallipoli campaign ended in total failure. German and Turiksh officers admitted after the war that their ammunition was nearly exhausted and that had De Robeck continued his attack the Straits probably would have been forced and Constantinople would have fallen.



Kemal Ataturk.

The history and fate of the waterway have been linked with that of Istanbul, formerly known as Constantinople and Byzantium, which is on the eastern end of a promontory at the southern extremity of the Bosphorus. The city is bounded on the north by the inlet of the Golden Horn, on the east by the Bosphorus, on the south by the Sea of Marmora, and on the west by the mainland.

In 667 B. C., Byzas, King of Megaris, led his countrymen to the shores of the Bosphorus and there built Byzantium.

A city of natural beauty, easy of defense against the neighboring barbarians and commanding the only water route between the Black and Mediterranean Seas, it grew rapidly. When Darius Hystaspes crossed the Bosphorus against the Scythians, and the long struggle between Persian and Greek began, Byzantium was the first European city to be taken by the Persians. During the next eight centuries it went through all the vicissitudes of the kindred Greek cities.

Byzantium joined in the Ionian revolt and was burned to the ground when the Persians won. When the conquerors were driven out, Pausanias, Spartan regent and general of the fifth century before Christ, rebuilt the city and became known as its second founder. When Athens and Sparta were at each other's throats, Byzantium oscillated from side to side according to which was in the ascendancy or according to the autocratic or democratic spirit of the Byzantium citizens. The city was saved from destruction on the return of Xenophon's Ten Thousand from Persia only after Xenophon made an eloquent oration to his troops. Aided by King Mausolus, Byzantium headed a coalition of island states and threw off the yoke of Athens, taking that city's place as the foremost Greek harbor city. Warring Gauls and Thracians made life miserable for Byzantines during the third century before Christ. After being subjugated by Rome and wiped out by Septimus Severus in 194 A. D., Byzantium was taken by Constantine and in 330 made the capital of the Roman empire.

The eight crusades between 1096 and 1270 saw the Bosphorus used for easy passage from Europe to Asia. The fourth crusade, 1201-04, was diverted by the Doge of Venice to Constantinople under pretense of restoring the rightful emperor to Byzantium. A huge chain, stretched across the harbor, was cut by the Crusaders with an enormous pair of shears mounted on a boat and opened and shut by machinery. This enabled them to take and sack the city.

A century later, the Grand Company of Catalans, a powerful body of 6000 mercenaries from Aragon and Catalonia, entered the service of Andronicus II, Emperor of Constantinople. He sent them against the Turkish armies that were roving along the waterway. After defeating them decisively, the Catalans started on a career of pillage. Their leader was assassinated and their number dwindled to 1500. The band still was strong enough to defeat 43,000 Greeks, seize the fortress of Gallipoli on the northeastern tip of the Dardanelles, stand a few sieges, rout all armies sent against them, ravage the countryside for four years, collect tribute from ships using the Straits and then leave to enter the service of the Duke of Athens.

They were followed by the Turks who already held most of Asia Minor. Suleiman Pasha, in 1356, crossed the Straits with a few hundred picked soldiers on rafts and surprised and captured Justinian's supposedly impregnable castle of Chioridokastron. Using this as a base, they took Gallipoli and Adrianople. The fall of Constantinople was delayed nearly 100 years by an attack of Timur and his Mongols on the Turkish rear.

Mohammed II began the siege of Constantinople in 1453 by attempting unsuccessfully to break the chain that had failed to keep the Crusaders out of Constantinople in 1204. He had no more than given up his efforts along that line than five Greek ships with reinforcements from Chios hove into sight. The Sultan promptly ordered 150 galleys to intercept the bigger vessels.

GREEKS thronged the walls and the Sultan rode to the water's edge to see the encounter. The superior height of the Greek ships made it impossible for the Turks to grapple and easy for huge stones and Greek fire to be rained down on the Turks. They smashed their way through, the chain was lowered and the ships and their reinforcements were safe. Mohammed had his defeated admiral stretched flat on the ground and then personally dealt him 100 blows with a mace.

This reverse of the first Turkish admiral is said to have given rise to the Turks' saying that God gave the earth to the Turk, but the sea to the unbeliever.

Mohammed then had a plank road laid over the five miles between the Bosphorus and the Golden Horn, resorting to this ingenious but ignominious expedient to transport a division of his galleys past the chain. This enabled him to fire on the harbor side of the city, weakening its defense considerably.

On May 29, the city having been besieged by the Sultan's 300,000 followers since April 6, the final assault was made. Constantine XI, last of the Caesars, fought in a breach of the walls until he was cut down by Janissaries.

Mohammed had no more than won his victory than he set about securing the Straits, unlike his predecessors. He realized that the power of heavy artillery was established so he saw no need of wasting a fleet to do what a few guns could do. Four miles below the Narrows he placed his two forts, Chanak and Kilikul-bahr. Both had great guns throwing stone shot weighing up to 1000 pounds. Incapable of being trained, they were fired when a ship came in line.

The two forts stopped the passage, but Venetian fleets more than once sailed up to and threatened the Narrows. In the seventeenth century the improved range of guns made it worth while to defend the outer entrance.

KUM KALE and Sedd-ul-bahr forts were built by the vizier Koprulu about 1750. They were strengthened by Baron de Tott, who also added a battery at the eastern end of Morto Bay. Since then the Straits have only once been forced—by Sir John Duckworth in 1807. The Turkish Government had almost relapsed into the carelessness of Byzantine predecessors and offered little resistance when the British started up. While Sir John was kept in play by the diplomats at Constantinople, the forts in his rear were hastily strengthened by French engineers. The admiral had to retreat lest he be cut off, and in descending the channel he suffered heavy loss from the huge stone cannon-balls of the guns.

Now, since the July agreement, complete freedom for all mercantile marines is continued with the provision that should Turkey be at war no ships using the Straits shall assist the enemy.

Russia, kept out of the Straits for almost a century, may send as many warships as she pleases from the Black Sea into the Mediterranean, permitting her to challenge the ambitions of Italy and Britain in the Levant and to strengthen her position in the Baltic. All the Black Sea Powers—Russia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Rumania—may use the Straits with entire freedom in time of peace or war.

Other nations are limited to a total of 30,000 tons of warships in the Black Sea. In time of war, their ships may enter only if they are acting for the League or under a regional pact including Turkey and approved by the League.

The fact that Turkey is once more allowed to dominate the portals of Eastern Europe is attributed largely to the strict diplomatic etiquette with which Kemal Ataturk, dictator of Turkey, made his request for a hearing instead of emulating Hitler in his remilitarization of the Rhineland.

The refortification of the Straits is being carried on principally at the Dardanelles, or western end of the waterway. About 40 miles long, it varies from one to four miles in width, connecting the Sea of Marmora with the Aegean Sea. The Marmora, about 100 miles long and 40 wide at its broadest, is connected with the Black Sea by the Bosphorus, 17 miles long and from 550 yards to a mile in width.

An ARCHITECT Tries for INFORMALITY in the SCHOOLROOM

Simplified Design, Plenty of Light and Air, Movable Desks and Chairs Are Part of the Scheme in Los Angeles' 'Test Tube School.'

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LOS ANGELES, California.

THIS autumn is the first anniversary of Los Angeles' "test-tube school." Located in Bell, one of the outlying sections, the Corona Avenue School has been designated as the first streamlined school in the United States. Based on ideas as old as nature and as new as the streamlined train, Corona school offers an opportunity of freedom to the child hardly possible under the old schemes of architecture. Each classroom has one wall of ceiling-height windows of plate glass, and at the turn of a handle the walls can be rolled back to change "indoors into outdoors." Every classroom has its individual patio, separated by hedges from those of adjoining classrooms. Lightweight desks and chairs are movable and a mulitude of group arrangements is possible. No longer does the teacher face a group of passive, but attentive-by-necessity youngsters. All share together in work and play projects and the teacher is just one of the group.

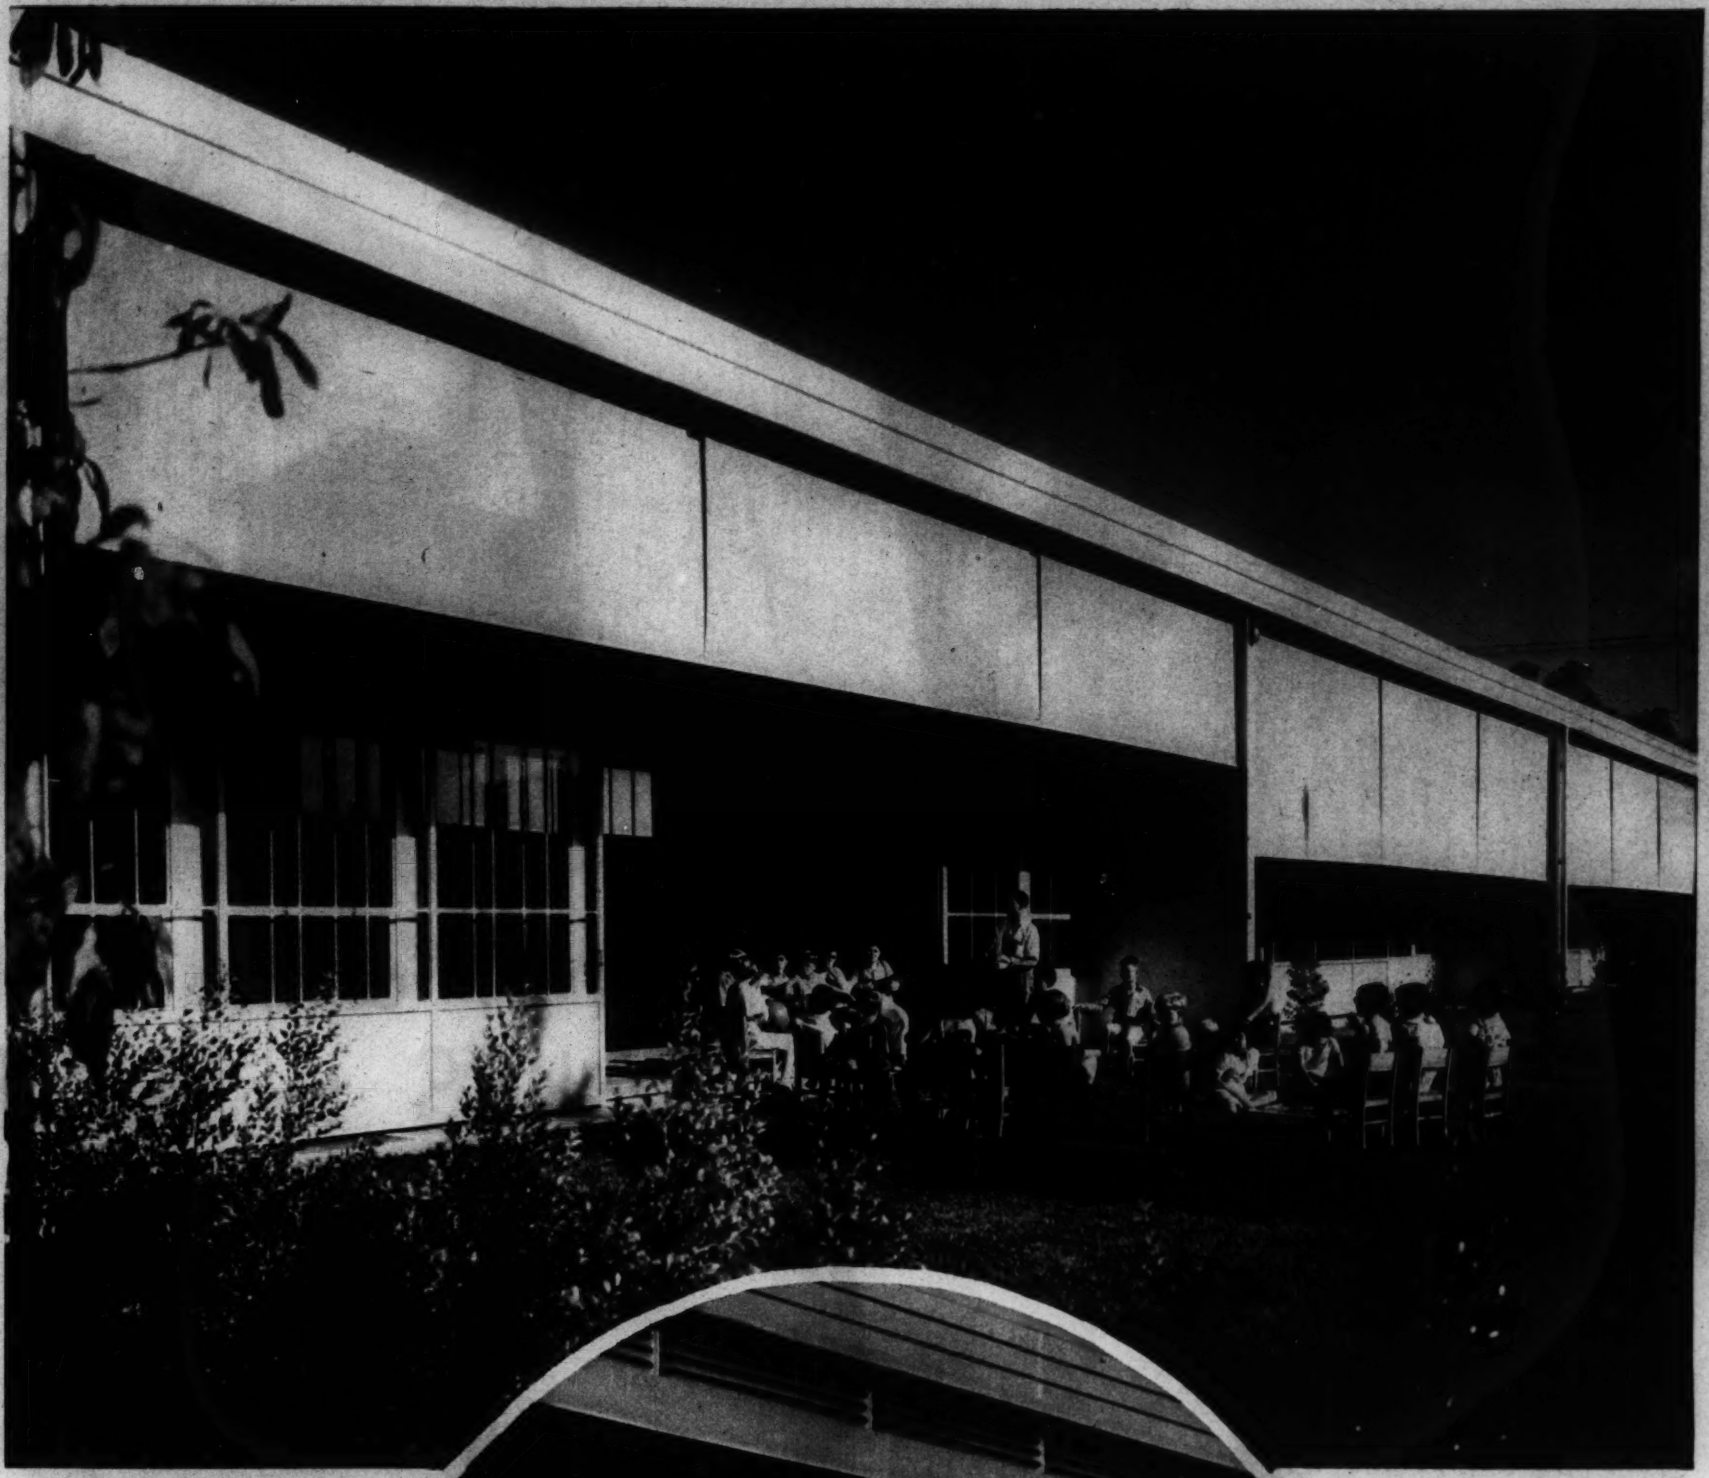
Educators long have held the belief that this sort of thing is highly desirable—that a child will learn twice as fast if he thinks he is playing. Therefore when the California school planning division in Sacramento heard about a "ring plan" school, designed by Architect Richard J. Neutra, the school planners became interested. The Los Angeles Board of Education commissioned Neutra to do further research and Corona school was the result.

Many problems of modern education are solved in Neutra's design. A connective system of classrooms abolishes all corridors and the one-story structure does away with stairways and their costly fireproofing. Fire risk for the children is practically removed because of free exits to the outside grounds. Earthquake risks and dangers from violent air motion are minimized by the one-story character of the classroom wings, which have no heavy superstructure, bulky roof, or attached dead loads. Above all, greater health for the child is promoted through the open-air features of the building.

UTMOST simplicity is followed in the external appearance. "Schools are not monuments, but working plants of education," says Architect Neutra, and Corona school provides its own external beauty through the simplicity of its design where essential overhangs and structural details, harmoniously enriched by landscaping, provide shadow effects similar to the shadings of an artist.

"Very well for kindergarten or elementary school pupils, but how about buildings for older students?" has been the next thought of educators who have watched eagerly for the effect of the Bell school in the present $22,500,000 school building program now under way in Los Angeles.

The Ralph Waldo Emerson Junior High School, also designed by Neutra, and upon which work has just started in Westwood Hills, is the board of education's answer to this question. The first two units of this school, where 800 students are enrolled, will be ready for use in eight months. Unlike the Bell school, Neutra's design for buildings to house the older students calls for two-story structures. While on the whole more rigid room arrangement is seen in the junior high school building, the patio plan is carried out in all social sciences, activity and art classrooms for the older students. Classrooms for mathematics and other related subjects are supplemented by adjoining workrooms to prepare demonstrations. To exercise English as a living language, a wide recital room with a stage in one corner and diagonally arranged seating was provided.



A class at Corona School that has moved outdoors.

What is back of this new architecture, which educators think is the start of a revolution in school building plans? In the first place, Neutra did not arrive at his ideas suddenly. For a decade this Austrian-born architect studied the architecture of Europe and Japan before designing a structure he considered ideal for Southern California. He discovered that modern architecture, in schools as elsewhere, represented a back-to-nature movement—a return to nature, to "biologically just conditions," by technical means.

Next he considered the old type of school structure and much of what he saw, he disapproved of. First of all, his sense of economy, in art and in practice, was offended, by the monumental type of old senior high schools built throughout the nation. Taste includes to him a balanced consideration of purpose and economy. He says that "too much valuable money has been wasted on palatial architecture."

Above all he was interested in what went on in the mind of a child. Where he found the "three R's" type of schooling expanded to include a whole system of socialized activity and training, he found "the little red school house" of the past inadequate to meet the changing trends of modern educational needs.

Not that he speaks against the little red school house and its place in American history. But, he feels, its place is in the past, when the "three R's" learned in school were supplemented by a hundred other activities and occupations the child learned about at home when the farm house was the center of a pioneer life and a lively place for co-operative productive activities. The new school, he found, must substitute the educational values which the present home life sometimes no longer can have.

An interior view.

"Our schools had grown to be breeding places of competition rather than harmonization of effort," he says. In the old elementary schools, 50 children sat in parallel rows in a fixed seating arrangement, each isolated, not permitted even to whisper to his neighbor. The teacher poured instructions into the children while they listened. And then the testing and examining began. In other words, not co-operation, but competition was stimulated.

Richard J. Neutra.

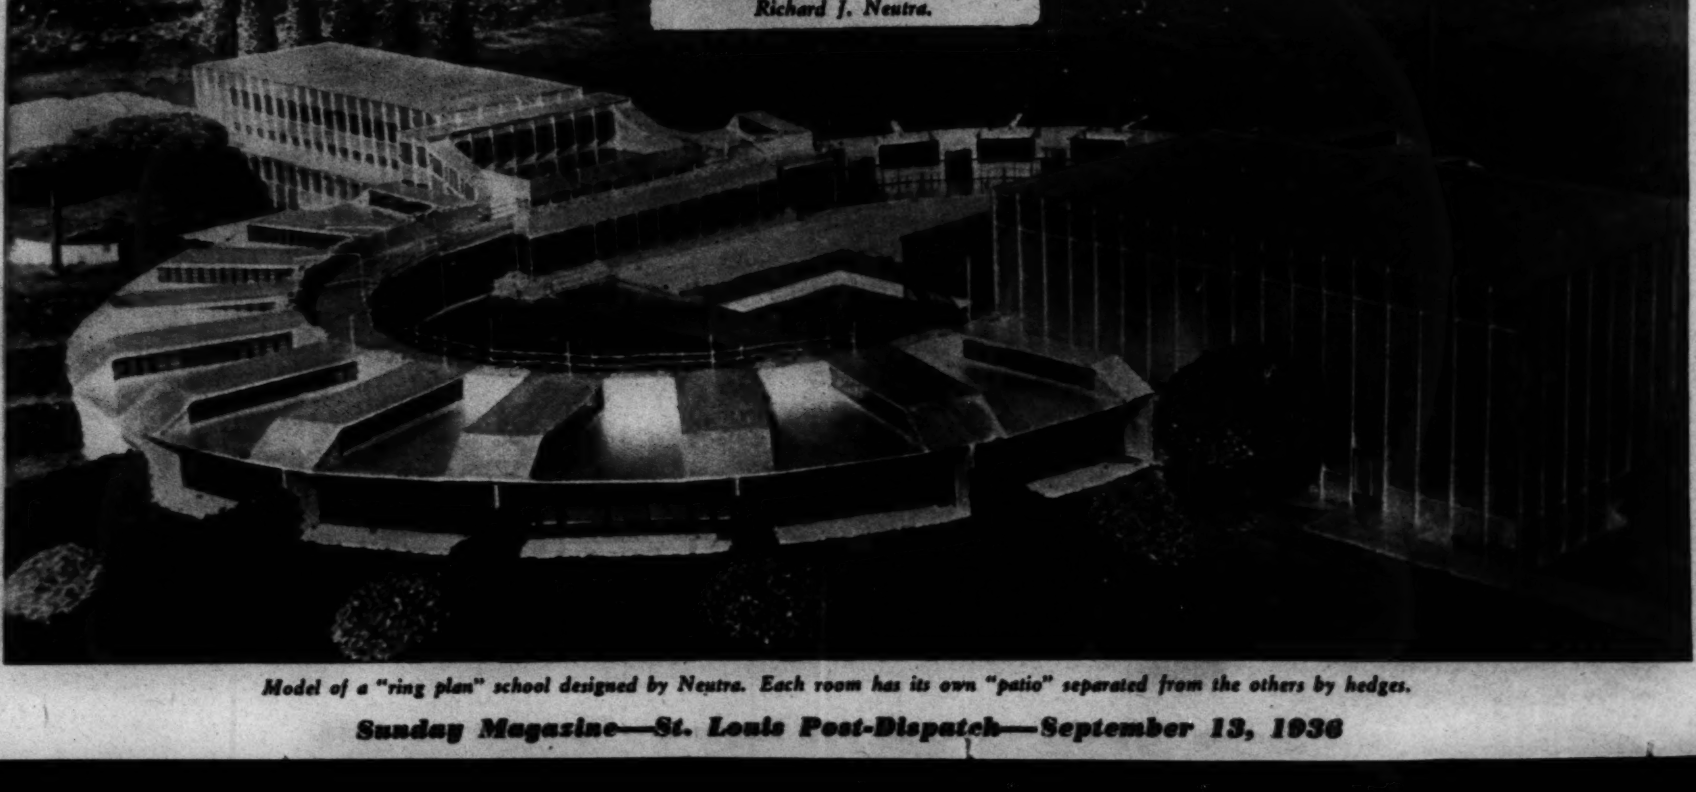
Neutra places the blame largely on the type of buildings used. "One of the factors which makes the 'listening school' die hard is the stereotyped architectural service out of which our school buildings came into being," he says. "And many of the brand-new school buildings are old-type educational plants, impediments to progress."

The redesigning of the individual classroom as the basic unit of education is the first necessity in the new elementary schools for America, he says.

The Bell school, housing 250 children, was built at a total cost of $38,500, and was erected on a plot of three and one-half acres, although State school housing authorities recommend as much as five acres for the ideal school plant.

Let's have a look at this "test tube school." It's an L-shaped one-story structure, built as simply as a factory, but far more artistically with its huge windows and tasteful landscaping. It has white walls, with stucco covering the structural frame of six-by-six timber, steel-braced to make it resistant to all lateral strains and shocks. There are five classroom units and one and one-half kindergarten units, each classroom and its patio corresponding to a unit. Every classroom is 23 feet wide by 38 feet long, opening out to its individual patio of the same length and 30 feet wide, with a separating hedge.

One wall of ceiling-height plate glass windows opens to the west and rolls back to give entrance to the patio of each room. Interior walls are of a blue-green hue with off-white oyster-shaded ceilings. Walls no longer are heavy masonry supporting heavy roofs. The cantilever system is used instead and the rooms spread out from a central core of steel. The western glass wall of each room and curtains are used purely to counteract light and weather. On the eastern side of each room are two doors giving outdoor exits. On both sides of the classrooms the roof overhangs about six feet. The roof is double and between it and the classroom ceiling is a continuous flow of air. In the eaves of the roof is a mechanically-operated heat-reflecting awning which rolls down for protection from sun glare. Radiators are enclosed in latticed material, aluminum lacquered, and all woodwork and metal exposed to the air is aluminum coated.



Model of a "ring plan" school designed by Neutra. Each room has its own "patio" separated from the others by hedges.

When Neutra's proposal for a new type of school architecture was made and the contemplated Corona school selected as the object of the experiment, the superintendent of Los Angeles schools issued the following statement: "The building, if it proves successful, may spell the doom of the massive two-story type of school that has been the standard since we outgrew the little red school house. It is particularly fitted for Los Angeles, where so much of the year can be spent in the open air."

At Emerson Junior High School where work has been started on two of the approved eight units, the architect's orders to supply two-story school buildings were followed by introducing direct methods of newest design. Wide and spacious corridors will be lighted naturally from without or by indirect lighting and balconies opening over the first-story rooms make use of roof area. Folding glass doors, as in Corona school, will connect classrooms and patios into one study area, and all rooms are lighted from both sides with extensive window area.

Steel structure will be used throughout the buildings, the first two of which provide for an administration and classroom building and a combined boys' and girls' gymnasium. The ground floor of the main building will be used for social science departments with all classrooms opening into outdoor rooms.

STAIRWAYS throughout are abundantly built and in corridors light comes through continuous clear-story windows built like transoms. All work rooms, offices and rest rooms have been designed with lower ceilings than the higher classrooms and library, in order to provide for additional lighting over the various roof levels, and as an economy means.

The estimated cost of construction of Emerson Junior High School is approximately $5 a square foot, while the cost of the Bell school was about $3.50 a square foot. The higher cost of the former is principally due to its two-story construction.

While Los Angeles looks to the Bell and Emerson school buildings as most radical departures, the designer of the two buildings has created a "ring plan school," still more radical in design, which he believes will be the next practical step in modern school architecture. A model of this proposed school building now is on exhibit at the New York Museum of Modern Art.

This novel school design, which resembles an airplane hangar in appearance, would be constructed of insulated prefabricated light steel frame work.

An entrance building, reached under roof from the garages for school buses, is principally devoted to the administration of the school. Teachers' offices and reception rooms are found here, while on the upper story are found only the principal's office, the teachers' library, rest rooms and the teachers' lunchroom, served by a dumb waiter from the kitchen below. This kitchen also provides meals for the pupils and a spacious hall with adjoining washrooms is laid in close contact with the service pantry of the school kitchen.

Roof decks of this modern school are adorned with flower containers to intensify the out-of-door character of the institution. A running track circles on the classroom corridor roof-level and connects with the sun bath on the balcony of the gymnasium building, the glazing of which is permeable for the vital ultra-violet radiation. This room is designed to be used during days of poor weather

The ARMY of the DISINHERITED TAKES to the ROAD

Driven From Their Farms by Drouth and Poverty, Thousands of Families Set Out in Their Ramshackle Cars in a Last Effort to Earn Their Keep.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO, California.

THEY used to farm cotton and corn and wheat in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and the Dakotas. "The drouth come and burned it up," they say, leaning wearily against their steering wheels. "We'd have gone back to Oklahoma from Arizona. But there wasn't anything to go to." Others say: "What bothers us travelin' people most is we can't get no place to stay still."

Still they come. Thousands of homeless wanderers, blown up by the drouth. No assets save hardened hands. Refugees from the dust bowl, puzzled, bewildered, directionless. Of course their migration is nothing new. The drouth refugees have joined a gypsy army that has been on the move for several years now. It is a motley parade, many thousands strong. "A cross-section of American life," William Plunkett called it when he was in charge of the Government transient program—now defunct. And that is the impression one gets. These serried thousands are as variegated a group as it is possible to imagine. Their only common bond is that they want work; work and the life, liberty et cetera it returns to the worker. Even this has exceptions.

A statistician estimates that from 300,000 to 500,000 Americans live in cars and trailers. Often by choice, of course. It isn't drouth refugees who are responsible for a 600 per cent annual increase in the business of a leading auto trailer company, now grossing $4,000,000—eight times the amount taken in in 1935. Trailers are symbolical of the great army of the uprooted, but they don't tell half the story. After all, W. K. Vanderbilt, Joseph E. Widener, Philip K. Wrigley and Henry L. Doherty are all trailer owners. They aren't migrants.

The trailer movement may be only a slight phase of something larger and more significant. What is obviously significant is that several states—notably California, Washington and Ohio—are besieged by this army of migrants. An army of at least a quarter of a million people is assaulting the borders of these states and nobody knows what to do about it. Just about a year ago the Government liquidated its transient program, an effort which had cost $89,000,000 and lasted two and a half years. Today large numbers of the farm families in the worst drouth-ridden region are on relief and a program for their rehabilitation is being laid out. But what will it do for the thousands who are already on the move, burned out, bewildered and uprooted?

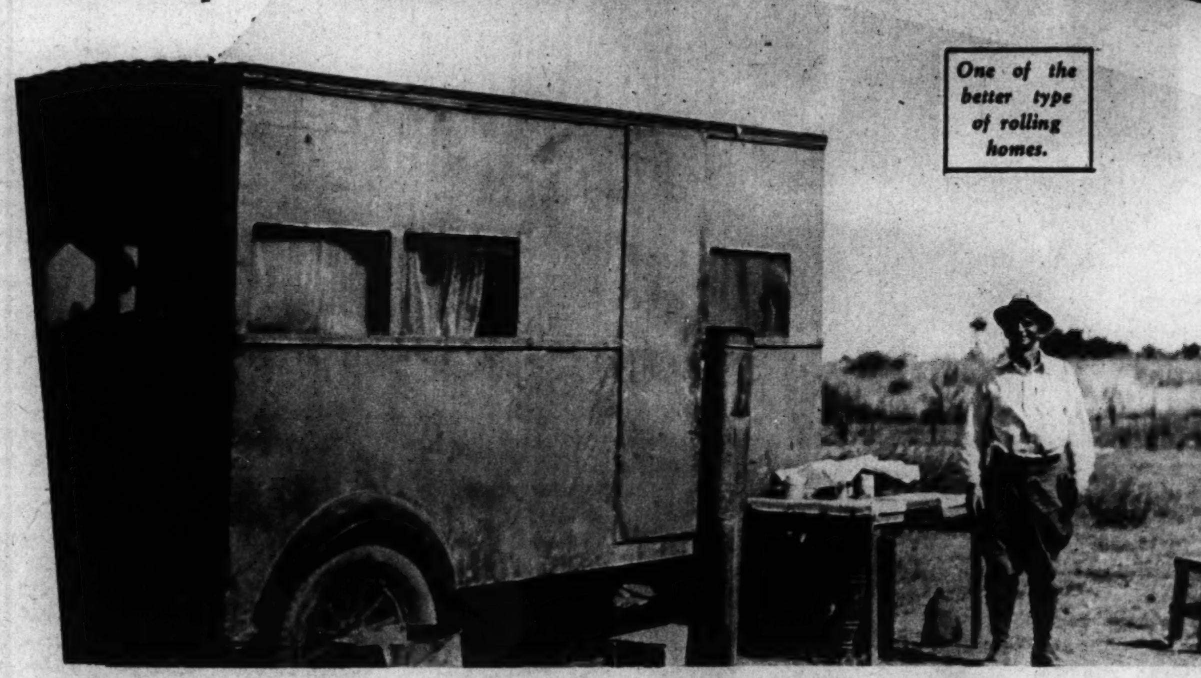
Los Angeles met the refugees with armed policemen, four of them at every highway where it crossed the southern boundaries of the State. Travelers who weren't able to prove their ability to support themselves were turned around and sent back across the bleak deserts, often after they had exhausted the little money that brought them that far. Colorado's Governor met incoming transients—most of them in this case, regular migratory agricultural workers from New Mexico—with National Guard troopers. While the humanity of these efforts was as doubtful as their constitutionality, it seems to have been the general opinion that even if the Constitution applied to such as these, they would have a hard time invoking it.

"It seems like God has forsaken us—back there in Arkansas," said one weary traveler, a farmer without a farm.

AND what did the farm owners in California have to say? It seemed as if suddenly a light had broken. For several years the itinerant workers on whom California farmers have always depended for their harvesting, had been threatening to unionize. As a matter of fact attempts to organize for better living conditions have been cropping up tentatively from time to time. One such movement culminated in one of those pimply outbreaks one hears about so frequently and a couple of would-be organizers were tarred and feathered and beaten out of town.

The newcomers are mostly experienced farmers. Sixteen per cent of them used to own their own farms. Thirty-nine per cent were tenant farmers. And the majority of the remainder were farm laborers. In other words they are likely to include a large percentage of experienced agricultural workers of all kinds. And when they ride in in their rattletrap cars and ramshackle trailers, anything that rings like a coin sounds like good money to them. They usually start in working at 15 cents an hour. Afterwards they get wised up and sometimes ask for the current 25 cents. The American Federation of Labor doesn't think 30 cents an hour would be too much to ask. It is trying to organize the transient workers and push the wages up that much.

Doing the family washing.



One of the better type of rolling homes.

California has suddenly discovered that the incoming caravans are a serious health menace. Even the travelers admit that sanitary conditions among their cohorts are not of the best. "There's more or less humiliation living this way," one told a social worker. "But we can't help it. Our tents are worn out."

Naturally there's a health problem. Included among the transients are those who have come West hoping to shake off tuberculosis. Most dangerous of course are those whose primitive covered wagons provide no sewage disposal facilities or means of incinerating garbage. Of course the tourist camps, hard hit by the trailer fad, have had to adjust to it as best they could by providing for the customers. But even tourist camps cost money and the drouth-blown aren't rolling in money.

So, what with one thing and another, it has occurred to California that the tin can caravans are living in filthy jungles, spreading disease wherever they go. The obvious thing to do was to arrest the dirty. Thousands were arrested. But this hasn't stopped the procession and it too costs money. Harassed county officials have finally turned to another solution.

Since it seems necessary to make the itinerant families welcome, a new plan has been devised. It was the suggestion of Government observers that sanitary camps be set up to deal with the problem. Two camps were started by the Resettlement Administration as demonstrations, one at Marysville, the other at Arvin. These are simple and inexpensive, but they solve the most obvious problems. Elevated tent platforms are built there, for those who have tents to mount on them. A wash house is provided so that itinerant housewives can do the family washing. There is a recreation house for children to use on rainy days and when they're not out with the pickers harvesting cotton, peas and fruits, or bunching carrots. Most important are garbage disposal facilities and clean toilets. Each of the Government camps is staffed with a manager, an assistant manager and a public health nurse. Tourists cannot use the camps free. If they can't afford to pay the small fee exacted, they must do chores—mostly just keeping the camp clean and adding necessary improvements.

THIS plan has an appeal for beleaguered counties and suits the transient campers. The great majority of them aren't looking for charity. They are on the road to find work and support themselves, not because they like travel.

"We are Bible Christians, mister," they'll tell you, "and all we want is work. Can't be drouth forever back home. Next year there's sure going to be good crops, so we're going home."

"Old woman says she'll lick out back home 'thout me, ef I don't go," says another. "So I guess we're going home for next year's crops."

Such citizens aren't considered a dangerous element, even though many of them are puzzled and discontented. With the co-operation of the managers at Marysville and Arvin, the communities have set up committees to govern themselves and provide miniature institutions like those back home. There are regular hymn singing rallies and even church services for the devout. In one case the camp community staged—of all things—a tacky party. The guests had no trouble finding costumes in their regular wardrobes. The women of such communities, reduced to the privations of their pioneer forebears, have frequently responded with the same amazing courage that pioneer mothers showed in the old days. Now they're busy starting "good neighbor clubs" for the benefit of half-starved new arrivals. It's not unusual for babies to be born by the roadside and helpful women are always in demand to assist the mothers in such cases.

Of course there is the intermixture of trailer families who live the life by preference. There are many who have no desire to return home and have enough money to get along on. They

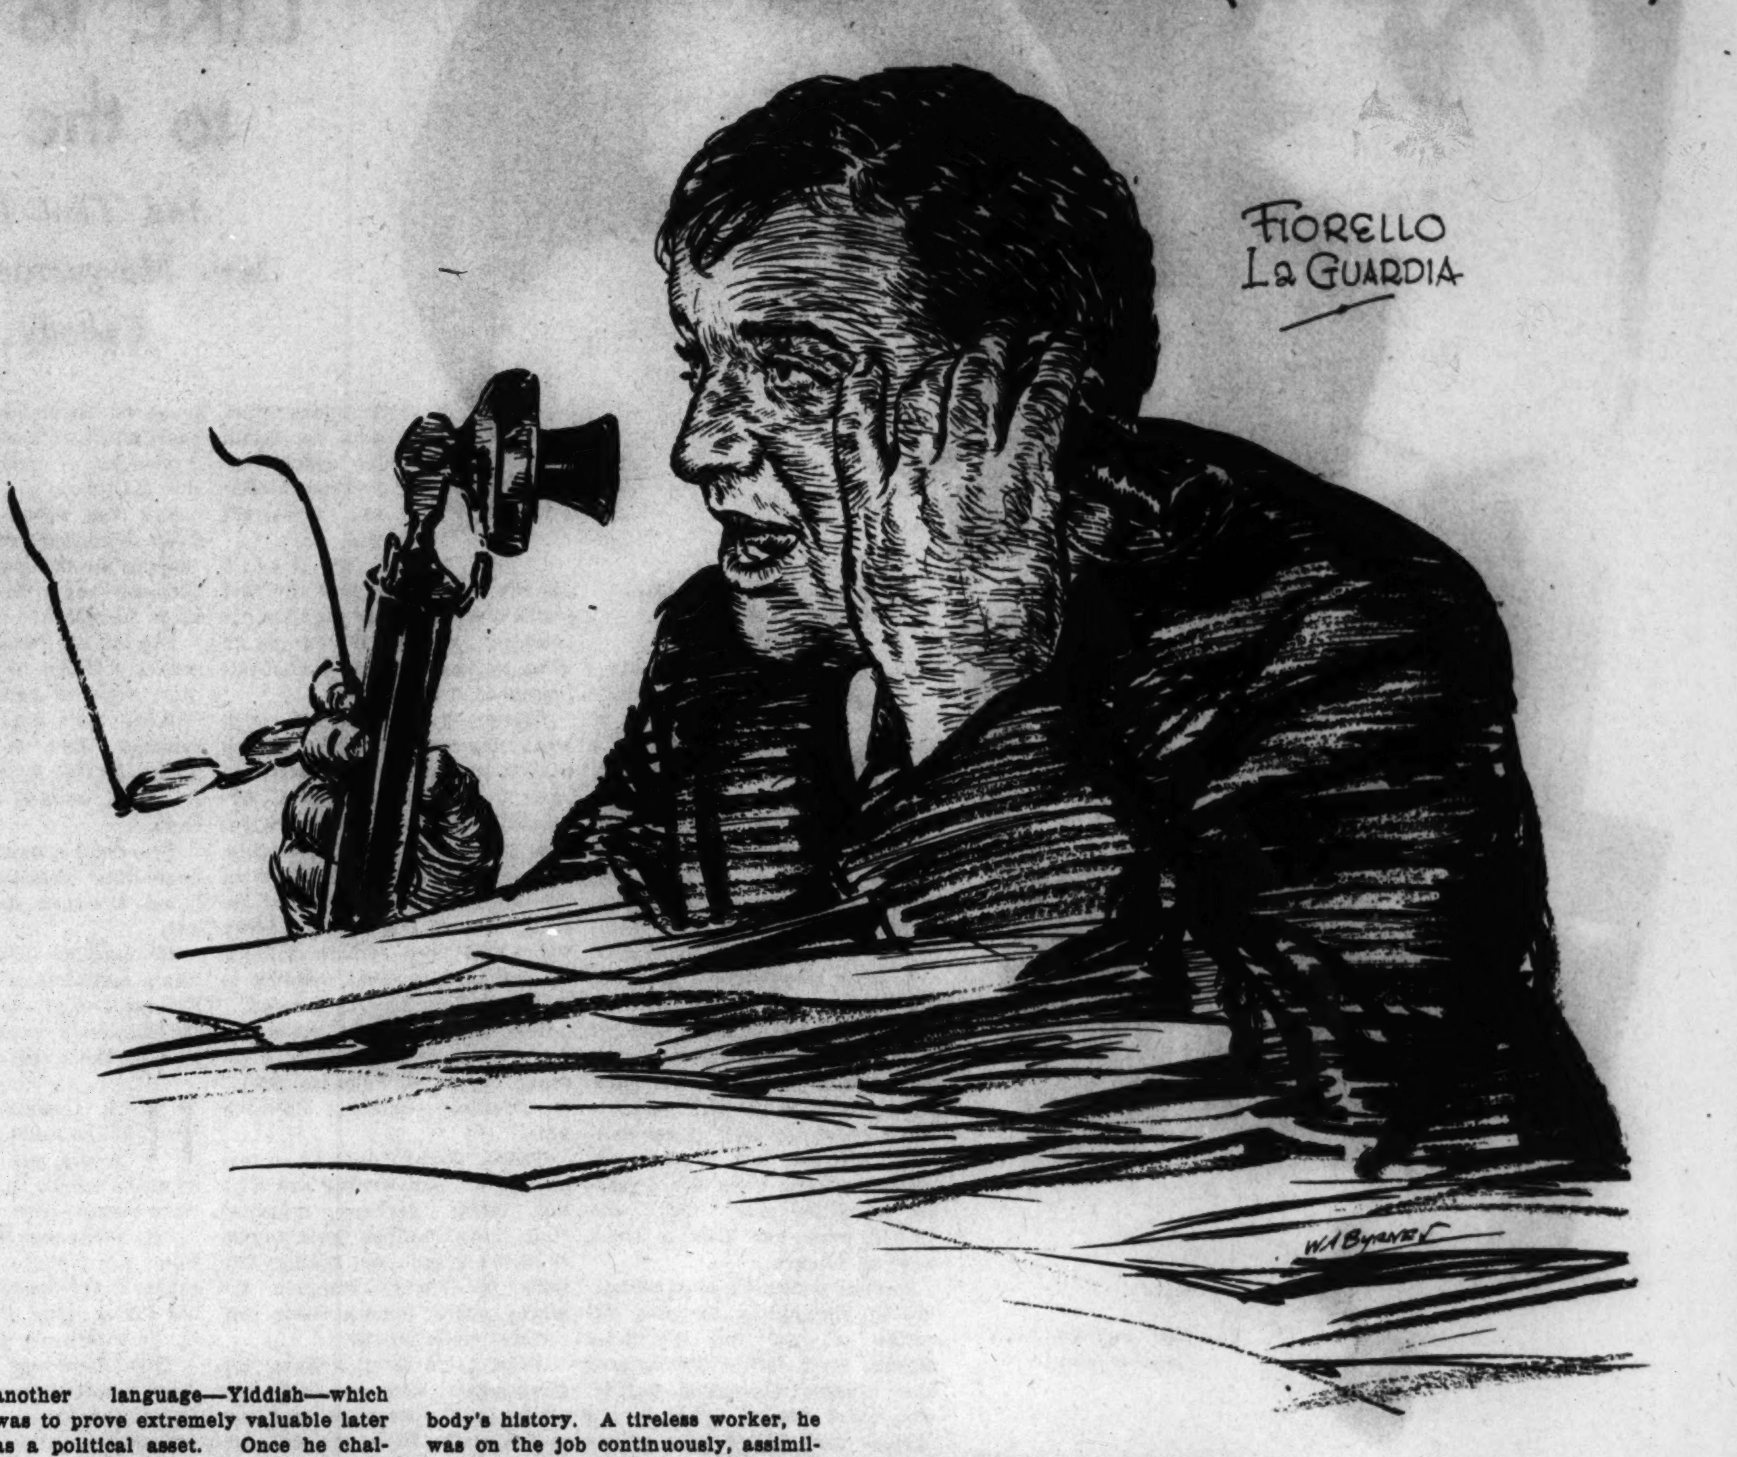
SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

FIORELLO LA GUARDIA
LOUISE WEISS

New York's 'LITTLE FLOWER' and How He Grew



NEW YORK.

IT IS always tempting and certainly it simplifies matters a great deal if one can classify an outstanding personality with a single, descriptive label, but anyone who attempts that with Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York City is merely borrowing trouble. He fits no label, never has and probably never will. At various and sundry times during the past 20 years he has run for office as a Republican, Democrat, Socialist, Progressive, Independent and other assorted titles. At times he has been indorsed simultaneously by two or more parties, the leaders of each hoping that he was their particular man and candidate and, in turn, he has been denounced by all of them as a renegade and all-around trouble maker.

All this, of course, has not happened by mere accident. Short, rotund, sometimes smiling, but oftener ferociously scrapping, La Guardia has contributed his full share to the pyrotechnics, chaos and general disturbances that have marked his path. His makeup and behavior are not at all in keeping with his name, which literally means "Little Flower." Where he goes, turbulence follows. He has a mind of his own and the courage of his convictions with the result that he is probably found on the side of lost causes more frequently than any other leading political figure of the day. Yet his very pugnacity will sometimes produce miraculous victories out of the most hopeless situations.

At the moment, of course, La Guardia is in office as a Fusion Mayor, having been supported by anti-Tammany Democrats and Republicans. To his credit one can say that he has not done what every normal politician would have done—built up his political fences to insure his re-election. He has continued along his independent, often unpredictable way, treading on toes right and left. The slaughter of Tammany officeholders, during his first few months in office, was something frightful. Since then he has antagonized the Republicans by his attacks on public utilities, offended the Democrats by appointing Republicans to office and horrified both by placing several Socialists in the city government. He has even found time to alienate the Socialist and left-wing voters by permitting the police to club strike and relief pickets — a policy strangely inconsistent with his general sympathy for labor and the underdog. But if he has not exactly enhanced the prospects of his re-election, a thing no Fusion Mayor has ever accomplished in New York, he has at least given the city, broadly speaking, a better and more efficient government than it has had in many years.

Fiorella first saw the light of day—and a gloomy squint it probably was—in a tenement on the Lower East Side in New York City. That was in 1882, shortly after his parents had arrived from Italy. His father, Achille La Guardia, an accomplished bandsman, soon joined the United States Army as a bandmaster and was stationed with the Eleventh Infantry at Fort Whipple, Arizona. There, among the soldiers and cowboys, Fiorello spent his boyhood, learned to ride the wild mustangs and announced his intention of becoming a jockey when he grew up.

HIS father had other ideas. He had taught his son the cornet and envisioned him as perhaps a second Sousa. As a testament of his weary hours of tooting on the desert, La Guardia still has an amateur virtuosity on the instrument, and on spring evenings the neighborhood of the La Guardia residence will sometimes be split with penetrating notes. It is likely to be His Honor running over one of the lighter Italian operas.

At the age of 19, with a diploma from the Prescott High School, young Fiorello entered the American consular service and served successively at Budapest, Trieste and Fiume, where he was named American Consul at the age of 21. Finding himself lost by not knowing the languages of the polyglot nationalities that flowed through the port, he promptly set about learning and in a short time mastered French, German, Italian (which his parents had not taught him), and Slav and Croatian dialects.

Returning to America in 1904, La Guardia resumed his education, studying law by night at the New York Law School and earning his way by working as an interpreter during the day at Ellis Island. There he picked up another language—Yiddish—which was to prove extremely valuable later as a political asset. Once he challenged a Jewish political opponent to a debate and stole the show completely when he addressed the meeting in perfect Yiddish, to the dismay of his adversary who could not speak the language.

The story of La Guardia's entrance into political life has become legendary in New York. The city leader of the Republicans was making up his Congressional slate in 1914 and telephoned the local club in the Fourteenth District asking who would be the goat. No Republican, to anyone's knowledge, had carried the district since the days of Peter Stuyvesant. La Guardia, just beginning law practice in the district, happened to be in the club at the time and offered to run. The local chieftain was extremely grateful and, turning to the telephone, shouted in the mouthpiece, "Put down Fiorello H. La Guardia." "Put down what?" came the startled response. "Fiorello H. La Guardia." "Spell it." He didn't win that year, but two years later he did.

The La Guardia record in the House is one of the most colorful in that body's history. A tireless worker, he was on the job continuously, assimilating an encyclopedic knowledge of national affairs. Frequently he would refuse to take time off to eat and would sit through long sessions, munching peanuts, so as not to miss anything. He was a man to avoid in debate. A born actor, with a voice that could shift from a deep thunder to a sly falsetto, he could—and still does—turn loose a vast and juicy vocabulary of the denunciatory epithets of many nations.

The late Charles F. Murphy once said of La Guardia that he was a "Roman candle gone mad." The description needs but one qualification—there is reason to his madness. If he is interested in a cause he will do outlandish things to get publicity for it. He has no respect whatever for elegance, subtlety or refinement. He was one of the earliest and most courageous fighters against prohibition and tried (unsuccessfully) to get himself arrested brewing illegal beer in a New York City drug store. He has succeeded in getting arrested on picket lines to help a strike.

Though nominally a Republican, his stand on legislation has usually made the party leaders shake their heads in despair. When he supported La Follette in 1924, they openly repudiated him. He fought for the anti-injunction bill that abolished the hated "yellow-dog" labor contract, for old-age pensions, for higher income taxes and, almost alone, he defeated the proposal for a Federal sales tax in 1932.

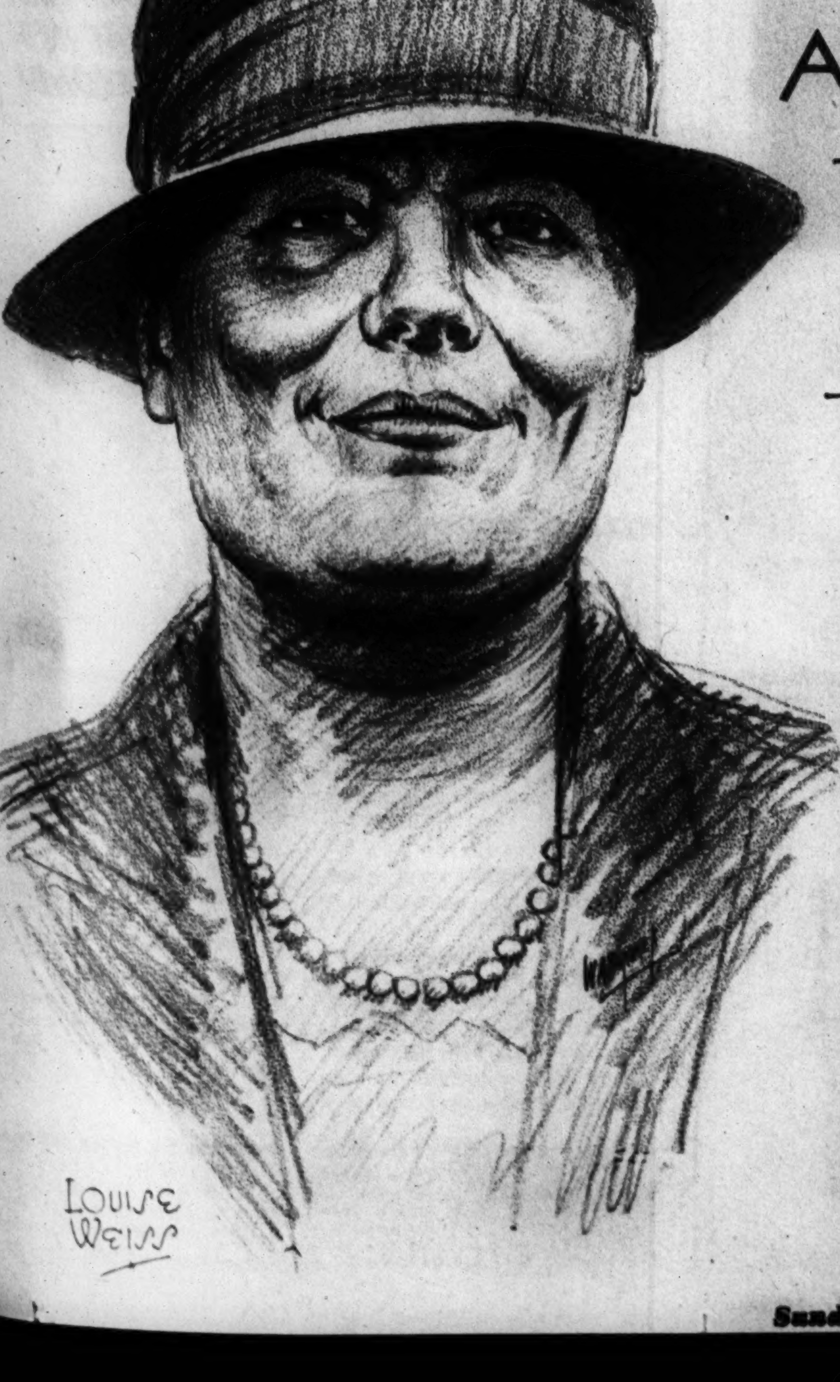
WHEN both the Republican Secretary of the Treasury and the Democratic Speaker of the House brought forth this proposal in a frantic effort to balance the budget, La Guardia blew up. "What is this," he asked, "a kissing bee?"

La Guardia has, of course, his moments of relaxation, when he is likely to ask a few friends in, don a white apron and cook them a delicious dish of spaghetti. But more often his pace is hectic. It is said he is happiest when in his office at City Hall, pacing back and forth, dictating furiously to six secretaries. On his desk he has an electric contrivance with which he regulates the flow of visitors; when he pushes the red button, it means he does not want to be disturbed; the white means a caller is about to be dismissed; the green that he is in a receptive mood; and when all three show at once, it is the accepted sign that His Honor is angry and has taken to pounding his desk.

Because of his stubborn and at times highly irascible nature, the Mayor is rarely found without a fight on his hands. Years ago as president of the Board of Aldermen he was in the center of a perpetual squabble, and the late Comptroller Charles L. Craig once implored Mayor Hylan in open meeting to "hit the little wop over the head with your gavel." Because of his unquestioned integrity, however, La Guardia is held in high regard even by his bitterest enemies. If they were to put a label on him, it would most probably be the simple warning: "Handle with care—highly explosive."

WILLIAM MANGOLD.

A PACIFIST Who BATTLES for the BALLOT



PARIS, France.

TWO years ago Louise Weiss decided to buy a house. She was a person of considerable attainments, though, alas, a woman—a spinster, in fact, and well into her thirties. Daughter of a Paris bourgeois, she had been a war nurse and after the war founded the well-known weekly, "L'Europe Nouvelle," with contributors including Painleve, Briand, Lord Robert Cecil, Stresemann, Mussolini. Through the post-war years the magazine, and its editor, Mlle. Weiss, had been concerned chiefly with the doctrine of a new world order, pacifist and "brotherhood" to the core.

But that home she wanted to buy—she found she could not buy it without her father's written consent. She began to wonder if there wasn't something to say for sisterhood. She found that French law—in contrast to American law—had very little to say for it. A Frenchwoman cannot vote or hold property. At marriage her possessions go to her husband, but she has no share in his fortune. He can divorce her on evidence that she is merely "lax" or "thriftless" or "unbecoming," but she finds it difficult to be rid of him.

And, Mlle. Weiss learned further, other Frenchwomen, riled as she was, were hard at work for women's suffrage—but in many different groups and along many conflicting lines. She set out to unify a "suffrage front." About that time (December, 1934), she was married, to Jose Imbert, but she held fast to her purpose and, at length, succeeded: There was, at last, one united suffrage movement in France.

And so, on May 5, 1935, when men—men only—went to the polls to elect the Paris Municipal Council, they found hat boxes in front of every polling place. These were the "ballot boxes" for a feminist straw vote. Symbolically, Louise Weiss was running as a feminist candidate—the first in the history of France. A vote for her meant a vote for "votes for women." And, perhaps understandably, more men voted in the hat boxes than in the official ballot boxes.

But the police frowned upon the unofficial "ballot boxes." Thirty-six of them had been placed all over Montmartre, the center of Paris' night life, and one by one they were put out of action. Mlle. Weiss, however, refused to surrender. With a table, hat box and large umbrella and surrounded by a joyous crowd, she continued to urge electors to vote for votes for women.

BEFORE long two policemen sauntered up. There was the usual demand that the speaker move on. The policemen tried to seize the hat box. A volley of perfumed face powder turned their dark capes white. It appeared that every woman had a box full, and Mlle. Weiss was the first to "fire." It flew in clouds and choked the police. It served for a brief moment as a smoke screen for the women. It was "the sword adorned with a bouquet" plus feminine improvements. But the police won. They bundled Mlle. Weiss up in their arms and carried her off to a police station, dragging two of her lieutenants after her. In other parts of Paris Mlle. Weiss had young women chained to lamp posts to symbolize the slavery which Frenchwomen, they said, are still subjected to.

She concentrated her campaign in the eighteenth arrondissement of Paris where a majority of the women are young milliners, dressmakers, saleswomen and factory girls. She decided to conquer this part of the city or nothing at all. Every man and woman living there received pamphlets asking them to support the vote for women by casting their ballots in the hat boxes.

Despite police intereference, more than 16,000 of these unofficial votes were cast for "votes for women" and Mlle. Weiss, who "ran" for no particular party, but represented all the women of France. And of these votes more than 7000 were cast by men.

Hers is a busy day. She usually spends it sitting in front of a modest cafe, surrounded by a general staff of several women and young girls. There she holds her meetings—a cup of tea in front of her—and talks to her adherents and would-be adherents; there she prepares her speeches that she will deliver that same evening; there she maps out her mode of campaign.

Her supporters are among all parties, and so are her enemies. In the evening when she or her aids, Juliette Akar and Jeanne Nemi, speak at meetings, the Socialists are their worst enemies. Although recognizing women's right to vote, the Socialists dislike to have a bourgeois woman candidate. The Communists are much more sympathetic.

But the most faithful supporters of woman suffrage are the modest working girls of the hill of Montmartre and the poor quarter behind it. They are convinced their lot will be improved only when representatives of their own sex are allowed in Government positions.

A TRAVELING troupe organized by Louise Weiss is invading every department of France, spreading propaganda by means of mass meetings, peppered with pamphlets and speeches and topped off by a "women's rights" movie. One particularly militant group of women, composed of Mlle. Weiss' stanchest supporters, has invaded the Department of Vienne where Senator Raymond Duplantier is among their most active opponents in the upper house.

Mlle. Weiss does not neglect the women of the "upper" classes. She and her troupe appear at the races and other affairs where the elite are bound to assemble. Recently she hurried back from the races at Longchamps to verify a rumor that Premier Blum had promised to introduce a bill in the Senate to give women equal rights.

While the Deputies have repeatedly passed the suffrage bill, which is expected to come up again next month, the Senators have invariably defeated it because "If women vote, they will not mend our socks; they will not make our soup."

Some weeks ago Mlle. Weiss deluged the Senators from the balconies with hundreds of socks labeled, "Even if you give us the right to vote, your socks will be darned."

"Soon," she says, "we will give them the soup."

Mrs. Marguerite du Pont Scott.

The LION HUNTER Who Didn't LIKE to RAISE HIS VOICE to the CHILDREN

And That Is One of the Reasons Mrs. Marguerite du Pont Scott Asked for Custody of Her Daughters.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania.

SOME of the "ordinary" people of Philadelphia and nearby Delaware, where the duPont name is by way of being the American version of royalty, enjoyed the rare privilege recently of feeling a sort of equality with some members of Wilmington's royal family.

It gave housewives a sense of kinship with Mrs. Marguerite du Pont Ortiz Scott to learn that for all her socially omnipotent name, her 12-room penthouse, her country mansion filled with servants and a nurse for each of her children, she was just another distracted mother when her 5-year-old daughter said, "No," and pushed away her Dresden china bowl of spinach.

It eased a father's sense of failure in disciplining his own offspring to read that Forrester Holmes Scott, World War aviator and intrepid big game hunter, who could boss a safari in the African bush and draw a steady bead on a charging bull elephant, shrank from raising his voice to his daughter.

Consequently, thousands of people felt an almost personal interest when the Scotts went to Judge Theodore Rosen's Domestic Relations Court here to battle for custody of 5-year-old Eve and 2-year-old Zoe.

The child custody hearing brought the first public disclosure that the romance between the blond, 29-year-old du Pont heiress and her lion-shooting husband had cooled.

Everybody remembered with what magnificence Christ Church near Wilmington had glittered on June 5, 1926, when "Carita" Ortiz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julien Ortiz of Valmy, Greenville, Delaware, and granddaughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Alexis I. du Pont, became the bride of Scott. There had been enough duPonts in attendance at that wedding to make a whole Liberty League.

Like any bridal pair, the couple set up housekeeping in Scott's 18-room bungalow, "Bonnie Brae," in Merion, outside Philadelphia.

There "Carita" dabbled in music and art and writing and with the talent perhaps inherited from Uncle Philippe Ortiz, founder of the French and Spanish editions of Vogue, designed the gowns which famous Paris couturieres made for her.

From there Scott, a Naval Reserve officer, went out to fly test planes for the Navy, to crash into the Delaware River on one occasion, and to amuse himself with outings with gun and camera in Africa and India.

Then last July 26 Mrs. Scott packed up while her husband was in New York and moved her gowns and children into her penthouse on Rittenhouse Square, a tiny Philadelphia park completely surrounded by green old trees and blue old blood.

She was tired, she told the Court in applying for a divorce, of "paying all the expenses" of her husband and "having her life made miserable."

Because she refused to let Scott see the children, he got a writ and they went to court flanked by Philadelphia's flashing legal adversaries, John R. K. Scott, attorney for the wife, and William A. Gray, counsel for the husband.

Mrs. Scott sought complete and unqualified possession of pretty, blond Eve and dark, wide-eyed Zoe.

Her husband, she said in effect, was a softie where discipline was concerned and she didn't want the children's routine interrupted by even short visits to him.

HER husband, she told Judge Rosen, was afraid he "would lose Eve's love" if he spoke sternly to her. So he always coaxed, never commanded.

"He would say, 'Please, darling, won't you just this once eat your supper?' and would 'reason' with her for an hour while the dinner or the bath water got cold."

Then there was the time, Mrs. Scott recalled, when the lion hunter allowed Eve to run about the dew-covered garden in nightgown and bare feet until 11 p. m.

"Where were you, madam—out?" Attorney Gray inquired.

The tall blonde tossed her head scornfully. "I was right there."

Gray wondered if she wasn't "one of those mothers who leave the children to the nurses." She certainly wasn't, said Mrs. Scott, and although she didn't approve of being harsh, "You can't temporize forever."

Certainly, Gray argued, a country home was a better place for children than a city penthouse.

"Mrs. Scott has an income of $8000 a year, but pays $6000 a year rent, has a chauffeur, maids and two nurses," he said. "How does she do it?"

Attorney Scott grinned at Mrs. Ortiz, the wife's mother, and Mrs. Ortiz smiled back.

Attorney Scott suggested archly that Aviator Scott's income "had not been investigated."

And Scott insisted he was not always indulgent, but declared his belief in guiding children through kindly moral suasion.

"I made Eve apologize to her mother," he recalled righteously, "after she had flown into a rage and called her mother a 'dirty pig.' "

Not only that, but he had spanked the child once when she had struck her mother.

He remembered one night when Eve wanted to accompany her parents to a dinner party with neighbors. When his arguments failed to dissuade her, he let her tag along because he wanted to "show her the effects of having her own way."

At his request, he related, Eve was ignored at the neighbor's home until she betook herself home.

Mrs. Scott also remembered the incident.

"When the child saw her father coming downstairs she rushed to him saying, 'Daddy, please may I go, too?' " the mother related.

"Then, in a dirty dress—it was the end of the day and she had come in from play—she followed us down the street. I asked Mr. Scott to pick her up and carry her home. He just wouldn't do it and she followed us into the house where—"

Her face hardened—"where she held the center of the floor for two hours."

Wearily Judge Rosen said:

"Mrs. Scott's conception of how children should be raised is true. We subscribe to the importance of routine, although people have grown to maturity without it, like Topsy, for instance.

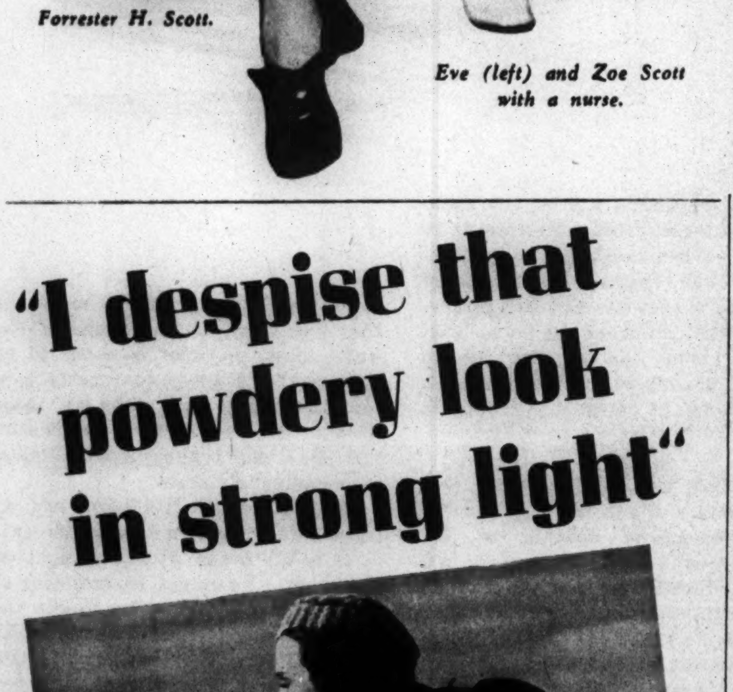
"A LITTLE love and affection mixed with routine is necessary, but an intelligent affection is of exceeding importance.

"Perhaps a father in his discipline disrupts the routine. But children require the knowledge that their father wants to be with them just as much as their playmates' fathers. Sudden changes are bad for children. The ideal condition is for both parents to be with the children."

Then, describing both homes as "very good," he ordered that until disposition of the divorce case the children stay with their mother during the week. From 9 a. m. Saturdays to 5 p. m. Sundays the father may take them to his estate.

As an afterthought apparently the Judge added, "Mrs. Scott may accompany them to the country if she wishes."

"I despise that powdery look in strong light"



ONE of the worst faults a powder can have is showing too much—an inquiry among 1,067 girls brings out!

Of 3 leading powders, Pond's got twice the votes of the next-liked powder, for "not giving that powdered look." Triple the votes of the third! The reason is in the colors of Pond's.

"Glare-proof" colors—Pond's colors catch only the softer rays of light—won't show up chalky in strongest glare. True skin tones, uniformly blended. They give your skin a lovely, soft look in any light. Special ingredients give Pond's its soft, clinging texture—keep it looking fresh for hours.

Low prices. Decorated screw-top jars, 35¢, 70¢. New big boxes, 10¢, 20¢.

SKIN IS SO ROUGH... POWDER "CATCHES" TERRIBLY

POND'S VANISHING CREAM FIXED THAT IN A SECOND!

"Holds powder, too—keeps my make-up fresh for hours."
Mrs. Eugene du Pont III

For a smooth, lasting make-up . . . first MELT away roughness

ALL ready to go out . . . then you start to powder. But your powder just "catches" on every tiny roughness on your skin.

Those "powder catchers" are really dried-out cells on top of your skin . . . old dead ones. As your skin keeps drying out, they flake off part way. Cling, loose and harsh . . .

But—you can smooth those roughnesses off—in an instant—by melting them!

A prominent dermatologist explains: "The instant a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream) touches dried-out cells on surface skin, these cells melt away. Underlying cells come into view—young supple ones that give the skin its smooth appearance."

Now you know why Pond's Vanishing Cream is an instant skin softener, a marvelous powder base. Keep it on hand. It makes your skin lovelier!

For a smooth make-up—Right after cleansing, put on a film of Pond's Vanishing Cream. It gives your skin a wonderful smoothness. Powder and rouge go on softly. Stay for hours!

Overnight for lasting softness—To keep your skin soft at all times, apply Pond's Vanishing Cream every night after cleansing. Leave it on. It won't smear. As you sleep, your skin gets softer by the minute!

Outer Skin Cross-section of outer skin (epidermis). Dried-out particles on top scuff loose, catch powder. Melt them off!

go South for the winter and North for the summer. As they earn a little money, they lavish it on their trailer homes. They have found out how to make themselves comfortable on the road and know what a trailer needs to make it feel more like a home.

But what about the children? Most farm families have had to provide for their children when they pulled up stakes and went off in a trailer. In many cases the children were the reason for leaving home; the indigent were threatened with separation, were told that their children would be taken away and sent to orphanages, while the parents were to go to poor farms. The problem of getting them to school remains.

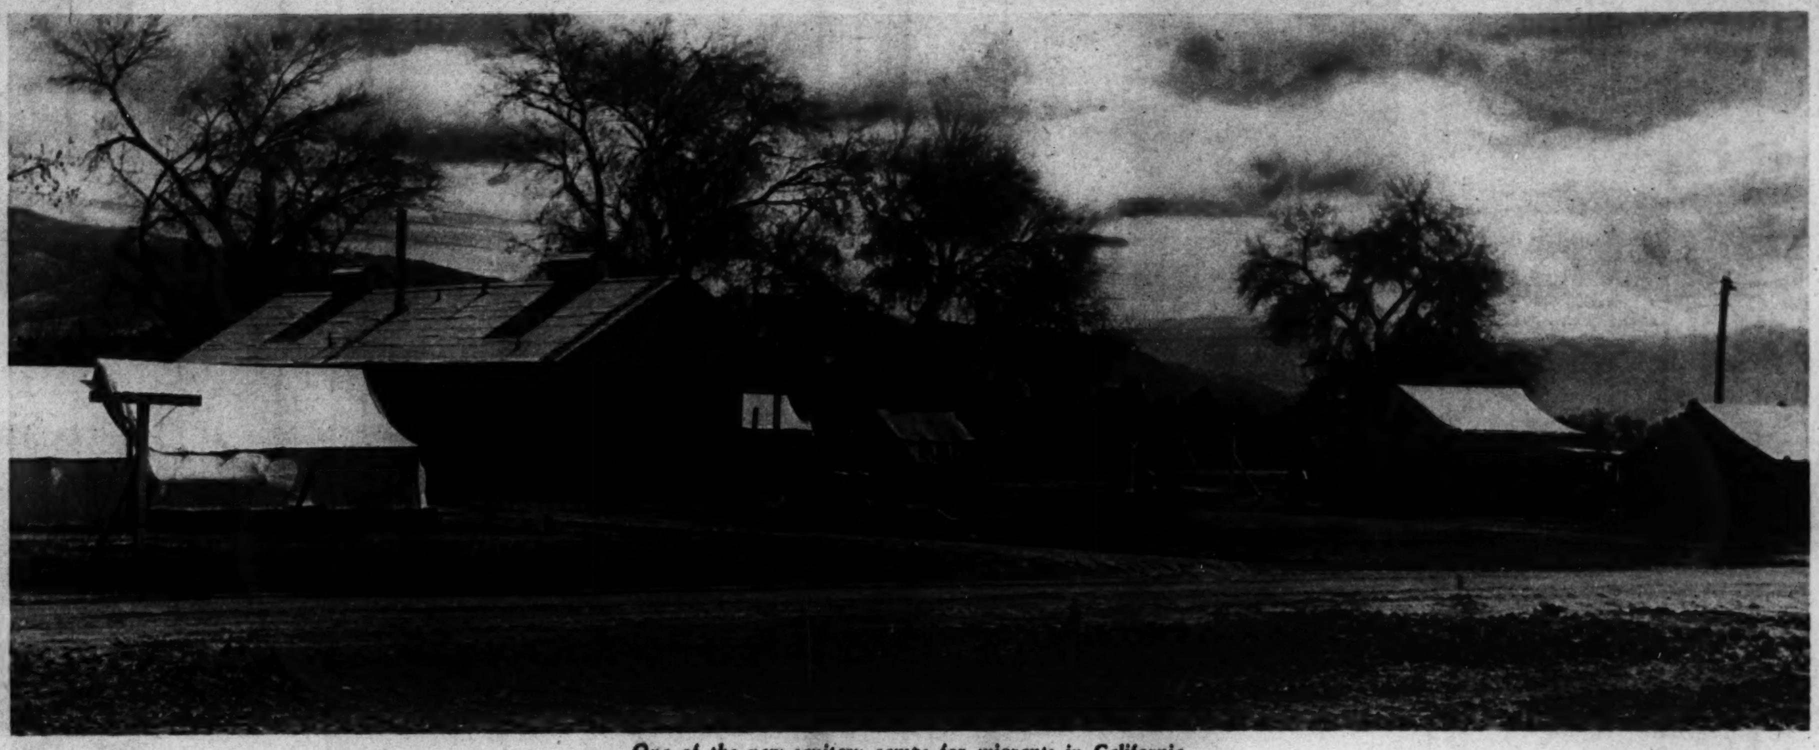
California has adopted a policy about this, possibly with some help from the organized farmers. Townships and counties will now be paid by the State for receiving migratory children while parents are working in nearby fields. Aside from the humanitarian motive for this, it will have a decided psychological effect on the trailer families. They will be less likely to heed the hypothetical Communists and radicals who will point out that they are acting as strike breakers and forcing down farm labor wages in their temporarily adopted State. They will feel that they are being taken care of by a generous and hospitable community and that they must not abuse that hospitality.

THE Commonwealth Club of California has considered all this and has gone into the possibility of stabilizing these migrant families. Its agricultural sub-section doesn't feel optimistic about the problem. "While we should welcome some way to settle these people permanently in their own homes," its latest report reads, "it seems we shall have this problem with us for a long time." At the same time the Commonwealth Club recognizes that thousands of jobs which used to be held by one man, the year around, are now taken by dozens of men working in relays. Obviously this doesn't make for greater efficiency, but it is a situation for which the farmers themselves are responsible. Regular transient workers who always followed the harvests in California have suffered bitterly by it. As to the new transients, their lot is expressed by another quotation:

"Seems like we eat up all we earn before we get it," said an experienced tenant farmer from the East, sitting unhappily beside his ramshackle trailer. "But if we only keep working, Mister, we won't be pea pickers long."

"Poor folks have poor ways," another pointed out. In spite of the obvious respectability of those people, they sense the unhappy part they are playing in the troubled labor market of California and many of them would like to get back home before a storm may break.

It is extremely hard to separate the specific problems from the general in such a mottled movement as this. Some writers have taken the liberty of romanticizing the situation, pointing out that Americans are instinctive rovers and adventurous pioneers who won't take a beating sitting down and light out for new horizons when a dust storm appears over the old. Others, with a more professional grasp of social problems, see only the pitiful conditions of the transient families who have come up against the barbed reality of not being wanted anywhere. These point out that the desire to travel is not characteristic of unfortunate and impoverished farmers; their most active desire is to hold on to their own and build security for themselves. There may be an adventurous overtone to marriages growing out of transient camp meetings, to honeymoon couples setting off in rattletrap cars to conquer the unknown. But social statisticians don't give the newlyweds a very good chance of happiness and success. Instability can break up a home which isn't solidly founded, but instability with dire poverty and a jobless future ahead is almost sure to. Young transients have little opportunity to improve themselves in any field requiring training. Their efforts to make homes out of their rolling shanties are almost uniformly pitiful.



One of the new sanitary camps for migrants in California.

Until the time of the next census it will be impossible to know exactly how many transient families and individuals there are in America. Meanwhile, however, California is conducting a regular survey to determine the extent of its own problem. Current figures are not yet available, but according to Professor Paul S. Taylor, regional labor advisor to the Resettlement Administration, and Tom Vasey, field investigator for the same bureau, the figures for the period from June to December, 1935 (six months), were as follows: 43,180 men, women and children in need of employment entered California from other states by private automobile. (The automobile must not be taken as a sign of prosperity, of course; for the most part it is a necessity salvaged from the wreck of a farm home). In the same period 10,194 persons in similar circumstances entered the State in cars bearing California licenses. It is assumed that the majority of the latter were regular itinerant farm workers returning for harvesting seasons. Of course the present figures are much larger. Probably the official estimate by the California Division of Immigration and Housing, which places the current number of immigrants at 150,000 to 200,000, is not far from the correct figure.

The 'CROWN of the ANDES' FINALLY COMES NORTH

Conquistadores to the New World. Alonzo de Ojeda, first explorer to follow the example of Columbus, discovered Venezuela in 1499 and recorded that he returned to Spain with "200 natives captured for slaves, and one emerald." And, says a modern writer, "that single emerald did more to whet the Spanish appetite than all the slaves together, for here was definite proof that precious stones were to be found in the new Spanish possessions."

Pizarro and his men were not content with the emeralds they took from the Incas, but thirsted to find the place of their origin. The location of the mines was kept a secret by the Indians, and the Spaniards could learn only that they lay to the north. It was on an expedition in search of these mines that Benalcazar reached the point where he founded Popayan. He was not far from the source of the Inca treasure. Colombia today is the only producer of emeralds, save for a few places in the Ural Mountains of Siberia.

The paucity of producing fields is one reason for the emerald's rarity. No such artificial device as the producers' pool which withholds diamonds from the market is required to keep up the price of emeralds. Another factor is the primitive methods which must be used in emerald mining. Because it is a fragile stone, the electric drills, steam shovels and blasting that have increased diamond production cannot be used. In the Colombian fields, the only implements employed are a crude scraper and a crowbar to loosen the surrounding rock.

A Government bulletin, issued by the Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce, has this to say about the value of emeralds: "The emerald is the most costly of all gems. Dr. George F. Kunz divides emeralds into two distinct classes: Exceptional specimens which bring as much as $6000 a carat, and fine quality specimens which bring about $1000 a carat. The superfine Colombian emeralds are sold in New York to retail for $3000 a carat, and some of the extra special gems bring as much as double that amount."

Sydney Y. Ball, an authority on geology, wrote in Economic Geology last September: "Emeralds of good quality over one carat increase in value by the square of the weight, a generalization which has been true since the sixteenth century."

ON THE basis of these two authoritative statements, it may be seen that the estimate of $4,500,000 for the Crown of the Andes' value is scarcely an extravagant one.

What will be its ultimate fate? It is not a debatable point for Piper, though his choice would be for the crown's preservation in its present form. But no museum is able to purchase such an enormously valuable relic. No individual purchaser is within the realm of possibility. "The crown must be broken up," he says.

But before the inevitable occurs, the public in various cities is to have an opportunity to view the crown. An admission fee is charged, of which 51 per cent goes to local charities on a nonsectarian basis. One of the New World's oldest art treasures may soon be lost, but needy sufferers in both North and South America will benefit from its conversion to the channels of commerce. For its rare emeralds to rest in a jeweler's showcase until they attend operas and social functions as necklaces, brooches and pendants will be but one more transition for gems that have been treasure of the Incas and spoils of their conquerors and sacred symbols and art exhibits.

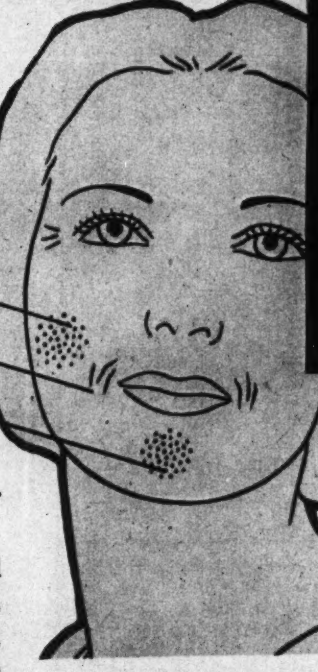
Get at that

Faulty Under Skin

Miss Dorothy Day, New York: "Pond's Cold Cream keeps my skin free from little lines."

The Starting Place



Where skin faults begin

Cross-section showing tiny underskin glands, nerves, blood vessels which make outer skin good or bad. When they function poorly, skin faults start.

HORRID SKIN FAULTS are usually underskin faults.

Blackheads come when tiny oil glands underneath are overworked. They give off a thick, clogging oil. Next thing you know, your pores are looking larger. Dirt settles in them . . . Blackheads!

And when those mean little lines begin to show up around your eyes, your mouth—it's your outer skin crinkling, because your underskin is getting soft and flabby.

But you can stop those cloggings! Bring fresh life to that faulty underskin—

Twice a day invigorate your underskin with a rousing Pond's deep-skin treatment.

Pond's Cold Cream contains specially processed oils which go way down deep into your pores. Right away it softens dirt . . . Floats it out . . . and with it comes the clogging matter from the skin itself. You wipe it all off. Right away your skin feels fresher—looks brighter.

Now waken glands . . . cells

Now a second application of that same freshening cold cream! You pat it in smartly. Feel the circulation stir. This way little glands and cells awaken. Fibres are strengthened.

In a short time, your skin is better every way! Color livelier. Pores smaller. Lines softened. And those mean little blackheads and blemishes show up less and less.

Get a jar today. Begin the simple treatments at the right. In two weeks, see your skin lovelier—end worrying about skin faults.

REMEMBER THIS TREATMENT

—it will help to clear your skin of common faults

EVERY NIGHT, cleanse with Pond's Cold Cream. As it brings out the dirt, stale make-up, and skin secretions—wipe it all off. Now pat in more cream—briskly. Rouse that failing underskin! Set it to work again—for that clear, smooth, line-free skin you want.

EVERY MORNING, and during the day, repeat this treatment with Pond's Cold Cream. Your skin comes softer every time. Feels better, looks better, and powder goes on beautifully.

Keep up these Pond's patting treatments. As blackheads soften, take a clean tissue and press them out. Now blemishes will stop coming. And the very places where pores showed largest will be finer textured.

"POND'S COLD CREAM IS THE THING I USE TO KEEP MY SKIN IN GOOD CONDITION"

Miss Bettina Belmont, popular debutante and expert horsewoman.

"I'M OUT OF DOORS A GOOD DEAL—but Pond's Cold Cream flushes every speck of dirt out of my skin, never lets blackheads come, softens lines out of sight."

Bettina Belmont

POST-DISPATCH PASTE-UPS

A New Feature

By WALTER DAHLGREN

DIRECTIONS: Here's an easy one. First mount everything upon light cardboard except A and B. Cut out on the heavy lines. Also punch out the black spot for the mouth. Fold on the dotted lines and paste (stars indicate paste) so that it will be like the illustration. Note particularly that the collar (C—D) is on the outside of the box-like head. Fold down the wings of the collar as shown. Fold the nose A and paste it in its proper place. Place the hat rim around the head on the small-dotted line. Now roll the cigar B on a pencil, starting at the star end.

Now everything's ready. Get Dad or Uncle to blow smoke into the box. Insert the cigar in the mouth, then by squeezing or tapping on the box, make Puffin' Willy smoke or blow smoke rings.

THE CHARACTERS

O. HUM—A very hungry opossum.

THE LITTLE WOMAN OF THE WOODS—O. Hum's mysterious hostess.

Some kind ants, who didn't know that opossums don't eat roasted grasshoppers, served one to O. Hum. Poor O. Hum hadn't eaten anything for several days, and the sight of this roasted grasshopper nearly drove him crazy. He leaped up and kicked the platter, on which the grasshopper lay, out of the hands of the kind ants, and then started to break down their houses. He hadn't done much damage, however, when an odd little woman grabbed him by the arm. "Come with me," she said. "I will give you food." The poor opossum didn't know whether he was dreaming or not. But with that magic word food ringing in his ears, he couldn't do anything but follow her. She took him to a cave where she, with the aid of a lot of queer little helpers, prepared a stew. O. Hum seated himself at a table to wait. In a little while the stew was ready. We see the little woman bringing the opossum a big bowl of it as

THE PLAY BEGINS

THE LITTLE WOMAN—(In a high, cackling voice.) This stew will do you more good than any you have ever eaten. You poor fellow, you must be half starved. (She sets the bowl on the table.) There now, eat. It's the best stew in all the land. (O. Hum is doubtful. He can't imagine such a queer creature cooking anything that would taste good. But he takes a spoonful of the stew and slowly raises it to his mouth and tastes it. A surprised look comes over his face.)

O. HUM—(Smacking his lips.) Why, it's good. Gosh, it's the best I've ever tasted. Um-Um. (He throws down his spoon, greedily snatches up the bowl and gulps the stew. Then he calls loudly for more—and gulps that down. When he has eaten as much as three opossums would ordinarily eat, he falls back in his chair and goes sound asleep. The little woman starts laughing in her high, cackling voice.)

THE LITTLE WOMAN—Haw! Haw! Just look at him. He's sound asleep. Sound asleep, I tell you. Haw! Haw! And now, my sleeping beauty, we shall teach you a lesson. (Then to her helpers.) Come on, let's get him out of here. (The helpers put O. Hum on a stretcher and follow the little woman.)

THE LITTLE WOMAN—We shall find a nice tree under which our well-fed friend can continue his slumbers. And when he wakes up he will think twice before he breaks up homes of folks smaller than he is. Because the world is going to look different to him now he has eaten my magic stew.

EXOTIC—A Fifth avenue version of a Cossack gown in black lacquered silk.

I'm puzzled...
what's wrong with me?

HERE I am, as I take stock of myself:

LOOKS Maybe not downright beautiful but people don't seem to find me hard to look at. Nature blessed me with nice eyes and hair and a clear, fresh skin.
DRESS I like pretty clothes and I have them. Think I know how to wear them, too.
GOOD COMPANY Well, maybe I'm not clever but I can't be called dumb. I have enthusiasm, a sense of humor, am not afraid to talk and know how to listen.
GOOD SPORT I'm nobody's spoiled darling. I can take things, good and bad, without losing my balance.

Not a bad inventory—but there must be something in the picture I don't see.

For I can't dodge this staring fact: people seem attracted to me right at first, but they don't come back for more. What is wrong?

There is one fault which never fails to shut a girl or woman out of social success.

Underarm perspiration odor is the harder to excuse because it is so easy to avoid. The modern way is simply to make it impossible by the every-day year-round use of Mum!

With Mum, you know, it takes just half a minute to make your underarms fresh and odorless for the whole day.

It's so easy to use. If you forget it before you dress, just use it afterwards. For Mum is harmless to clothing. And it's so soothing and cooling to the skin, you can use it right after shaving the underarms.

Don't think your daily bath is a safeguard. Count on Mum—it prevents every trace of unpleasant odor without preventing perspiration itself. Make Mum a daily habit! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Ave., New York City.

ON SANITARY NAPKINS, TOO, Mum gives complete protection from the unpleasantness which women always fear.

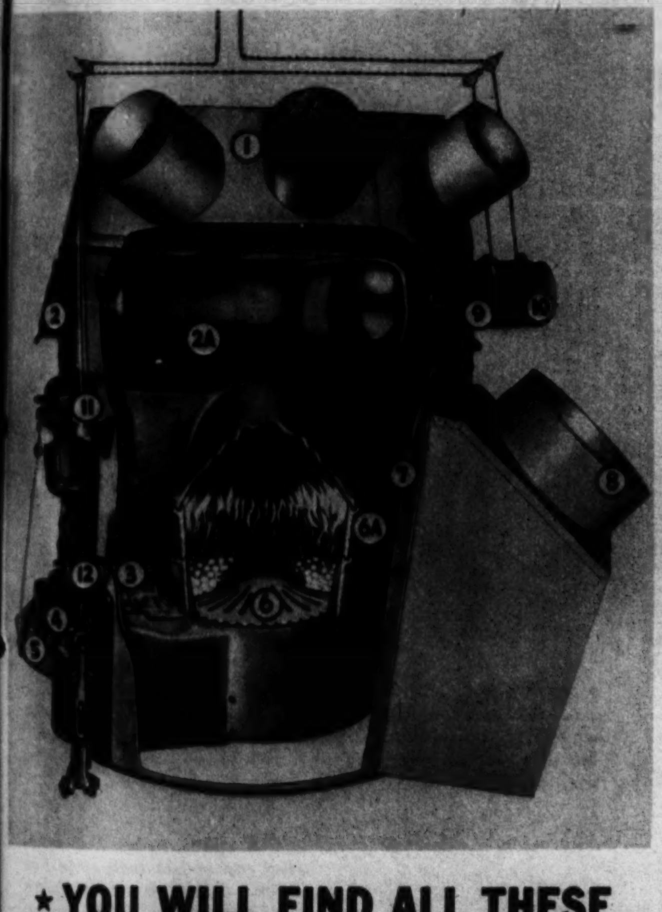
WE DIDN'T DO HALF THE FURNACE TENDING OUR NEIGHBORS DID AND BURNED MUCH LESS COAL BESIDES!

"Am I Glad We Had HOLLAND HEAT Last Winter!"

"I was really astonished and delighted over the ease with which our HOLLAND kept every room warm and cozy on the coldest days of last January—even when the outside temperature was way below zero! We were no less pleased by the remarkably small coal consumption. In fact, we burned less coal than we did with our former heating system in an ordinary winter. Besides, we did a lot less furnace tending than neighbors with similar homes—yet we got what they failed to get—PERFECT HEAT IN EVERY ROOM!", writes Mrs. A. L. Armstrong of St. Louis, Missouri. And hundreds of other HOLLAND users have paid equally enthusiastic tribute to the unfailing efficiency and economy of their HOLLAND Heating Plants during the severest winter on record.

★WHY A HOLLAND SYSTEM HEATS ROOMS THAT ORDINARY INSTALLATIONS LEAVE COLD



★YOU WILL FIND ALL THESE VITALLY IMPORTANT FEATURES ONLY IN HOLLAND FURNACES

The result of over 30 years experience in home heating, a Holland Furnace brings you a host of comfort-making and fuel-saving patented features, all of which you cannot get in any other furnace no matter how much you pay for it. Especially noteworthy are the features indicated by Numbers 2, 2-A, 3, 6 and 6-A.

They are as follows:

1 Hood concave on top deflects warm air directly into pipes.

2 Safety valve (PATENTED): opens at 2 lbs. pressure—lets gases escape before they accumulate in dangerous quantities.

2A Patented long fire travel radiator; heat travels all the way round—always evenly heated all over—more heat from every lump of coal.

3 Patented cascade humidifier that really humidifies; allows free circulation around firepot, preventing burned-out castings.

4 Safety guard; coal cannot wedge in draft door to hold it open and make furnace overheat.

5 Draft lid with butterfly valve; deflects incoming air down so it is preheated before going through fuel bed.

6 Cone-shaped grate (PATENTED) rolls the fire to outside—Holds it against casting.

6A Slotted firepot makes fire burn on outside against firepot, causing more heat to pass through for same fuel.

7 Dust-proof casing with interliner retains heat in casing, making for most efficient operation.

8 Air accelerator—new type cold air return boot makes air flow faster and more evenly—saves basement floor space.

9 Direct-indirect damper lets cold air pass straight into flue when feed door opens—keeps smoke out of basement—prevents chilling radiator.

10 Check door automatically closes when feed door is opened.

11 Automatic damper control and door opener. Gives all doors and dampers correct setting when feed door is opened.

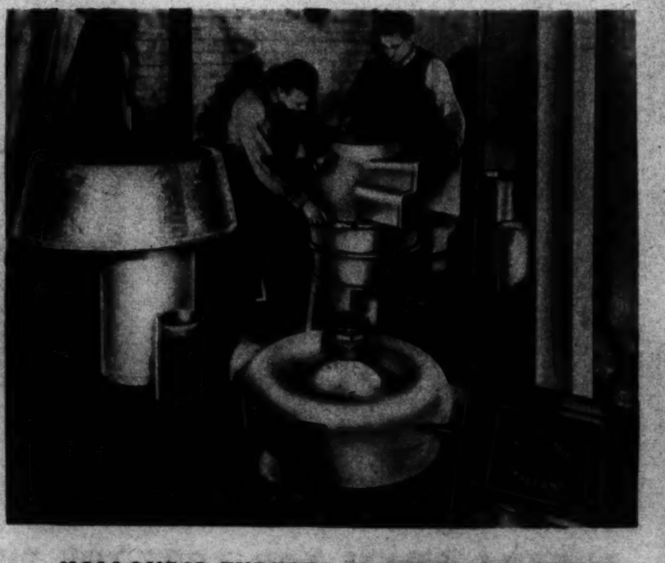
12 Outside upright shaker; no stooping to shake down ashes or dump fire. Permits clinker removal without disturbing fire bed.

These and numerous other invaluable features have put HOLLAND at the very top of the list for efficiency and durability.

AUTOMATIC HEATING
Holland Furnaces are ideal for all types of automatic heating—with coal, oil or gas. Ask about Holland's own special oil burner and automatic coal burner units.

★ ENGINEER ANALYZES EVERY ROOM

To make sure that every room is heated as you want it, each room is individually measured and heat losses figured by a competent engineer employed and specially trained by Holland. Size and location of ducts for both cold and warm air are scientifically determined as well as the size of furnace needed. Then an accurate plan is drawn to guide the installation crew.



★ HOLLAND'S EXPERTS MAKE INSTALLATION

The men who install your Holland Warm Air System are expert mechanics specially trained for the work by Holland engineers. They are our own employees and we assume full responsibility for their work—in fact, give you an iron-clad 5-year Guarantee Bond that your heating plant as installed will provide perfect heat in every room with FREE replacement of parts if necessary at any time within the life of the guarantee.

Why Not Make Sure of PERFECT HEAT IN EVERY ROOM For Your Home Next Winter?

If you have some rooms that are harder to heat than others—if all rooms are hard to heat on colder days—or if grates and firepots burn out frequently, you are losing more than comfort. Such heating difficulties reveal a serious inefficiency that is costing you money. You are burning more coal than you should in a vain effort to force heat where it cannot be made to go, due to faulty design of the heating system. You are paying for a scientifically installed HOLLAND system without enjoying its benefits.

GREATER COMFORT—LOWER COST

If your present furnace is sound and large enough, relatively inexpensive alterations will probably effect a decided improvement. If not, the sooner that inefficient coal-hog is replaced with a correctly designed and installed HOLLAND System the better it will be for your purse and for your whole family's health and comfort.

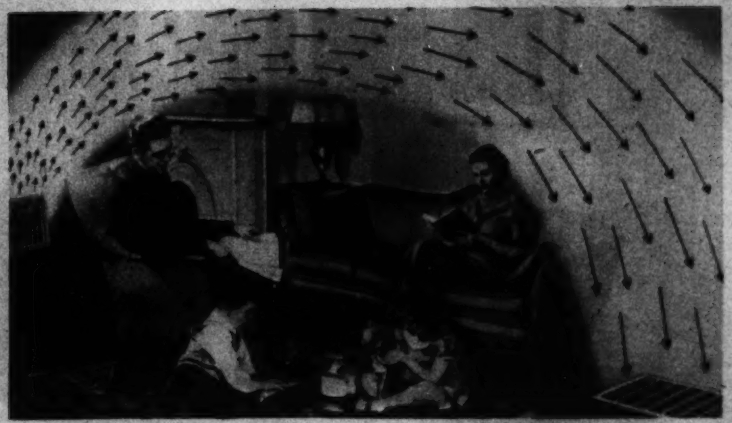
Then you will never again have to endure the discomfort of stuffy, stagnant air in some rooms and excessive chill in others—no more unhealthful, dry, parched air—no more gassy smells in the air you and your family breathe. Instead, you will have just the heat you want in every room—constant circulation of healthful, correctly moistened air—far less furnace tending and a marked shrinkage in heating costs—actual dividends on your investment.

3 YEARS TO PAY

Why not learn the real truth? Call the nearest HOLLAND branch today and ask for the engineer to make an inspection. Without a penny of cost to you, he will show you the exact condition of your furnace and leave to you the decision of what should be done. If you decide on a new furnace, why not ask at once for HOLLAND'S specifications and estimates? It's so easy to own a HOLLAND, too—take up to 3 years to pay if you wish! So, why be content with less than the many benefits HOLLAND alone can give you?

SEE THIS FASCINATING DEMONSTRATION

Don't buy any kind of heating plant until you have seen this unique miniature furnace demonstration. It will show you the amazing advances HOLLAND has developed in warm air heating which makes a HOLLAND Warm Air System easily today's best buy in home heating equipment. You will learn facts about heating you never knew before and will enjoy every second—yet not the slightest obligation and no high-pressure salesmanship.



AIR CONDITIONING AT SLIGHT EXTRA COST

Here's a simple yet amazingly effective unit that makes your HOLLAND Heating System do double duty. IN WINTER forces warm, humidified filtered air to every room—enables furnace to work at lower temperatures, effecting a marked fuel saving. IN SUMMER makes rooms feel remarkably cooler by circulating fresh filtered air to all parts of your home. Can be added at any time to any warm air heating plant. Learn its many advantages and economies when you see the famous HOLLAND demonstration.

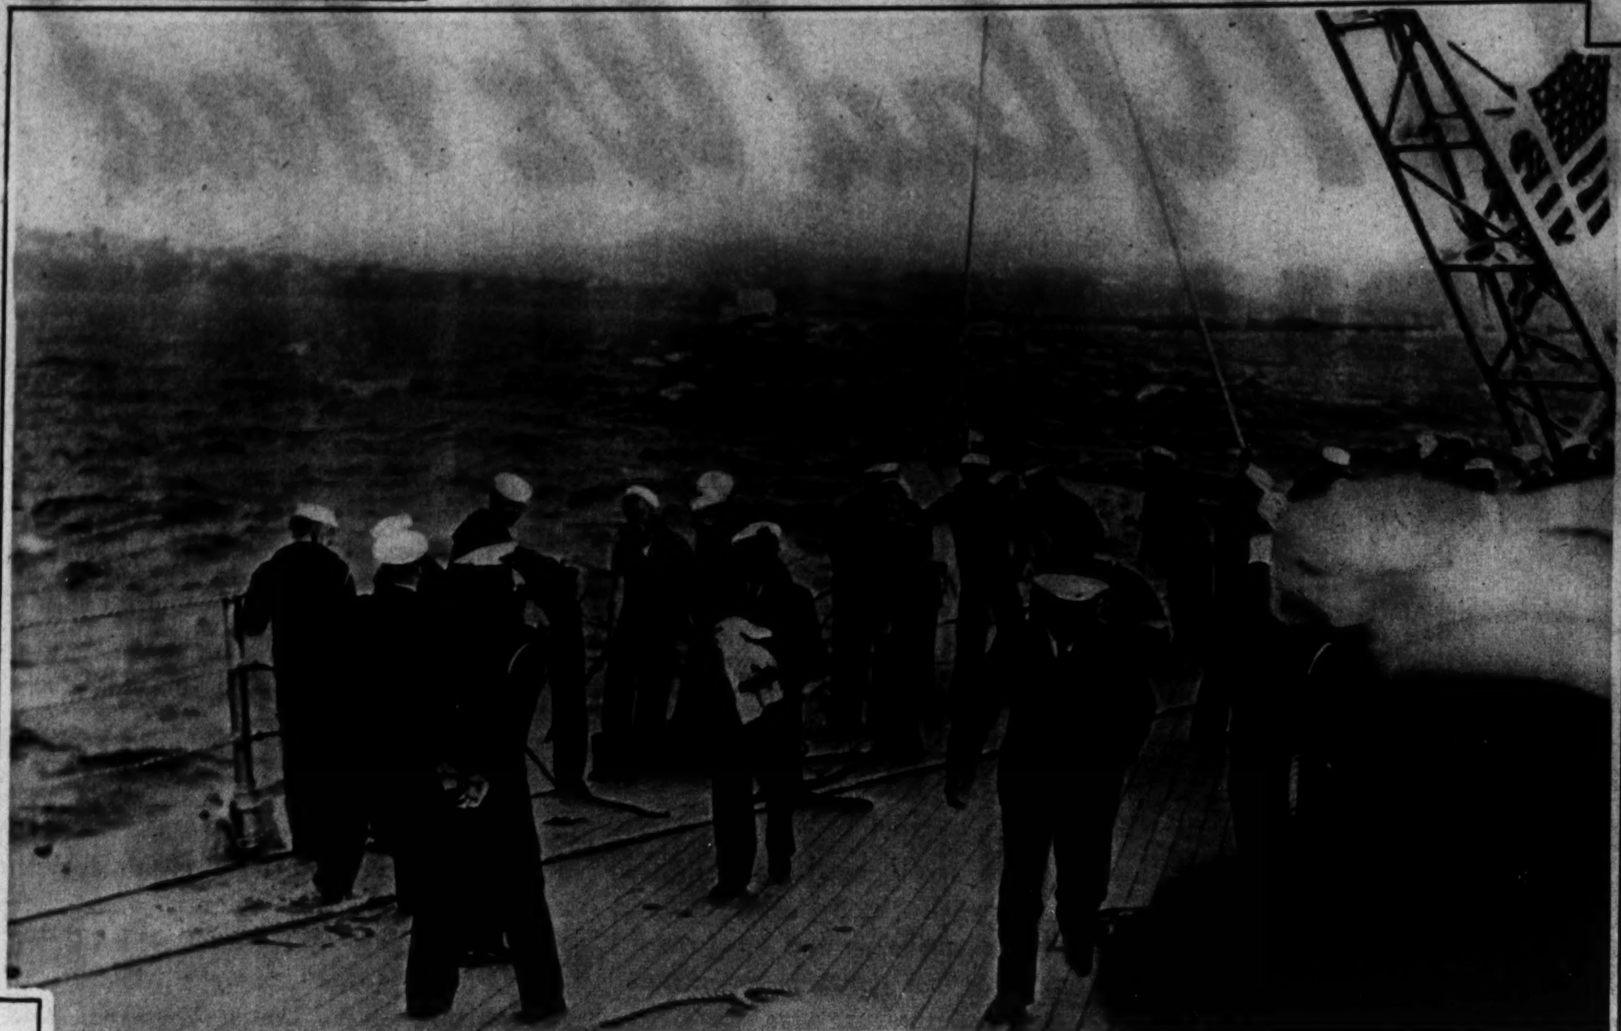
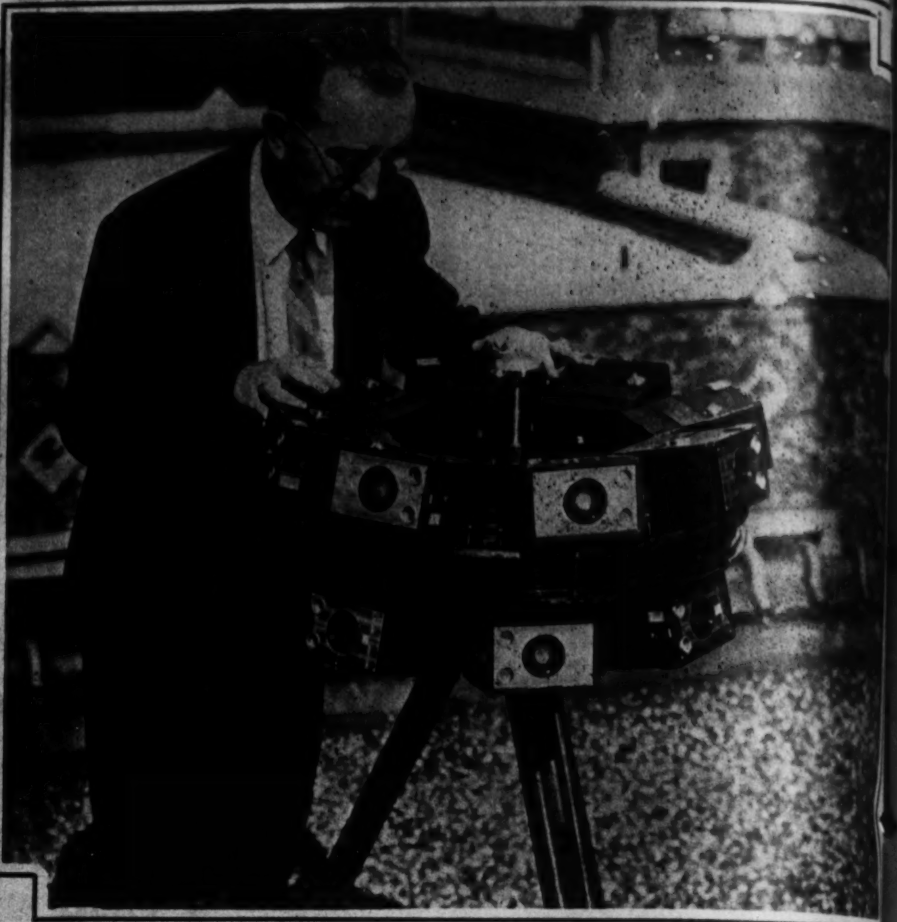
WORLD'S LARGEST INSTALLERS OF HOME HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEMS

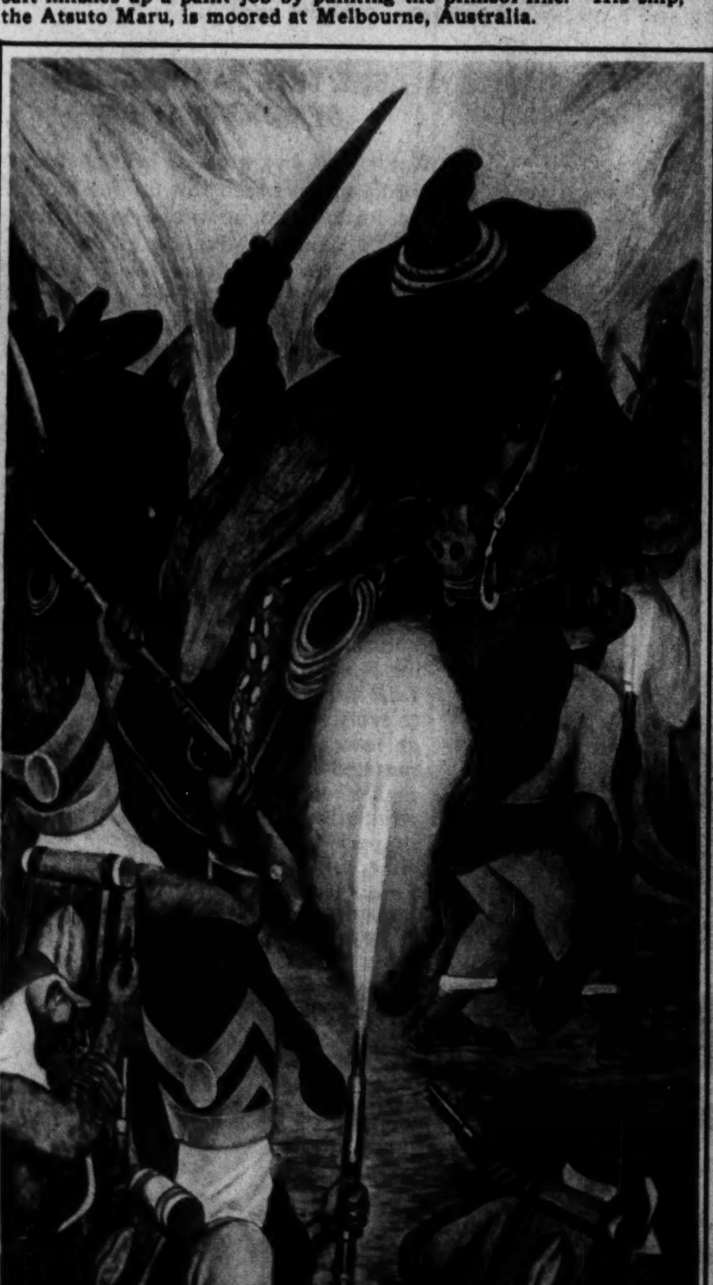


ANOTHER SIDE OF REFUGEE WORK—Officers and crew of the U. S. S. Oklahoma kidded the boatswain with gusto as he took charge of a baby that had just been hoisted aboard in a canvas bag while the battleship was evacuating American refugees at Las Arenas, Spain.



FASTER THAN LIGHTNING—This pinwheel camera designed by Prof. John Albright of Case School of Applied Science, at Cleveland, is believed to be the first capable of photographing the component parts of a streak of lightning. Eight rotary box cameras are mounted on a bicycle wheel; the other three are stationary. The wheel spins at four revolutions per second.

OVER THE SIDE—Seated in a boatswain's chair, this Japanese salt finishes up a paint job by painting the plimsol line. His ship, the Atsuto Maru, is moored at Melbourne, Australia.



RIVERA'S NEWEST MURAL — A panel from the Mexican painter's latest set, recently completed in a Mexico City hotel. It represents Augustin Lorenzo, a sort of Mexican Robin Hood who fought against French invaders.

BOUQUETS FROM THE FANS! "Thanks a million for your grand new chips!" . . . "I've always wanted naptha in soap flakes—now my dream has come true." Every day, unsolicited letters pour in, raving about Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS*—the first and only* naptha chips!

More Bouquets ...by Gilbert Bundy

TWO ARE BETTER than one! Remember that the next time you do a wash and let Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS put two lively helpers on the job. Richer, golden soap AND lots of peppy, dirt-loosening naptha! A team that fairly whisses out dirt!

A CROWN FOR YOU, old pal! "Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS get my wash done in record time" . . . "They get my clothes so gorgeously white" . . . "There's no sneezy dust to make me cough and sneeze." See why women write comments like these — try Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS yourself!

IT'S A THRILL to see how beautiful my undies look since I've been washing them with Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS," writes a pleased user. "No more costly trick soaps for me," says another. Thanks to better soap and gentle naptha, these crinkly, golden curls are simply perfect for every washing job.

"I KISS YOUR HAND, MADAME!" Make your husband admire your hands — keep them soft and smooth by washing dishes, too, with Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS. They contain a real beauty ingredient. Soothing glycerine—the basis of many costly hand-lotions.

FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS

THEY'LL AMAZE YOU, TOO! TRY THEM TODAY!
FIRST AND ONLY CHIPS TO HOLD NAPTHA!

IF YOU haven't tried Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS yet—you're certainly missing something wonderful!

The peppiest, fastest-working chips ever invented. The first and only chips to bring you richer, golden soap teamed with gentle, dirt-loosening naptha!

Never have you seen anything like these new chips. They're CURLS. Crinkly, delicate curls that dissolve completely. You get oceans of suds in a jiffy. And none of that bothersome dust to hurt your nose.

The box has a grand new convenience, too. A handy pouring-spout lets you pour out just what you need. No untidy ragged corners—no waste—no spilled chips messing up the floor.

Don't delay—don't let your neighbors beat you to this grand new discovery! Put Fels-Naptha Soap CHIPS on your grocery list right now!

They're made by the makers of the famous golden bar, Fels-Naptha Soap—the soap that banishes "tattle-tale gray!"

"Patch" tests on the skins of hundreds of women prove it's more than 20% milder than manyso-called "beauty soaps" and "baby soaps." That same ingredient, carried deep into your pores, deodorizes, stops "B.O." (body odor). The clean scent rinses away.

OH, HOW PRETTY! IT'S A TOY WASHING MACHINE. WE HAVE A BIG ONE AT OUR HOUSE SO HAVE WE
WHAT ARE YOU DOING WITH THAT, MOLLY?
I'M CUTTING UP SOAP TO PUT IN MY WASHER THE WAY MOTHER DOES
MY MOTHER NEVER DOES THAT. I HEARD THE MAN WHO SOLD MY MOTHER THE WASHER SAY, "USE RINSO FOR SNOWY CLOTHES"
LATER—at Molly's house
—AND RUTHIE SAID HER MOTHER USES RINSO IN HER WASHING MACHINE BECAUSE A MAN TOLD HER TO HMMM. MAYBE THAT'S WHY HER MOTHER'S CLOTHES ARE ALWAYS SO MUCH WHITER AND BRIGHTER THAN MINE. I MUST TRY RINSO
NEXT WASHDAY
LOOK, MOTHER. SEE HOW WHITE DOLLY'S DRESS IS
YES, DARLING — I'M SO GLAD WE'RE USING RINSO NOW! IT GIVES THE THICKEST SUDS I EVER SAW AND MY WASH IS 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER
AND IF YOU HAVE NO WASHER— READ HOW RINSO SAVES HOURS OF HARD SCRUBBING
Rinso THE GRANULATED SOAP

RINSO gives richer, livelier, longer-lasting suds than ordinary soaps —even in hardest water. You can soak your clothes in Rinso suds for 10 minutes, an hour, overnight—or as long as you wish. But you can be sure that no matter how long you soak your wash the white clothes will come 4 or 5 shades whiter and the colors will come bright—with absolute safety. Clothes last 2 or 3 times longer. Rinso is recommended by makers of 33 washers. Grand for dishes.

WHAT'S THE IDEA, CHET? TRYING TO GROW A BEARD?
NO, BUT TO ME SHAVING IS LIKE PULLING TEETH. MY SKIN IS SO SENSITIVE
GET WISE, BIG BOY! TRY LIFEBUOY SHAVING CREAM. WITH ITS MILD, EXTRA-MOIST LATHER YOU'LL NEVER FEEL YOUR WHISKERS COMING OFF!
BOY, IS THIS LATHER MILD AND SOOTHING! "SMOOTH-AS-SILK" SHAVES FOR ME FROM NOW ON 120 TO 150 SHAVES IN THE BIG RED TUBE

LIFEBUOY lather, by actual test, holds 52% more moisture, on an average, than ordinary lathers. That's why it stays wet half again as long—softens the beard more thoroughly—makes it easier to shave. Then, too, Lifebuoy is far milder than other leading shaving soaps—kinder, more soothing to tender skin. Try it—get the big red tube at your druggist's today—feel the difference in your shaves.

PROFESSOR KINDLY HELPS SID OVER A TOUGH SPOT
GET OUT OF MY WAY!!
WHAT'S EATING YOU, SONNY?
BOO-HOO! I'M GOING TO TELL YOUR MOTHER ON YOU, SIDNEY WARD.
TELL HER! I DON'T CARE.
MRS. WARD: SID THREW HIS SCHOOL BOOKS AT ME. BOO-HOO!
THAT BOY! HE'S BEEN GETTING OUT OF HAND EVER SINCE SCHOOL STARTED.
WELL, YOU SEE, HE'S HAD AN OUTDOOR LIFE ALL SUMMER. NOW HE'S CONFINED INDOORS MORE. NATURALLY, HIS SYSTEM ISN'T QUITE ADJUSTED TO THE SUDDEN CHANGE.
I GUESS HE NEEDS A GOOD DOSE OF LAXATIVE.
SID! YOU'LL COME HOME RIGHT AWAY AND TAKE YOUR LAXATIVE.
I WON'T TAKE THAT AWFUL STUFF.
YOU'LL TAKE IT — OR I WON'T TAKE YOU TO SEE THAT NEW COWBOY MOVIE.
I DON'T CARE. THAT DARN MEDICINE MAKES ME SICK.
YOU KNOW, PROFESSOR— I ACTUALLY HAVE TO FORCE A LAXATIVE DOWN HIS THROAT.
FORCING! UM-M-M-M THAT'S BAD. DOCTORS SAY FORCING A CHILD TO TAKE A LAXATIVE HE HATES CAN UPSET HIS ENTIRE NERVOUS SYSTEM!
IF I WERE YOU I'D TRY FLETCHER'S CASTORIA. DOCTORS RECOMMEND IT FOR CHILDREN. IT'S SAFE- WON'T CAUSE GRIPING PAINS. AND SID WILL LOVE ITS TASTE.
SOUNDS IMPOSSIBLE- BUT I'LL TRY A BOTTLE.
LATER
GEE PROFESSOR- I'M SURE GLAD YOU TOLD MOTHER ABOUT THAT FLETCHER'S CASTORIA. IT SURE TASTES GOOD.
YOU'RE RIGHT, SID, EVERY KID THINKS IT'S A TREAT.

CASTORIA

DOCTORS RECOMMEND IT

Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for children from babyhood to 11 years—and not for adults. Contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. Won't gripe!

MOTHERS

1. Doctors say a bad-tasting laxative can upset a child's entire system.
2. Doctors say an "adult" laxative can be too harsh for a child's sensitive system.
3. Millions of mothers say Fletcher's Castoria is the safe laxative for children. It's gentle—yet thorough. And pleasant-tasting.
4. Buy the Family Size Bottle—and save money. The signature Chas. H. Fletcher appears on every carton.

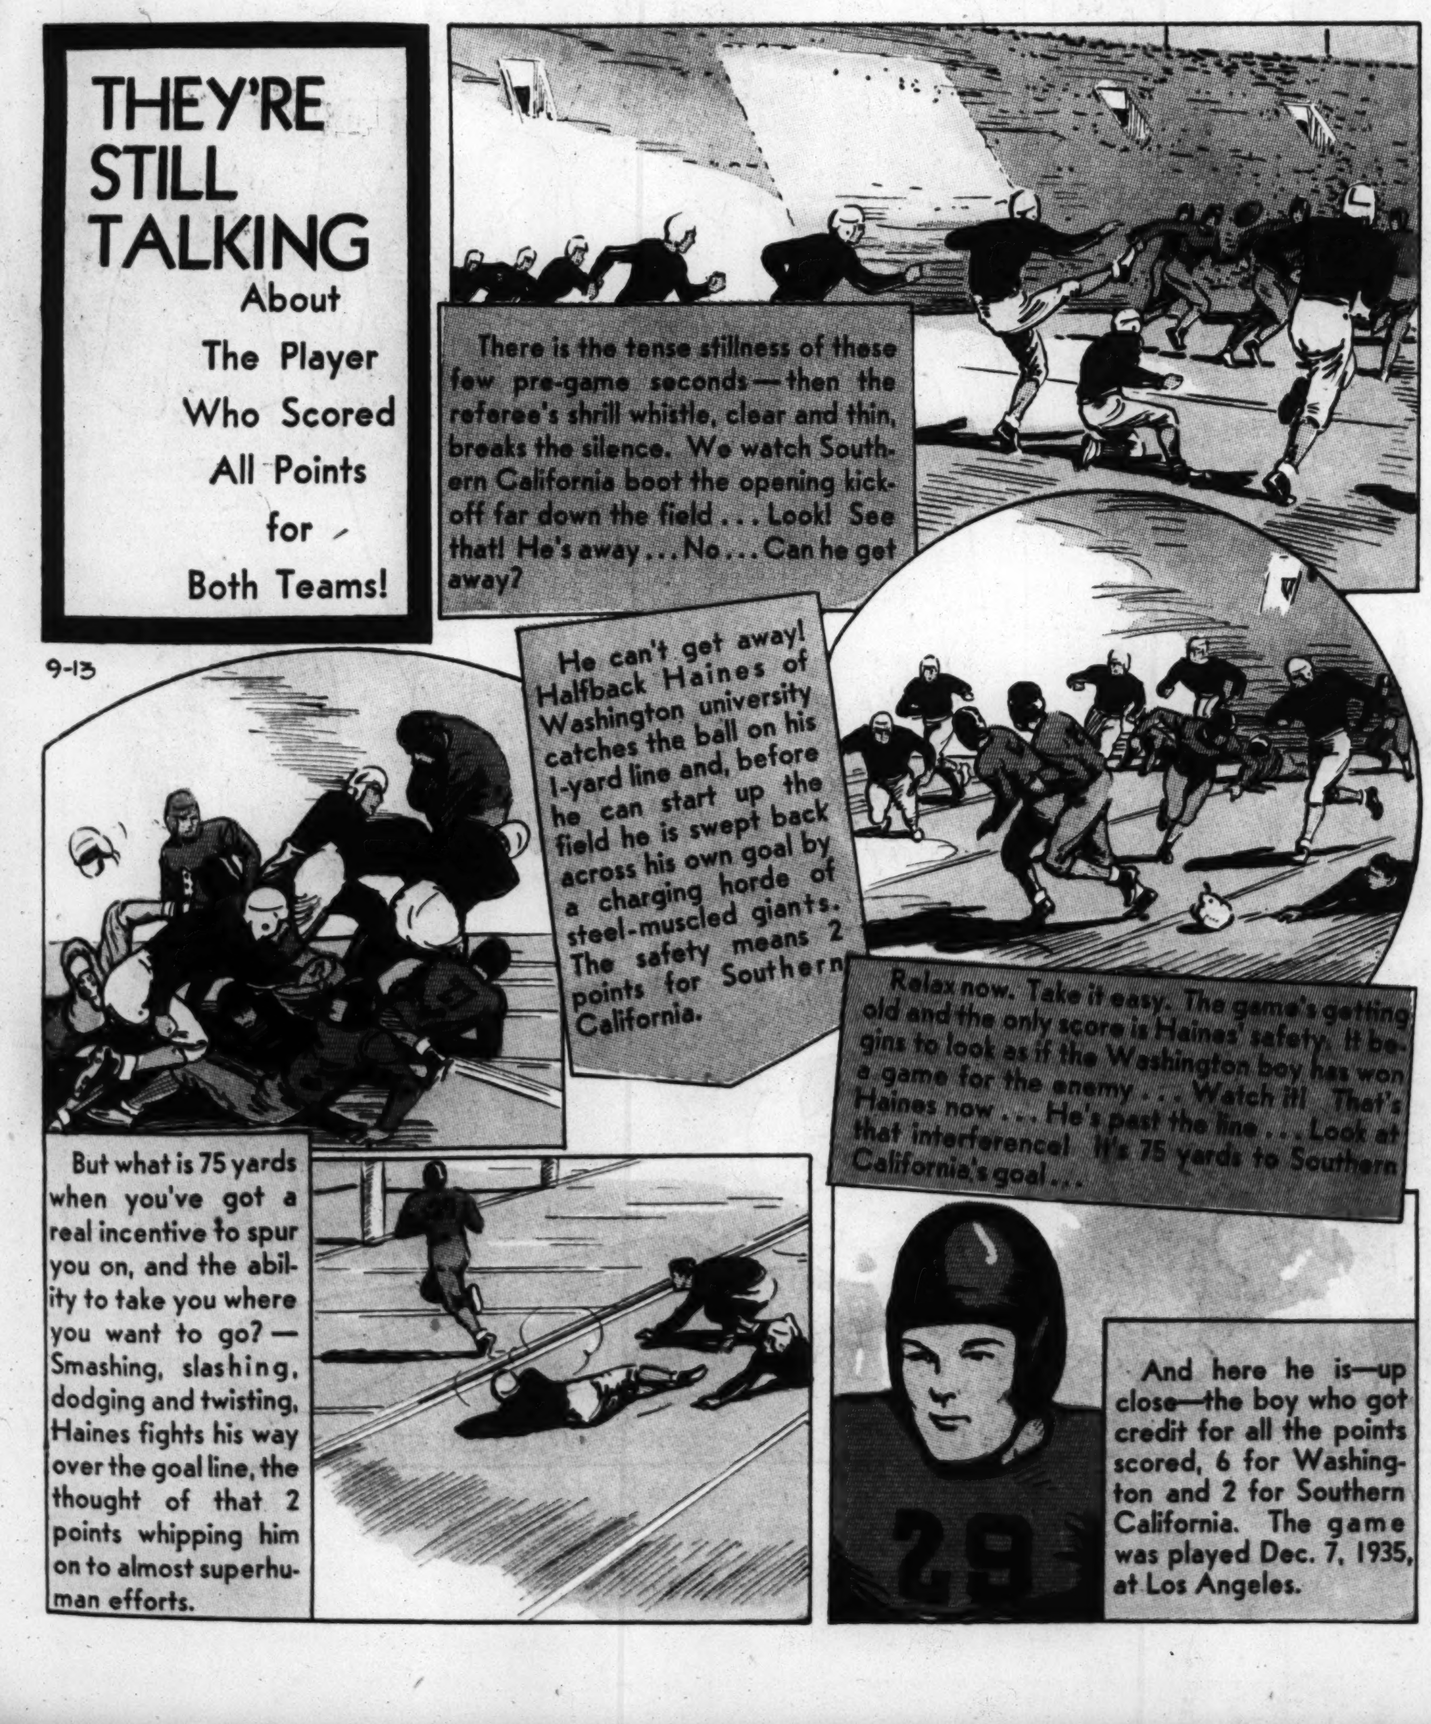
NED BRANT By BOB ZUPPKE
DRAWN BY B. W. DEPEW
9-13
BRANT, THE FIRST TIME I GET YOU UNDER A PILE OF PLAYERS, YOU'LL THINK A FACTORY FELL ON YOU — DON'T SAY I DIDN'T WARN YOU!
LISTEN, BUD — WHY WAIT THAT LONG?
WHY NOT GO OVER HERE UNDER THE STANDS AND FIGHT IT OUT RIGHT NOW?
SWELL! I'VE BEEN WAITING A LONG TIME FOR YOU TO SAY THAT!
OH OH — I THOUGHT THIS WAS COMING — THOSE TWO DIDN'T GO IN THERE TO PLAY DROP-THE-HANDKERCHIEF!
GET THE STUFF AND BRING IT TO THE BENCH!
AT THE GIRLS' DORMITORY, COACH?
B. W. DEPEW
NOW, GET THIS, YOU TWO! YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR FOOTBALL PRACTICE TO START SO YOU'D HAVE SOME EXCUSE FOR BRUISING EACH OTHER —
I INSIST ON TEAMWORK AND THERE'S NO PLACE ON MY TEAMS FOR FELLOWS WHO BRING THEIR PERSONAL GRUDGES TO THE FOOTBALL FIELD!
TO PRO ROO
Copyright, Register and Tribune Syndicate. Great Britain Rights Reserved.
SO WHILE YOU'RE ON THE BENCH THINKING IT OVER, I'LL HAVE YOU DO SOMETHING MORE CONSTRUCTIVE THAN TO KILL EACH OTHER!
BUD, YOU CAN KNIT ME A SWEATER FOR THE CHILLY NOVEMBER DAYS, AND YOU, NED, CAN EMBROIDER SOMETHING CUTE AND FANCY!
YOU SEE, BUD, WE'VE GOT TO PRETEND WE'RE FRIENDS, ANYWAY
ALL RIGHT — BUT ONLY ON THE FOOTBALL FIELD!
WE'RE READY TO REPORT, COACH
THAT'S FINE — REPORT TO THE FRESHMAN COACH, SHOTGUN SHELDON!
BUT DON'T EXPECT ME TO KISS YOUR HAND IF YOU TRY STIFFARMING ME!
BROTHER, IF I START STIFFARMING YOU, THE HEEL OF MY HAND WILL DO THE KISSING!

THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About The Player Who Scored All Points for Both Teams!



There is the tense stillness of these few pre-game seconds—then the referee's shrill whistle, clear and thin, breaks the silence. We watch Southern California boot the opening kick-off far down the field . . . Look! See that! He's away . . . No . . . Can he get away?

He can't get away! Halfback Haines of Washington university catches the ball on his 1-yard line and, before he can start up the field he is swept back across his own goal by a charging horde of steel-muscled giants. The safety means 2 points for Southern California.

Relax now. Take it easy. The game's getting old and the only score is Haines' safety. It begins to look as if the Washington boy has won a game for the enemy . . . Watch it! That's Haines now . . . He's past the line . . . Look at that interference! It's 75 yards to Southern California's goal . . .

But what is 75 yards when you've got a real incentive to spur you on, and the ability to take you where you want to go?—Smashing, slashing, dodging and twisting, Haines fights his way over the goal line, the thought of that 2 points whipping him on to almost superhuman efforts.

And here he is—up close—the boy who got credit for all the points scored, 6 for Washington and 2 for Southern California. The game was played Dec. 7, 1935, at Los Angeles.

Football . . . . . By NED BRANT

How To Understand It

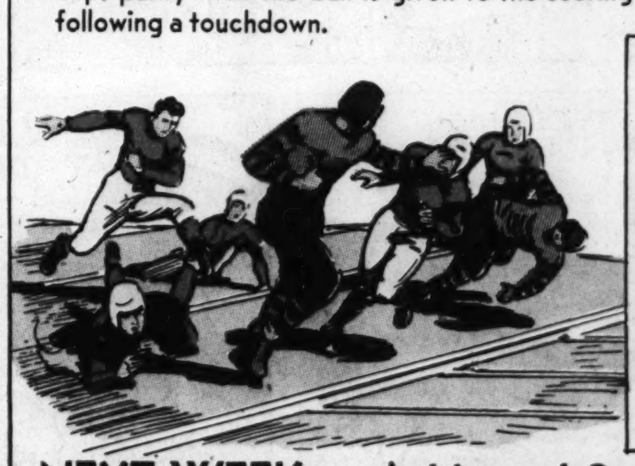
The Four Methods of Scoring

1. BY TOUCHDOWN. The touchdown, counting six points, made by carrying the ball across the opponent's goal line or forward passing it across to an eligible receiver.

2 BY SAFETY. The safety, counting two points, which occurs when a player is downed with the ball behind his own goal line. Points are credited to team not in possession of ball.

3. BY FIELD GOAL. The field goal, counting three points, made by place kicking or dropkicking the ball over the crossbar of the goal posts between the uprights. Kick may be made from any point on the field from which the kicker is capable of executing it.

4. BY POINT AFTER TOUCHDOWN. The try for point after touchdown, counting one point, consists of a line play, forward pass or kick (except punt) when the ball is given to the scoring team on the 2½-yard line following a touchdown.



Player with ball has just scored a touchdown by negotiating distance to opponents goal without being tackled. Though a ball carrier need not be down, the referee halts the play when forward progress of the ball ceases.

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES SPOIL YOUR CHANCES FOR FUN

PIMPLES can be real joy-killers to any boy or girl. Yet many young people have skin eruptions after the start of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or even longer.

During this time, important glands develop and final growth takes place. Disturbances occur throughout the entire body. The skin gets oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Pimples result.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast is a great help in correcting adolescent pimples. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then, the pimples go away.

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily, one cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water until your skin is entirely smooth and clear again. Start today!

Dentists warn: Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

Read How Colgate Dental Cream Protects You!

WHY let bad breath interfere with success—romance—happiness? It's so simple to be safe when you realize that the most common cause of bad breath is improperly cleaned teeth!

Dental authorities point out that decaying food deposits, lodged in the hidden crevices between the teeth, are by far the most common source of unpleasant mouth odors—of dull, dingy teeth—and of much tooth decay.

Ordinary cleaning methods, which merely polish exposed surfaces, fail to remove these deposits. Use Colgate Dental Cream. It has a special penetrating foam that gets into every tiny crevice—emulsifies and washes away the food and acid deposits that cause bad breath.

And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens the enamel—makes your teeth sparkle.

So brush your teeth, gums and tongue at least twice daily with Colgate Dental Cream and have cleaner, brighter teeth and a sweeter, purer breath! If not entirely satisfied after using one tube, send the empty tube to COLGATE, Jersey City, N. J. We will refund TWICE what you paid.
